to me

Good afternoon,

This is to confirm that a location that sell only diabetic and urological supplies does not need to obtain a home medical equipment provider license according to rule 59A-25.002(2), Florida Administrative Code (F.A.C.).

> Rule 59A-25.002(2) of the Florida Administrative Code states:
> (2) Home medical equipment locations that do not require a license: Diabetic monitors and disposable supplies, e.g., diabetic, ostomy, urological and wound care supplies have been identified as equipment and supplies that do not require services as defined in Section 400.925(9), F.S.; therefore, locations that supply these items only will not require a HME license.

While the Agency for Health Care Administration does not issue certificates/letters of exemption from Home Medical Equipment licensure; all Agency rules can be found in the Florida Administrative Code & Florida Administrative Register (https://www.flrules.org/).

Best regards,

Hello Felicia,

If Denali Therapeutics Inc. is not involved in any manufacturing processes as defined by CA HSC – Sherman Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Laws, Section 109970, then licensure is not required. If the firm does not partake in the designing, development, research, manufacturing, repackaging, or relabeling of any drug products, licensure is not required.

Per CA HSC – Sherman Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Laws, "manufacture" is defined as the preparation, compounding, propagation, processing, or fabrication of any food, drug, device, or cosmetic. Specification development falls under propagation and fabrication of devices and is considered a manufacturer. The term "manufacture" includes repackaging or otherwise changing the container, wrapper, or labeling of any food, drug, device, or cosmetic in furtherance of the distribution of the food, drug, device, or cosmetic. The term "manufacture" does not include repackaging from a bulk container by a retailer at the time of sale to its ultimate consumer.

Unfortunately, the Branch does not provide exemption letters. The reason is that firms cannot be "exempt" from regulations that are not applicable to their operations; based on the information, the business is not subjected to CA HSC – Sherman Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Laws.

Thank you,
FDB MedDevice

Hello,

To clarify, my client, Denali Therapeutics Inc., is a virtual manufacturer.

Description of Operations

Denali Therapeutics Inc. (Denali) is a virtual manufacturer selling prescription drugs to other wholesalers, hospitals, pharmacies and practitioners. As a virtual manufacturer, Denali does not manufacture, maintain or warehouse any non-controlled or controlled substances at its South San Francisco facility.

Is this client required to obtain a license in California. If not, would you provide a letter of exemption?

Thanks

Hello Felicia,

Thank you for contacting the California Department of Public Health – Food and Drug Branch about your inquiry. The Branch licenses medical device and drug manufacturers operating in California.

Per the Sherman Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Law Health and Safety Code, 109970, "manufacture" is defined as the preparation, compounding, propagation, processing, or fabrication of any food, drug, device, or cosmetic. Specification development falls under propagation and fabrication of devices and is considered a manufacturer. The term "manufacture" includes repackaging or otherwise changing the container, wrapper, or labeling of any food, drug, device, or cosmetic in furtherance of the distribution of the food, drug, device, or cosmetic. The term "manufacture" does not include repackaging from a bulk container by a retailer at the time of sale to its ultimate consumer.

Specification development falls under propagation and fabrication of devices and is considered a manufacturer. Specification developers are involved in manufacturing because they are the owner of the device. They are involved in Design Controls, Purchasing Controls, Document Controls, Corrective and Preventive Actions, Complaint Handling and more. Those are elements of the Quality System, and all manufacturers must establish a Quality System.

If the virtual supplier is not further fabricating the product in California, nor performs activities that fall under the "manufacture" definition per Sherman, licensure is not required.

Thank you,
FDB MedDevice

Hello,

I was told that CA law does not reference virtual suppliers. Therefore, CA does not license virtual suppliers and it is not within your law.

Is this still true information?

Thanks

ITEM 1. BUSINESS

Overview and Strategy

Our purpose is to bring the power of biotherapeutics to the whole body, including the brain, by discovering, developing, and delivering medicines for people living with serious diseases.

Historically, the blood-brain barrier has been a major challenge to the development of medicines for diseases of the central nervous system. While the blood-brain barrier protects the brain and is essential for our survival, it also prevents the delivery of medicines to the brain in sufficient quantities to have therapeutic effect. We have invented, developed, and validated a proprietary technology, called the TransportVehicle™ ("TV"), to address the blood-brain barrier challenge and enable a new class of barrier-crossing therapeutics. The TV has a modular design enabling delivery of large molecules, i.e., enzymes, oligonucleotides, and antibodies, to all tissues of the body, including the brain, by crossing the blood-brain barrier after systemic administration. Over the last few decades, large molecule biotherapeutics have enabled medical breakthroughs in treating a wide array of serious diseases, but with very limited success in central nervous system diseases. Now, with the invention and validation of our TV technology, we are leading the field in delivering on the potential of biotherapeutics to transform the lives of individuals with neurodegenerative diseases, lysosomal storage disorders, and other serious diseases.

We are building a broad portfolio of therapeutic candidates by investing in our TV franchises, i.e., Enzyme TV ("ETV"), Oligonucleotide TV ("OTV"), and Antibody TV ("ATV"), to advance programs for rare diseases, such as lysosomal storage diseases, and common diseases, such as Alzheimer's disease and Parkinson's disease. Our most advanced TV-enabled program is tividenofusp alfa (DNL310, ETV:IDS) for the potential treatment of mucopolysaccharidosis II ("MPS II", or Hunter syndrome). The biologics license application ("BLA") for tividenofusp alfa is under priority review for accelerated approval by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration ("FDA"), and we have established commercial readiness in anticipation of the Prescription Drug User Fee Act (PDUFA) target action date of April 5, 2026. Our TV-enabled clinical development portfolio also includes DNL126 (ETV:SGSH) for mucopolysaccharidosis IIIA ("MPS IIIA", or Sanfilippo syndrome type A), DNL593 (PTV:PGRN) for frontotemporal dementia-granulin ("FTD-GRN"), DNL628 (OTV:MAPT) for Alzheimer's disease, and DNL952 (ETV:GAA) for Pompe disease. We believe the combination of a clinically-validated delivery platform and a maturing therapeutic portfolio will position us for long-term success in our goal to deliver barrier-crossing, targeted, and effective medicines.

Key elements of our strategy include:

1) Discover: Advance a new class of barrier-crossing therapeutics by leveraging our TV platforms and deep expertise in blood-brain barrier biology to enhance the delivery of biotherapeutics to the brain and throughout the body.

2) Develop: Accelerate and expand a broad portfolio of TV-based product candidates to fully unlock the potential of barrier-crossing therapeutics, applying patient-informed development and driving biomarker-guided regulatory approvals.

3) Deliver: Launch initial products targeting rare lysosomal storage diseases as a strategic foundation for expansion into common neurodegenerative conditions and other serious diseases, while building integrated capabilities for long-term growth and profitability.

Our "D3X3" strategy reflects our next phase of execution and is anchored in our "Discover, Develop, Deliver" (D3) framework, with three-year objectives (X3) across our portfolio, as we transition from platform validation to delivery and scalable growth. Our goals are to (i) deliver two growing commercial brands, tividenofusp alfa (ETV:IDS) for Hunter syndrome and DNL126 (ETV:SGSH) for Sanfilippo syndrome type A, establishing the foundation for a durable rare disease franchise; (ii) achieve five clinical proof-of-concept readouts across our portfolio, including programs in Alzheimer's disease (ATV:Abeta and OTV:MAPT), FTD-GRN (PTV:PGRN), Pompe disease (ETV:GAA), and Parkinson's disease (LRRK2 inhibitor); and (iii) advance four to six additional TV-enabled programs into the clinic (Figure 1). We believe disciplined and efficient execution against these objectives will demonstrate the breadth and scalability of our TV platform, position us to deliver sustainable long-term growth, and advance our mission to unlock the full potential of biotherapeutics with the goal of transforming the lives of people living with serious diseases.

Figure 1: Denali's D3X3 Three-Year Strategic Framework. Illustration of Denali's evolution over time in the context of our Discover, Develop, Deliver (D3) foundation and three-year (D3X3) objectives (2026 - 2028) to deliver two growing brands, achieve five clinical proof-of-concept readouts, and advance four to six new clinical programs as we transition from platform validation to commercial delivery and scalable growth.

We expect our first potential product launches will be with tividenofusp alfa for MPS II followed by DNL126 for MPS IIIA. MPS II and MPS IIIA belong to a group of lysosomal storage diseases, which are caused by genetic mutations that lead to single-enzyme deficiencies. Lysosomal storage diseases afflict more than 30,000 individuals worldwide. About two-thirds of these diseases affect the central nervous system; however, the current standard treatment, enzyme replacement therapy, does not address central nervous system manifestations, even for the lysosomal storage diseases where enzyme replacement therapy is available. Our ETV therapeutics are designed as next-generation enzyme replacement therapies to address both central nervous system and somatic manifestations of lysosomal storage diseases. Our BLA submission for tividenofusp alfa under the accelerated approval pathway is based on alignment with the FDA that cerebrospinal fluid ("CSF") heparan sulfate may be used as a surrogate biomarker for MPS II. Likewise, given that CSF heparan sulfate is also the primary substrate in MPS IIIA, we have aligned with the FDA on an accelerated approval path for DNL126. Together, we expect these two programs to have a combined market opportunity of over $1 billion and to be the foundation of a broad commercial franchise of ETV-enabled enzyme replacement therapies with a collective market potential of over $5 billion.

We have established commercial readiness for tividenofusp alfa including continued dialogue with advocacy groups, prescribers and payers, and building a suite of patient support services and capabilities to enable access. We have established a right-sized team in commercial and medical affairs to support tividenofusp alfa and additional ETV launches, including DNL126 (ETV:SGSH) for MPS IIIA. We include PTV:PGRN as one of our ETV franchise programs as it has a similar mechanism of action in increasing levels of deficient or missing protein to improve lysosomal function. We have an active collaboration with Takeda Pharmaceutical Company Limited ("Takeda") for the development and commercialization of TAK-594/DNL593 (PTV:PGRN) for FTD-GRN. We are initiating clinical development with DNL952 (ETV:GAA) for late-onset Pompe disease, expanding the reach of our TV platform into muscle disease. We intend to commercialize these product candidates, if approved, in key markets and/or leverage partnerships or distributors to ensure optimal access for patients. Launching in rare indications first gives us the opportunity to build and establish our own commercial organization so that we are poised for success in larger indications over time.

In parallel, we are advancing TV-enabled programs for common neurodegenerative diseases, such as Alzheimer's disease and Parkinson's disease, which afflict over 40 million individuals worldwide and have a market potential of over $5 billion per indication. We have advanced DNL628 (OTV:MAPT) targeting tau into a Phase 1b clinical study for Alzheimer's disease, and we plan to submit a regulatory application in the first half of 2026 to begin clinical testing of DNL921 (ATV:Abeta) targeting amyloid plaques. Amyloid plaques and tau tangles are pathological hallmarks of Alzheimer's disease. We are targeting both of these pathologies with our ATV and OTV platforms, respectively, aiming to deliver the next generation of anti-amyloid therapeutics and a potential first-in-class anti-tau therapeutic. Preclinical studies with ATV:Abeta have demonstrated potential for better efficacy and safety compared to a standard antibody, with superior plaque reduction and very low rates of amyloid related imaging abnormalities ("ARIA"). Likewise, preclinical studies with OTV:MAPT have demonstrated robust and sustained reductions of tau protein. For late-stage development and commercialization in common indications, such as Alzheimer's disease, we may plan to initially leverage strategic collaborations that contribute existing global infrastructure.

In addition to our development programs for neurodegenerative and lysosomal storage diseases, we have a robust discovery effort to further expand our portfolio and capture the full potential of our TV platform to enhance delivery of biotherapeutics to all tissues in the body. We are also pursuing opportunities of unmet need in other disease areas including oncology. For example, we have engineered a bispecific ATV:HER2 antibody and have demonstrated preclinically improved peripheral anti-tumor activity as well as enhanced brain uptake of the bispecific ATV:HER2 as compared to a non-ATV HER2 antibody. The data support the potential for ATV:HER2 to treat HER2-positive peripheral tumors and brain metastases and further validate the potential for TV applications in oncology.

Our therapeutic portfolio also includes BIIB122/DNL151 (LRRK2 inhibitor) for Parkinson's disease, a small molecule drug candidate that does not use the TV platform but is engineered with optimized chemical and physical properties to cross the blood-brain barrier. Denali has an active collaboration with Biogen Inc.'s subsidiaries, Biogen MA Inc. ("BIMA") and Biogen International GmbH ("BIG") (BIMA and BIG, collectively, "Biogen") for the development and commercialization of BIIB122/DNL151. Biogen is conducting the global Phase 2b LUMA study, which is evaluating the ability of BIIB122 to slow disease progression as compared to placebo in participants with early-stage Parkinson's disease. A total of 650 participants were enrolled in LUMA and data are expected in mid-2026. In addition, Denali is conducting the complementary Phase 2a BEACON study in LRRK2-associated Parkinson's disease with the aim to generate biomarker and safety data to inform how LRRK2 inhibition may impact this disease.

In March 2025, we officially opened our clinical biomanufacturing facility in Salt Lake City, Utah, expanding our U.S. manufacturing capabilities and strengthening supply chain control and operational efficiency. We have begun manufacturing drug supply for clinical trials to support expansion of our TV-enabled therapeutic portfolio. We employ standard antibody manufacturing processes, including Chinese hamster ovary cell culture and Protein A affinity purification, which are compatible with existing global manufacturing infrastructure and enable efficient scale-up. We expect to continue a hybrid manufacturing strategy, utilizing both internal capabilities and external contract manufacturers for additional capacity, sterile fill-finish, and oligonucleotide synthesis, as appropriate, to support our pipeline and future commercial needs.

Collaborations and partnering are central components of our strategy to build, develop, and commercialize our portfolio of product candidates. We have numerous arrangements with biopharmaceutical companies, technology companies, academic institutions, foundations, and patient-focused data companies. Notable active arrangements include those with Biogen and Takeda as described above and Genzyme Corporation, a wholly owned subsidiary of Sanofi S.A. ("Sanofi"), for the development and commercialization of SAR443122/DNL758 (peripherally restricted small molecule RIPK1 inhibitor) in ulcerative colitis. We hold significant development and commercialization rights to all of our central nervous system programs, including the programs which are subject to our collaboration agreements with Biogen and Takeda, where we share responsibility for clinical development and share commercialization rights in the United States and China. Our costs of developing programs associated with these collaborations are largely covered through upfront payments, expected incoming milestone and royalty payments, and cost sharing. We may seek additional strategic partnering opportunities as we strive to capture the full value of our portfolio and platforms.

We are guided by the core Denali Values of trust, growth, grit and unity. Our working culture seeks to develop quality leaders, emphasize continuous growth, and promote problem-solving and invention. We strive to manage our operations in a way that is sustainable and reduces our impact on the environment, including through a Green Alternative program, which provides researchers with information on suitable alternative chemicals that have a lower environmental impact for common solvents. Additionally, several waste streams have been segregated on-site for proper disposal or recycling, such as containers, food waste, plastics, styrofoam, and glass chemical containers, to maximize recycling and composting. We also maintain an ongoing commitment to corporate governance principles, with oversight of ESG matters by Denali's Board of Directors, and strong performance orientation in our compensation program.

Our TransportVehicle™ Platform

Historically, the blood-brain barrier has been a major challenge to the development of medicines for diseases of the central nervous system. As a tightly knit layer of endothelial cells lining the vasculature of the brain, the blood-brain barrier protects the brain from threats such as harmful substances and infections by closely regulating transport of molecules from the blood into and out of the brain. While the blood-brain barrier is essential for our survival, it also prevents the delivery of medicines to the brain in sufficient quantities to have therapeutic effect. We have pioneered and are developing a new class of biotherapeutics to directly address the blood-brain barrier challenge.

We invented, developed, and continue to optimize a proprietary technology, called the TransportVehicle™ ("TV"), to deliver our large molecule biotherapeutic candidates to the brain after systemic administration. Our research has shown that the TV platform enables efficient delivery of biotherapeutics throughout the body, including the brain and other tissues that are traditionally difficult to reach. By engaging endogenous receptor-mediated transport pathways, such as the transferrin receptor ("TfR"), the TV enhances distribution beyond the vasculature, supporting uptake in the central nervous system as well as peripheral tissues such as muscle, bone, and other organs. This whole-body delivery capability allows us to address diseases with both central and systemic manifestations using a single therapeutic approach. Our TV technology is modular and enables brain delivery of several classes of biotherapeutics including enzymes, oligonucleotides, antibodies, and other proteins (Figure 2).

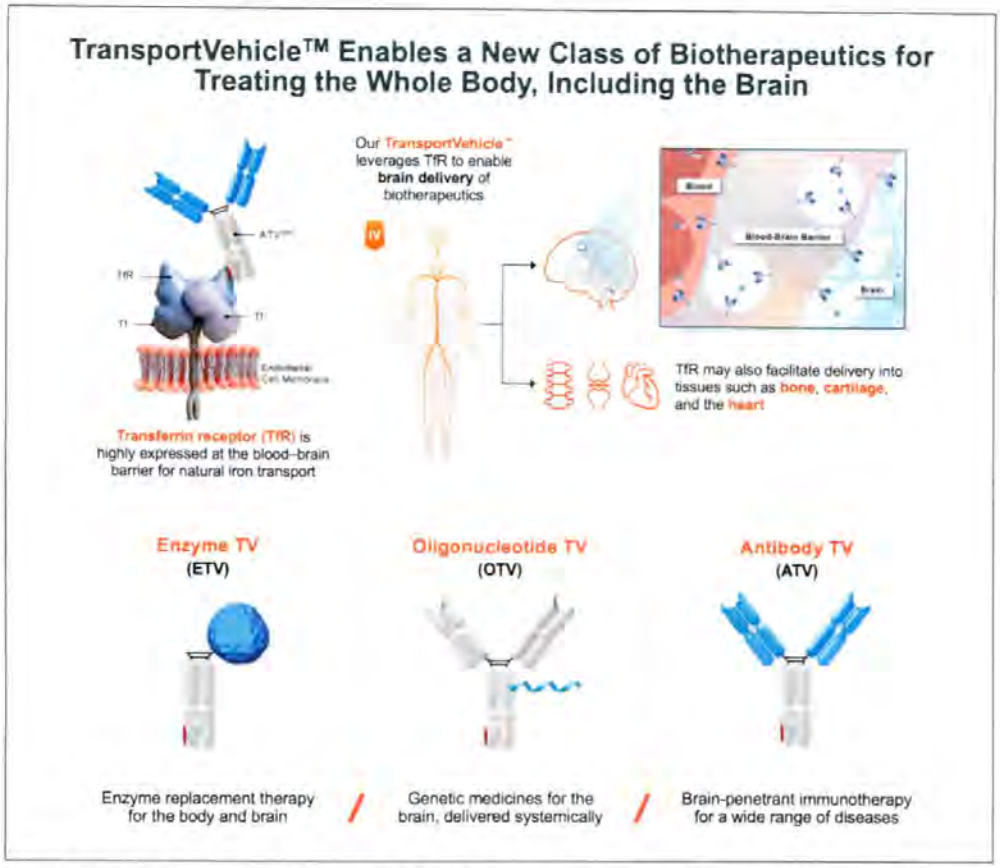

Figure 2. Engineering brain delivery. Schematic of the TV platform and modalities, designed to cross the blood-brain barrier through receptor mediated transcytosis, leveraging endogenous receptors expressed on endothelial cells of the central nervous system vasculature.

Our TV technology is differentiated from other blood-brain barrier technologies through its engineering approach, which may provide superior therapeutic efficacy, safety, and tolerability through higher stability, exposure, and biodistribution as well as the potential for lower immunogenicity of drug candidates in the brain. Compared to conventional approaches that use the Fab portion (the "arms") of a full-length antibody to bind to the targeted blood-brain barrier receptor (e.g.,TfR), we use an Fc domain (the "legs") (Figure 3). We have engineered the blood-brain barrier receptor binding site into one of the Fc's (monovalent binding) and we can optimize binding affinity (how tightly the Fc binds its blood-brain barrier receptor target) and epitope (where the Fc binds its blood-brain barrier receptor target) to enhance brain delivery and limit receptor degradation. Clinical and preclinical studies with several of our TV-enabled product candidates demonstrated high concentrations and broad distribution in all explored regions of the central nervous system and in key central nervous system cell types and showed improved pharmacodynamic effects compared to standard biotherapeutics.

We can also modify the amino acid sequences in the Fc to enable "conditional effector function", which is important for optimal activity of certain molecules, such as ATV:Abeta, that require immune cell activity for therapeutic effect. By toggling effector function "on or off", the loss of reticulocytes (immature red blood cells) can be avoided, potentially limiting anemia, which is a known liability associated with targeting TfR. Further, as the blood-brain barrier receptor binding site is a short amino acid sequence integrated into the Fc, the TV maintains high fidelity to the natural protein and does not require appended sequences, thereby improving stability and limiting risk of immunogenicity and infusion-related reactions ("IRRs"). In addition, Fc engineering enables modularity for the broadest utility to transport biologics including enzymes, oligonucleotides, and antibodies.

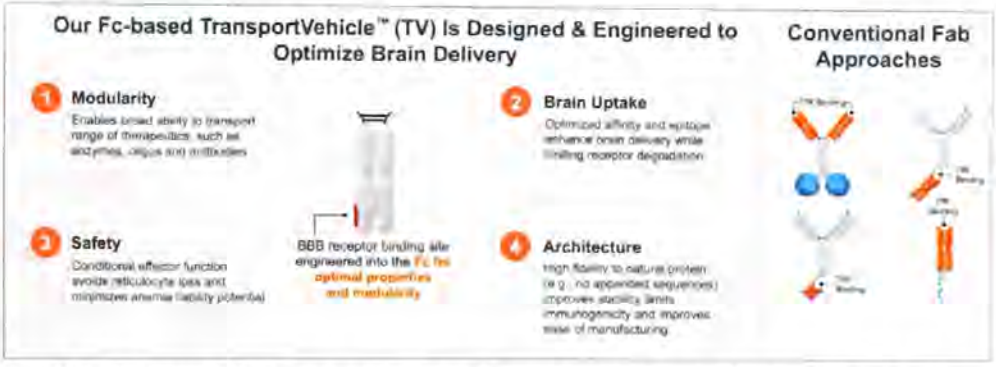

Figure 3: Denali's Fc-based TV technology is modular, designed to optimize brain delivery and safety, and is highly differentiated from conventional Fab-based approaches.

Across TV modalities, we have shown in preclinical and/or clinical studies that TV enables broader brain biodistribution, enhanced target engagement, and normalization of key disease biomarkers (Figure 4). More than 200 subjects have participated in clinical studies of our TV-enabled programs and more than 11,000 doses of TV-enabled therapeutics have been administered for up to over five years (as of November 3, 2025). We achieved proof of concept with safety and pharmacokinetic and pharmacodynamic data from Phase 1/2 clinical studies in patients and healthy volunteers, as well as data from several preclinical studies in mouse and nonhuman primate models. For example, we have demonstrated the ability to correct neurodegeneration observed as substantial reduction and normalization of levels of neurofilament light chain ("NfL"), a biomarker of neuronal damage, in the Phase 1/2 study of tividenofusp alfa for MPS II as well as in multiple animal models.

We believe that we can further expand our portfolio by targeting other blood-brain barrier receptors that may confer different properties from targeting TfR. For example, we are targeting CD98hc, an amino acid transporter highly expressed on the blood-brain barrier (Figure 5). Our preclinical studies have established TV^{CD98hc} as a modular brain delivery platform with favorable kinetic, biodistribution, and safety properties distinct from previously reported blood-brain barrier platforms. We believe that the distinct properties of our two TV platforms, TV^{TfR} and TV^{CD98hc} may enable selection of the optimal platform for a given drug target thereby expanding our portfolio opportunities. In addition, we have developed a dual TV platform that engages both TfR and CD98hc, combining complementary brain delivery properties and providing additional flexibility to optimize brain exposure across a range of therapeutic programs.

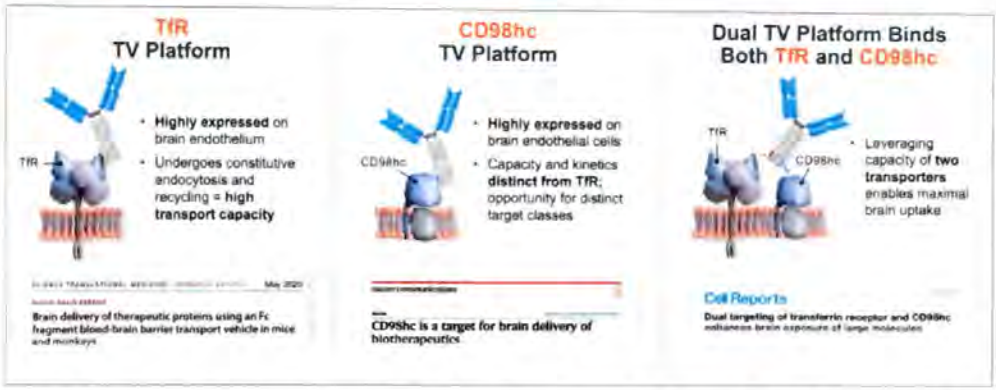

Figure 5: TV^{TfR} targets TfR and TV^{CD98hc} targets CD98hc, an amino acid transporter. Both receptors are highly expressed on the blood-brain barrier and can be utilized for brain delivery of biotherapeutics.

Our Therapeutic Portfolio

Our therapeutic portfolio (Figure 6) currently includes five clinical-stage TV-enabled programs and more than ten programs in preclinical development and spans a broad range of investigational therapies for neurodegenerative diseases, lysosomal storage disorders, and other serious diseases. In addition to our current clinical development portfolio, we expect to advance four to six new molecule entities ("NMEs") into clinical development over the next three years beginning in 2026. We discuss our most advanced programs in further detail below.

Figure 6: Our therapeutic portfolio is broad and diverse, spanning neurodegenerative diseases, lysosomal storage disorders, and other serious diseases that may be addressed by our TV platform for enabling and enhancing the delivery of biotherapeutics to target tissues.

Enzyme TransportVehicle™ Franchise

The Enzyme TransportVehicle™ ("ETV") franchise (Figure 7) represents our first potential commercial application of the TV platform and is designed to address significant unmet needs in lysosomal storage disorders, many of which have both central nervous system and systemic manifestations. By enabling efficient delivery of enzyme replacement therapies to the brain and throughout the body, the ETV franchise has the potential to improve upon existing standards of care that are limited by inadequate tissue distribution, and do not reach the brain in sufficient concentrations. We believe the ETV franchise offers a substantial near- and long-term commercial opportunity, supported by validated disease biology, established regulatory pathways, and the historically high success rates of approximately 80 percent of enzyme replacement therapies in rare genetic diseases.

The ETV franchise is intended to serve as the commercial and financial foundation of our business, with the anticipated launch of tividenofusp alfa for Hunter syndrome and the advancement of additional ETV programs, including DNL126 for Sanfilippo syndrome type A, DNL593 for FTD-GRN, and DNL952 for Pompe disease. Revenue generated from the ETV franchise is expected to support continued investment in our TV platform, enabling us to expand our pipeline across additional enzyme, antibody, and oligonucleotide-based therapeutics. Through this strategy, we aim to build a sustainable, revenue-generating rare disease business while funding the long-term development of our broader platform across neurodegenerative and other serious diseases.

Figure 7: Our ETV franchise is intended to deliver the next generation of enzyme replacement therapies designed to treat central nervous system and somatic manifestations of lysosomal storage diseases and other serious genetic diseases.

ETV Clinical Programs

Tividenofusp alfa (DNL310, ETV:IDS) Enzyme Replacement Therapy Program for MPS II (Hunter Syndrome)

MPS II, also called Hunter syndrome, is a rare genetic disease that affects over 2,000 individuals, primarily males, in commercially accessible geographies world-wide and leads to behavioral, cognitive, and physical symptoms ultimately resulting in shortened lifespan. MPS II is caused by mutations in the iduronate-2-sulfatase ("IDS") gene, which leads to a deficiency of the IDS enzyme responsible for the breakdown of the glycosaminoglycans ("GAGs") heparan sulfate and dermatan sulfate in lysosomes. Symptoms often begin emerging around age two and include physical complications, including organ dysfunction, joint stiffness, hearing loss and impaired growth leading to short stature, and neurocognitive symptoms with impaired development. The disease is characterized by a buildup of GAGs in lysosomes, the part of the cell that breaks down materials, including GAGs. The current standard of care enzyme replacement therapy partially treats the physical symptoms but does not cross the blood-brain barrier, and as a result, cognitive and behavioral symptoms experienced by the majority of patients with MPS II are not addressed. Therapies that address behavioral, cognitive, and somatic manifestations of the disease are one of the greatest unmet needs for this community.

Tividenofusp alfa (DNL310, ETV:IDS), composed of the IDS enzyme fused to TV, is designed to deliver IDS into cells and tissues throughout the body, including the brain by crossing the blood-brain barrier, with the goal of addressing behavioral, cognitive, and physical manifestations of Hunter syndrome (MPS II). In March 2021, the U.S. Food and Drug Administration granted Fast Track designation to tividenofusp alfa for the treatment of patients with MPS II. In May 2022, the European Medicines Agency ("EMA") granted tividenofusp alfa Priority Medicines designation. In January, 2025, the FDA granted tividenofusp alfa Breakthrough Therapy Designation for MPS II.

In September 2024, we announced a successful Type C meeting with FDA's Center for Drug Evaluation and Research ("CDER") providing a path to filing a BLA for accelerated approval and subsequent conversion to full approval for tividenofusp alfa based on the Phase 2/3 COMPASS study for the treatment of MPS II. Agreement was reached that a reduction in CSF heparan sulfate is reasonably likely to predict clinical benefit and can be used as a surrogate endpoint to support accelerated approval for tividenofusp alfa in MPS II.

In May 2025, we announced that the BLA was submitted under the accelerated approval pathway and included preclinical and clinical data on biomarkers (CSF and urine heparan sulfate and neurofilament light ("NfL")), safety data, and clinical data including liver volume, hearing thresholds, cognition, and adaptive behavior. In July 2025, we announced that the FDA accepted the BLA submission and assigned a PDUFA target action date of January 5, 2026. In October 2025, we announced that the FDA had extended its review timeline of the BLA and assigned a new PDUFA target date of April 5, 2026. The extension followed our submission of updated clinical pharmacology data in response to an information request from the FDA as part of the standard review process and was not related to efficacy, safety or biomarkers. The FDA classified the submission as a Major Amendment (MA) to the BLA, which, per FDA regulations, extended the review by three months. No additional data were requested by the FDA in the MA letter. We believe that the updated information submitted in the amendment does not affect the clinical pharmacology or benefit-risk conclusions of the BLA.

Tividenofusp alfa received Rare Pediatric Disease Designation ("RPDD") status for the treatment of Hunter syndrome in January 2019. In December 2025, we announced ongoing dialogue with the FDA related to the eligibility of tividenofusp alfa to receive a Rare Pediatric Disease Priority Review Voucher ("PRV") upon approval. Because we submitted a filing of our intent to request a PRV after the initial BLA submission, based on discussions with the FDA, we may not be eligible to receive the PRV. Therefore, we are not including any potential future proceeds from the sale of a PRV in our financial planning. We continue to work with the FDA and the FDA will determine whether to award a PRV upon approval of tividenofusp alfa.

The Late Cycle Meeting with the FDA has been completed and labeling discussions are ongoing. We are building our launch plans in partnership with the MPS II community, and we are engaged in prelaunch activities, including continued dialogue with advocacy groups, prescribers and payers, and building a suite of patient support services and capabilities to enable access. We have built a right-sized team in commercial and medical affairs to support tividenofusp alfa and additional ETV product launches.

We are also conducting the global Phase 2/3 COMPASS study, which will support global approval. The Phase 2/3 COMPASS study is being conducted in North America, South America, and Europe. The participants are randomized 2:1 to receive either tividenofusp alfa or idursulfase, respectively. Cohort A includes children ages ≥2 to <6 years with neuronopathic disease; cohort B includes children and adults ages ≥6 to <26 without neuronopathic disease. Cohort A enrollment of a total of 44 participants was completed in December 2025, and Cohort B continues to enroll participants with non-neuronopathic MPS II.

We have previously reported interim analyses from the Phase 1/2 study, and, most recently, the primary analysis upon which the BLA was based was published in The New England Journal of Medicine in January 2026 (Muenzer et al., NEJM, 2026).

The primary objective of the Phase 1/2 study was safety and tolerability, and secondary objectives evaluated central nervous system and peripheral effects of tividenofusp alfa by measuring the GAG heparan sulfate (HS) in cerebrospinal fluid (CSF) and urine, adaptive behavior and liver volume. The study evaluated treatment in 47 ERT-naïve (n=15) and previously treated (n=32) study participants (aged 0.3–13 [median, 5] years), ranging from less severe to severe disease variants. Safety and tolerability data were consistent with previously reported results from this Phase 1/2 trial (Table 1). The most common treatment-related adverse events were infusion-related reactions, which decreased in incidence with continued use (Figure 8A). At baseline, 19% of the participants had anemia of grade 1 or higher. Decreases in the hemoglobin level were observed early with tividenofusp alfa treatment but generally returned to baseline values (Figure 8B), were clinically manageable, and did not result in discontinuation of study participation. Causes of anemia are probably multifactorial, including nutritional deficiencies, frequent phlebotomy early in the study, and possible immune effects such as the formation of antidrug antibodies.

Cautionary note regarding forward-looking statements

This Annual Report on Form 10-K and Johnson & Johnson's other publicly available documents contain "forward-looking statements" within the meaning of the safe harbor provisions of the United States Private Securities Litigation Reform Act of 1995. Management and representatives of Johnson & Johnson and its subsidiaries (the Company) also may from time to time make forward-looking statements. Forward-looking statements do not relate strictly to historical or current facts and reflect management's assumptions, views, plans, objectives and projections about the future. Forward-looking statements may be identified by the use of words such as "plans," "expects," "will," "anticipates," "estimates" and other words of similar meaning in conjunction with, among other things: discussions of future operations; expected operating results and financial performance; impact of planned acquisitions and dispositions; impact and timing of restructuring initiatives, including associated cost savings and other benefits; the Company's strategy for growth; product development activities; regulatory approvals; market position and expenditures.

Because forward-looking statements are based on current beliefs, expectations and assumptions regarding future events, they are subject to uncertainties, risks and changes that are difficult to predict and many of which are outside of the Company's control. Investors should realize that if underlying assumptions prove inaccurate, or known or unknown risks or uncertainties materialize, the Company's actual results and financial condition could vary materially from expectations and projections expressed or implied in its forward-looking statements. Investors are therefore cautioned not to rely on these forward-looking statements. Risks and uncertainties include, but are not limited to:

Risks related to product development, market success and competition

- Challenges and uncertainties inherent in innovation and development of new and improved products and technologies on which the Company's continued growth and success depend, including uncertainty of clinical outcomes, additional analysis of existing clinical data, obtaining regulatory approvals, health plan coverage and customer access, and initial and continued commercial success;
- Challenges to the Company's ability to obtain and protect adequate patent and other intellectual property rights for new and existing products and technologies in the United States and other important markets;
- The impact of patent expirations, typically followed by the introduction of competing generic, biosimilar or other products and resulting revenue and market share losses;
- Increasingly aggressive and frequent challenges to the Company's patents by competitors and others seeking to launch competing generic, biosimilar or other products and increased receptivity of courts, the United States Patent and Trademark Office and other decision makers to such challenges, potentially resulting in loss of market exclusivity and rapid decline in sales for the relevant product sooner than expected;
- Competition in research and development of new and improved products, processes and technologies, which can result in product and process obsolescence;
- Competition to reach agreement with third parties for collaboration, licensing, development and marketing agreements for products and technologies;
- Competition based on cost-effectiveness, product performance, technological advances and patents attained by competitors; and
- Allegations that the Company's products infringe the patents and other intellectual property rights of third parties, which could adversely affect the Company's ability to sell the products in question and require the payment of money damages and future royalties.

Risks related to product liability, litigation and regulatory activity

- Product efficacy or safety concerns, whether or not based on scientific evidence, potentially resulting in product withdrawals, recalls, regulatory action on the part of the United States Food and Drug Administration (U.S. FDA) (or international counterparts), declining sales, reputational damage, increased litigation expense and share price impact;
- The impact, including declining sales and reputational damage, of significant litigation or government action adverse to the Company, including product liability claims and allegations related to pharmaceutical marketing practices and contracting strategies;
- The impact of an adverse judgment or settlement and the adequacy of reserves related to legal proceedings, including patent litigation, product liability, personal injury claims, securities class actions, government investigations, employment and other legal proceedings;

- Increased scrutiny of the healthcare industry by government agencies and state attorneys general resulting in investigations and prosecutions, which carry the risk of significant civil and criminal penalties, including, but not limited to, debarment from government business;
- Failure to meet compliance obligations in compliance agreements with governments or government agencies, which could result in significant sanctions;
- Potential changes to applicable laws and regulations affecting United States and international operations, including relating to: approval of new products; licensing and patent rights; sales and promotion of healthcare products; access to, and reimbursement and pricing for, healthcare products and services; environmental protection; and sourcing of raw materials;
- Compliance with local regulations and laws that may restrict the Company's ability to manufacture or sell its products in relevant markets, including requirements to comply with medical device reporting regulations and other requirements such as the European Union's Medical Devices Regulation;
- Changes in domestic and international tax laws and regulations, increasing audit scrutiny by tax authorities around the world and exposures to additional tax liabilities potentially in excess of existing reserves; and
- The issuance of new or revised accounting standards by the Financial Accounting Standards Board and regulations by the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Risks related to the Company's strategic initiatives, healthcare market trends and the realization of benefits from the separation of the Company's Consumer Health Business

- Pricing pressures resulting from trends toward healthcare cost containment, including the continued consolidation among healthcare providers and other market participants, trends toward managed care, the shift toward governments increasingly becoming the primary payors of healthcare expenses, significant new entrants to the healthcare markets seeking to reduce costs and government pressure on companies to voluntarily reduce costs and price increases;
- Restricted spending patterns of individual, institutional and governmental purchasers of healthcare products and services due to economic hardship and budgetary constraints;
- Challenges to the Company's ability to realize its strategy for growth including through externally sourced innovations, such as development collaborations, strategic acquisitions, licensing and marketing agreements, and the potential heightened costs of any such external arrangements due to competitive pressures;
- The potential that the expected strategic benefits and opportunities from any planned or completed acquisition or divestiture by the Company may not be realized or may take longer to realize than expected;
- The potential that the expected benefits and opportunities related to past and ongoing restructuring actions may not be realized or may take longer to realize than expected;
- The Company's ability to divest the Company's remaining ownership interest in Kenvue Inc. (Kenvue) and realize the anticipated benefits from the separation; and
- Kenvue's ability to succeed as a standalone publicly traded company.

Risks related to economic conditions, financial markets and operating internationally

- The risks associated with global operations on the Company and its customers and suppliers, including foreign governments in countries in which the Company operates;
- The impact of inflation and fluctuations in interest rates and currency exchange rates and the potential effect of such fluctuations on revenues, expenses and resulting margins;
- Potential changes in export/import and trade laws, regulations and policies of the United States and other countries, including any increased trade restrictions or tariffs and potential drug reimportation legislation;
- The impact on international operations from financial instability in international economies, sovereign risk, possible imposition of governmental controls and restrictive economic policies, and unstable international governments and legal systems;
- The impact of global public health crises and pandemics;

- Changes to global climate, extreme weather and natural disasters that could affect demand for the Company's products and services, cause disruptions in manufacturing and distribution networks, alter the availability of goods and services within the supply chain, and affect the overall design and integrity of the Company's products and operations;
- The impact of global or economic changes or events, including global tensions and war; and
- The impact of armed conflicts and terrorist attacks in the United States and other parts of the world, including social and economic disruptions and instability of financial and other markets.

Risks related to supply chain and operations

- Difficulties and delays in manufacturing, internally, through third-party providers or otherwise within the supply chain, that may lead to voluntary or involuntary business interruptions or shutdowns, product shortages, withdrawals or suspensions of products from the market, and potential regulatory action;
- Interruptions and breaches of the Company's information technology systems or those of the Company's vendors, which could result in reputational, competitive, operational or other business harm as well as financial costs and regulatory action;
- Reliance on global supply chains and production and distribution processes that are complex and subject to increasing regulatory requirements that may adversely affect supply, sourcing and pricing of materials used in the Company's products; and
- The potential that the expected benefits and opportunities related to restructuring actions may not be realized or may take longer to realize than expected, including due to any required approvals from applicable regulatory authorities.

Investors also should carefully read the risk factors described in Item 1A of this Annual Report on Form 10-K for a description of certain risks that could, among other things, cause the Company's actual results to differ materially from those expressed in its forward-looking statements. Investors should understand that it is not possible to predict or identify all such factors and should not consider the risks described above and in Item 1A to be a complete statement of all potential risks and uncertainties. The Company does not undertake to publicly update any forward-looking statement that may be made from time to time, whether as a result of new information or future events or developments.

Part I

Item 1. Business

General

Johnson & Johnson and its subsidiaries (the Company) have approximately 131,900 employees worldwide engaged in the research and development, manufacture and sale of a broad range of products in the healthcare field. Johnson & Johnson is a holding company, with operating companies conducting business in virtually all countries of the world. The Company's primary focus is products related to human health and well-being. Johnson & Johnson was incorporated in the State of New Jersey in 1887.

The Executive Committee of Johnson & Johnson is the principal management group responsible for the strategic operations and allocation of the resources of the Company. This Committee oversees and coordinates the activities of the Company's two business segments: Innovative Medicine (previously referred to as Pharmaceutical) and MedTech. Within the strategic parameters provided by the Committee, senior management groups at U.S. and international operating companies are each responsible for their own strategic plans and the day-to-day operations of those companies. Each subsidiary within the business segments is, with limited exceptions, managed by residents of the country where located.

Segments of business

Following the completion of the separation of the Consumer Health business (Kenvue) in August 2023, the Company is now organized into two business segments: Innovative Medicine and MedTech. Additional information required by this item is incorporated herein by reference to the narrative and tabular descriptions of segments and operating results under: Item 7. Management's discussion and analysis of results of operations and financial condition of this Report; and Note 17 Segments of business and geographic areas of the notes to consolidated financial statements included in Item 8 of this Report.

Innovative Medicine

The Innovative Medicine segment is focused on the following therapeutic areas: Immunology (e.g., rheumatoid arthritis, psoriatic arthritis, inflammatory bowel disease and psoriasis), Infectious Diseases (e.g., HIV/AIDS), Neuroscience (e.g., mood disorders, neurodegenerative disorders and schizophrenia), Oncology (e.g., prostate cancer, hematologic malignancies, lung cancer and bladder cancer), Cardiovascular and Metabolism (e.g., thrombosis, diabetes and macular degeneration) and Pulmonary Hypertension (e.g., Pulmonary Arterial Hypertension). Key products in the Innovative Medicine segment include: REMICADE (infliximab), a treatment for a number of immune-mediated inflammatory diseases; SIMPONI (golimumab), a subcutaneous treatment for adults with moderate to severe rheumatoid arthritis, active psoriatic arthritis, active ankylosing spondylitis and moderately active to severely active ulcerative colitis; SIMPONI ARIA (golimumab), an intravenous treatment for adults with moderate to severe rheumatoid arthritis, active psoriatic arthritis and active ankylosing spondylitis and active polyarticular juvenile idiopathic arthritis (pJIA) in people 2 years of age and older; STELARA (ustekinumab), a treatment for adults and children with moderate to severe plaque psoriasis, for adults with active psoriatic arthritis, for adults with moderately to severely active Crohn's disease and treatment of moderately to severely active ulcerative colitis; TREMFYA (guselkumab), a treatment for adults with moderate to severe plaque psoriasis and active psoriatic arthritis; EDURANT (rilpivirine), PREZISTA (darunavir) and PREZCOBIX/REZOLSTA (darunavir/cobicistat), antiretroviral medicines for the treatment of human immunodeficiency virus (HIV) in combination with other antiretroviral products and SYMTUZA (darunavir/cobicistat/emtricitabine/tenofovir alafenamide), a once-daily single tablet regimen for the treatment of HIV; CONCERTA (methylphenidate HCl) extended-release tablets CII, a treatment for attention deficit hyperactivity disorder; INVEGA SUSTENNA/XEPLION (paliperidone palmitate), for the treatment of schizophrenia and schizoaffective disorder in adults; INVEGA TRINZA/TREVICTA (paliperidone palmitate), for the treatment of schizophrenia in patients after they have been adequately treated with INVEGA SUSTENNA for at least four months; SPRAVATO (Esketamine), a nasal spray, used along with an oral antidepressant, to treat adults with treatment-resistant depression (TRD) and depressive symptoms in adults with major depressive disorder (MDD) with suicidal thoughts or actions; CARVYKTI (ciltacabtagene autoleucel), a chimeric antigen receptor (CAR)-T-cell therapy for the treatment of patients with relapsed/refractory multiple myeloma; ZYTIGA (abiraterone acetate), a treatment for patients with prostate cancer; ERLEADA (apalutamide), a next-generation androgen receptor inhibitor for the treatment of patients with prostate cancer; IMBRUVICA (ibrutinib), a treatment for certain B-cell malignancies, or blood cancers and chronic graft versus host disease; DARZALEX (daratumumab), a treatment for multiple myeloma; DARZALEX FASPRO (daratumumab and hyaluronidase-fihj), a treatment for multiple myeloma and light chain (AL) Amyloidosis; XARELTO (rivaroxaban), an oral anticoagulant for the prevention of deep vein thrombosis (DVT), which may lead to pulmonary embolism (PE) in patients undergoing hip or knee replacement surgery, to reduce the risk of stroke and systemic embolism in patients with nonvalvular atrial fibrillation, and for the treatment and reduction of risk of recurrence of DVT and PE to reduce the risk of major cardiovascular events in patients with coronary artery disease (CAD) and peripheral artery disease (PAD), for the treatment and secondary prevention of thromboembolism in pediatric patients, and for thromboprophylaxis in pediatric patients following the Fontan procedure; OPSUMIT (macitentan) as monotherapy or in combination, indicated for the long-term treatment of pulmonary arterial hypertension (PAH); UPTRAVI (selexipag), the only approved oral and intravenous, selective IP receptor agonist targeting a prostacyclin pathway in PAH. Many of these medicines were developed in collaboration with strategic partners or are licensed from other companies and maintain active lifecycle development programs.

MedTech

The MedTech segment includes a broad portfolio of products used in the Interventional Solutions, Orthopaedics, Surgery and Vision categories. Interventional Solutions include electrophysiology products (Biosense Webster) to treat heart rhythm disorders, the heart recovery portfolio (Abiomed) which includes technologies to treat severe coronary artery disease requiring high-risk PCI or AMI cardiogenic shock, and Neurovascular care (Cerenovus) that treats hemorrhagic and ischemic stroke. The Orthopaedics portfolio (DePuy Synthes) includes products and enabling technologies that support Hips, Knees, Trauma, and Spine, Sports & Other. The Surgery portfolios include advanced and general surgery technologies (Ethicon), as well as solutions that focus on breast aesthetics (Mentor), and Ear, Nose and Throat (Acclarent) procedures. Johnson & Johnson Vision products include ACUVUE Brand contact lenses and TECNIS Intraocular lenses for cataract surgery. These products are distributed to wholesalers, hospitals and retailers, and used predominantly in the professional fields by physicians, nurses, hospitals, eye care professionals and clinics.

Geographic areas

Johnson & Johnson and its subsidiaries (the Company) have approximately 131,900 employees worldwide engaged in the research and development, manufacture and sale of a broad range of products in the healthcare field. The Company conducts business in virtually all countries of the world with the primary focus on products related to human health and well-being.

The products made and sold in the international business include many of those described above under Segments of Business – Innovative Medicine and MedTech. However, the principal markets, products and methods of distribution in the international business vary with the country and the culture. The products sold in international business include those developed in the U.S. and by subsidiaries abroad.

Investments and activities in some countries outside the U.S. are subject to higher risks than comparable U.S. activities because the investment and commercial climate may be influenced by financial instability in international economies, restrictive economic policies and political and legal system uncertainties.

Raw materials

Raw materials essential to the Company's business are generally readily available from multiple sources. Where there are exceptions, the temporary unavailability of those raw materials would not likely have a material adverse effect on the financial results of the Company.

Patents

The Company's subsidiaries have made a practice of obtaining patent protection on their products and processes where possible. They own, or are licensed under, a significant number of patents in the U.S. and other countries relating to their products, product uses, formulations and manufacturing processes, which in the aggregate are believed to be of material importance to the Company in the operation of its businesses. The Company's subsidiaries face patent challenges from third parties, including challenges seeking to manufacture and market generic and biosimilar versions of the Company's key pharmaceutical products prior to expiration of the applicable patents covering those products. Significant legal proceedings and claims involving the Company's patent and other intellectual property are described in Note 19 Legal proceedings—Intellectual property of the Notes to Consolidated Financial Statements included in Item 8 of this Report.

Sales of the Company's largest product, STELARA (ustekinumab) accounted for approximately 12.8% of the Company's total revenues for fiscal 2023. Accordingly, the patents related to this product are believed to be material to the Company. Janssen Biotech, Inc., a wholly-owned subsidiary of Johnson & Johnson, owns patents specifically related to STELARA. The latest expiring United States composition of matter patent expired in 2023. As a result of settlements and other agreements with third parties, the Company does not anticipate the launch of a biosimilar version of STELARA before January 1, 2025 in the United States. The latest expiring European composition of matter patent (Supplementary Protection Certificate) expires in 2024.

Sales of the Company's second largest product, collectively DARZALEX (daratumumab) and DARZALEX FASPRO (daratumumab and hyaluronidase-fihj), accounted for approximately 11.4% of the Company's total revenues for fiscal 2023. Accordingly, the patents related to this product are believed to be material to the Company. Genmab A/S owns two patent families related to DARZALEX, and Janssen Biotech, Inc. has an exclusive license to those patent families. The two patent families both expire in the United States in 2029, and in Europe, compound patent protection in select countries extends to 2031/2032. Janssen Biotech, Inc. owns a separate patent portfolio related to DARZALEX FASPRO.

Trademarks

The Company's subsidiaries have made a practice of selling their products under trademarks and of obtaining protection for these trademarks by all available means. These trademarks are protected by registration in the U.S. and other countries where such products are marketed. The Company considers these trademarks in the aggregate to be of material importance in the operation of its businesses.

Seasonality

Worldwide sales do not reflect any significant degree of seasonality; however, spending has typically been heavier in the fourth quarter of each year than in other quarters. This reflects increased spending decisions, principally for research and development activity.

Competition

In all of their product lines, the Company's subsidiaries compete with companies both locally and globally. Competition exists in all product lines without regard to the number and size of the competing companies involved. Competition in research, both internally and externally sourced, involving the development and the improvement of new and existing products and processes, is particularly significant. The development of new and innovative products, as well as protecting the underlying intellectual property of the Company's product portfolio, is important to the Company's success in all areas of its business. The competitive environment requires substantial investments in continuing research.

Environment

The Company is subject to a variety of environmental laws and regulations in the United States and other jurisdictions. The Company believes that its operations comply in all material respects with applicable environmental laws and regulations. The Company's compliance with these requirements is not expected to have a material effect upon its capital expenditures, cash flows, earnings or competitive position.

Regulation

The Company's businesses are subject to varying degrees of governmental regulation in the countries in which operations are conducted, and the general trend is toward increasingly stringent regulation and enforcement. The Company is subject to costly and complex U.S. and foreign laws and governmental regulations and any adverse regulatory action may materially adversely affect the Company's financial condition and business operations. In the U.S., the pharmaceutical product and medical technology industries have long been subject to regulation by various federal and state agencies, primarily as to product safety, efficacy, manufacturing, advertising, labeling and safety reporting. The exercise of broad regulatory powers by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration (the U.S. FDA) continues to result in increases in the amounts of testing and documentation required for U.S. FDA approval of new drugs and devices and a corresponding increase in the expense of product introduction. Similar trends are also evident in major markets outside of the U.S.

The new medical device regulatory framework and the evolving privacy, data localization, and emerging cyber security laws and regulations around the world are examples of such increased regulation. Within the U.S., an increasing number of U.S. States have enacted comprehensive privacy laws and federal regulators (e.g., the U.S. FDA, FTC and HHS) continue to stress the intersection of health and privacy as a compliance and enforcement priority. In the EU, multiple directives and laws (including NIS2, EHDS, the Data Act, the Cyber Resilience Act, and the AI Act) are rapidly changing privacy and cybersecurity compliance requirements while introducing new enforcement risks. In addition, China has introduced broad personal information protection and data security regulations, with more anticipated, thereby increasing China's scrutiny of company compliance and data transfer practices. With other jurisdictions enacting similar privacy laws, local data protection authorities will force greater accountability on the collection, access and use of personal data in the healthcare industry. These laws can also restrict transfers of data across borders, potentially impacting how data-driven health care solutions are developed and deployed globally in a compliant manner. Moreover, as a result of the broad scale release and availability of Artificial Intelligence (AI) technologies such as generative AI, a global trend towards more comprehensive and nuanced regulation (e.g., White House's Executive Order on the Safe, Secure, and Trustworthy Development and Use of Artificial Intelligence; the EU AI Act) to ensure the ethical use, privacy, and security of AI is underway that includes standards for transparency, accountability, and fairness, which will require compliance developments or enhancements.

The regulatory agencies under whose purview the Company operates have administrative powers that may subject it to actions such as product withdrawals, recalls, seizure of products and other civil and criminal sanctions. In some cases, the Company's subsidiaries may deem it advisable to initiate product recalls regardless of whether it has been required or directed to.

The U.S. FDA and regulatory agencies around the globe are also increasing their enforcement activities. If the U.S. FDA were to conclude that we are not in compliance with applicable laws or regulations, or that any of our pharmaceutical products or medical technologies are ineffective or pose an unreasonable health risk, the U.S. FDA could ban such products, detain or seize adulterated or misbranded products, order a recall, repair, replacement, or refund of such products, refuse to grant pending applications for marketing authorization or require certificates of foreign governments for exports, and/or require us to notify health professionals and others that the products present unreasonable risks of substantial harm to the public health. The U.S. FDA may also assess civil or criminal penalties against us, our officers or employees and impose operating restrictions on a company-wide basis, or enjoin and/or restrain certain conduct resulting in violations of applicable law. The U.S. FDA may also recommend prosecution to the U.S. Department of Justice. Any adverse regulatory action, depending on its magnitude, may restrict us from effectively marketing and selling our products and limit our ability to obtain future clearances or approvals, and could result in a substantial modification to our business practices and operations. Equivalent enforcement mechanisms exist in different countries in which we conduct business.

The costs of human healthcare have been and continue to be a subject of study, investigation and regulation by governmental agencies and legislative bodies around the world. In the U.S., attention has been focused by states, regulatory agencies and Congress on prices, profits, overutilization and the quality and costs of healthcare generally. Laws and regulations have been enacted to require adherence to strict compliance standards and prevent fraud and abuse in the healthcare industry. There is increased focus on interactions and financial relationships between healthcare companies and healthcare providers. Various state and federal transparency laws and regulations require disclosures of payments and other transfers of value made to certain healthcare practitioners, including physicians, teaching hospitals, and certain non-physician practitioners. Federal and foreign laws governing international business practices require strict compliance with anti-bribery standards and certain prohibitions with respect to payments to any foreign government official. Payors and Pharmacy Benefit Managers (PBMs) are a potent force in the marketplace, and increased attention is being paid to the impact of PBM practices on healthcare cost and access in the U.S.

Our business has been and continues to be affected by federal and state legislation that alters the pricing, coverage, and reimbursement landscape. At the federal level, in August 2022, President Biden signed into law the Inflation Reduction Act (IRA), which includes provisions that effectively authorize the government to establish prices for certain high-spend single-source drugs and biologics reimbursed by the Medicare program, starting in 2026 for Medicare Part D drugs and 2028 for Medicare Part B drugs. On August 29, 2023, the Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services ("CMS") published the first "Selected Drug" list, which includes XARELTO and STELARA as well as IMBRUVICA, which is developed in collaboration and co-commercialized in the U.S. with Pharmacyclics LLC, an AbbVie company. The Selected Drug list also included other medicines targeting disease states that are prevalent in the Medicare population. There remains uncertainty, however, regarding how the federal government will establish prices for the selected products, as the IRA specifies a ceiling price but not a minimum price. In any event, we anticipate that the selected products will be subjected to a government-established price for the Medicare population.

The IRA also contains provisions that impose rebates if certain prices increase at a rate that outpaces the rate of inflation, beginning October 1, 2022, for Medicare Part D drugs and January 1, 2023, for Medicare Part B drugs. Separate IRA provisions redesign the Medicare Part D benefit in various ways, including by shifting a greater portion of costs to manufacturers within certain coverage phases and replacing the Part D coverage gap discount program with a new manufacturer discounting program. Failure to comply with IRA provisions may subject manufacturers to various penalties, including civil monetary penalties.

In July 2023, Janssen Pharmaceuticals, Inc. (Janssen) filed litigation against the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services as well as the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services challenging the constitutionality of the Inflation Reduction Act's (IRA) Medicare Drug Price Negotiation Program. The litigation requests a declaration that the IRA violates Janssen's rights under the First Amendment and the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution and therefore that Janssen is not subject to the IRA's mandatory pricing scheme. The impact of the IRA on our business and the broader pharmaceutical industry remains uncertain, as litigation filed by Janssen and other pharmaceutical companies remains ongoing and CMS has yet to publicly announce the maximum fair price for each of the selected drugs.

Additionally, we expect continued scrutiny on drug pricing and government price reporting from Congress, agencies, and other bodies at the federal and state levels, which may result in additional regulations or other mechanisms to increase pricing transparency and controls.

There are a number of additional bills pending in Congress and healthcare reform proposals at the state level that would affect drug pricing, including in the Medicare and Medicaid programs. This changing legal landscape has both positive and negative impacts on the U.S. healthcare industry with much remaining uncertain as to how various provisions of federal and state law, and potential modification or repeal of these laws, will ultimately affect the industry. The IRA and any other federal or state legislative change could affect the pricing and market conditions for our products.

In addition, business practices in the healthcare industry have come under increased scrutiny, particularly in the U.S., by government agencies and state attorneys general, and resulting investigations and prosecutions carry the risk of significant civil and criminal penalties. Of note is the increased enforcement activity by data protection authorities in various jurisdictions, particularly in the European Union, where significant fines have been levied on companies for data breaches, violations of privacy requirements, and unlawful cross-border data transfers. In the U.S., the Federal Trade Commission has stepped up enforcement of data privacy with several significant settlements (including settlements concerning the downstream sharing of personal information and use and disclosure of personal health data) and there have been a material increase in class-action lawsuits linked to the collection and use of biometric data and use of tracking technologies.

Further, the Company relies on global supply chains, and production and distribution processes, that are complex, and subject to increasing regulatory requirements that may affect sourcing, supply and pricing of materials used in the Company's products. These processes also are subject to complex and lengthy regulatory approvals.

Employees and human capital management

As of December 31, 2023, the number of employees was approximately:

	2023
Employees[1]	134,400
Full-time equivalent (FTE) positions[2]	131,900

1 "Employee" is defined as an individual working full-time or part-time, excluding fixed term employees, interns and co-op employees. Employee data may not include full population from more recently acquired companies and individuals on long-term disability are excluded. Contingent workers, contractors and subcontractors are also excluded.

2 FTE represents the total number of full-time equivalent positions and does not reflect the total number of individual employees as some work part-time.

Accordingly, professional development programs and educational resources are available to all employees. In furtherance of this objective, the Company deploys a global approach to ensure development is for everyone, regardless of where they are on their career journey. To prioritize learning, the Company recently held Johnson & Johnson's first Global Learning Day. Employees were encouraged to set aside a full day to explore skill-building courses across five areas: leadership, business skills, digital upskilling, DEI, and well-being, on J&J Learn, the Company's new learning platform.

Item 1A. Risk factors

An investment in the Company's common stock or debt securities involves risks and uncertainties. The Company seeks to identify, manage and mitigate risks to our business, but uncertainties and risks are difficult to predict and many are outside of the Company's control and cannot therefore be eliminated. In addition to the other information in this report and the Company's other filings with the SEC, investors should consider carefully the factors set forth below. Investors should be aware that it is not possible to predict or identify all such factors and that the following is not meant to be a complete discussion of all potential risks or uncertainties. If known or unknown risks or uncertainties materialize, the Company's business, results of operations or financial condition could be adversely affected, potentially in a material way.

Risks related to our business, industry and operations

The Company's businesses operate in highly competitive product markets and competitive pressures could adversely affect the Company's earnings.

The Company faces substantial competition in its two operating segments and in all geographic markets. The Company's businesses compete with companies of all sizes on the basis of cost-effectiveness, technological innovations, intellectual property rights, product performance, real or perceived product advantages, pricing and availability and rate of reimbursement. The Company also competes with other market participants in securing rights to acquisitions, collaborations and licensing agreements with third parties. Competition for rights to product candidates and technologies may result in significant investment and acquisition costs and onerous agreement terms for the Company. Competitors' development of more effective or less costly products, and/or their ability to secure patent and other intellectual property rights and successfully market products ahead of the Company, could negatively impact sales of the Company's existing products as well as its ability to bring new products to market despite significant prior investment in the related product development. The Company may also experience operational and financial risk in connection with acquisitions if we are unable to fully identify potential risks and liabilities associated with acquired businesses or products, successfully integrate operations and employees, and successfully identify and realize synergies with existing businesses while containing acquisition-related strain on our management, operations and financial resources.

For the Company's Innovative Medicine businesses, loss of patent exclusivity for a product often is followed by a substantial reduction in sales as competitors gain regulatory approval for generic and other competing products and enter the market. Similar competition can be triggered by the loss of exclusivity for a biological product. For the Company's MedTech businesses, technological innovation, product quality, reputation and customer service are especially important to competitiveness. Development by other companies of new or improved products, processes and technologies could threaten to make the Company's products or technologies less desirable, less economical or obsolete. The Company's business and operations will be negatively impacted if we are unable to introduce new products or technological advances that are safe, more effective, more effectively marketed or otherwise outperform those of our competitors.

Interruptions and delays in manufacturing operations could adversely affect the Company's business, sales and reputation.

The Company's manufacturing of products requires the timely delivery of sufficient amounts of complex, high-quality components and materials. The Company's subsidiaries operate 61 manufacturing facilities as well as sourcing from thousands of suppliers around the world. The Company has in the past, and may in the future, face unanticipated interruptions and delays in manufacturing through its internal or external supply chain. Manufacturing disruptions can occur for many reasons including regulatory action, production quality deviations or safety issues, labor disputes, labor shortages, site-specific incidents (such as fires), natural disasters such as hurricanes and other severe weather events, raw material shortages, political unrest, terrorist attacks and epidemics or pandemics. Such delays and difficulties in manufacturing can result in product shortages, declines in sales and reputational impact as well as significant remediation and related costs associated with addressing the shortage.

The Company relies on third parties to manufacture and supply certain of our products. Any failure by or loss of a third-party manufacturer or supplier could result in delays and increased costs, which may adversely affect our business.

The Company relies on third parties to manufacture and supply certain of our raw materials, component parts and products. We depend on these third-party manufacturers to allocate to us a portion of their manufacturing capacity sufficient to meet our needs, to produce products of acceptable quality and at acceptable manufacturing yields and to deliver those products to us on a timely basis and at acceptable prices. However, we cannot guarantee that these third-party manufacturers will be able to meet our near-term or long-term manufacturing requirements, which could result in lost sales and have an adverse effect on our business.

Hi Katherine,

The certificate does not list Vericel's Burlington facility (25 Blue Sky Drive), can you confirm if the certificate of liability applies to both Cambridge and Burlington facilities?

Cautionary Note Regarding Forward-Looking Statements

This Annual Report on Form 10-K, including the documents incorporated by reference herein, contains certain statements that describe our management's beliefs concerning future business conditions, plans and prospects, growth opportunities and the outlook for our business based upon information currently available. Such statements are "forward-looking" statements within the meaning of the Private Securities Litigation Reform Act of 1995, Section 27A of the Securities Act of 1933, as amended, and Section 21E of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, as amended ("Exchange Act"). Wherever possible, we have identified these forward-looking statements by words such as "will," "may," "anticipates," "believes," "intends," "estimates," "expects," "plans," "projects," "trends," "opportunity," "current," "intention," "position," "assume," "potential," "outlook," "remain," "continue," "maintain," "sustain," "seek," "target," "achieve," "continuing," "ongoing," and similar words or phrases, or future or conditional verbs such as "would," "should," "could," "may," or similar expressions. Item 1. Business

General Information

Vericel Corporation is a leading provider of advanced therapies for the sports medicine and severe burn care markets. We have a highly differentiated portfolio of cell therapy and specialty biologic products that combines innovations in biology with medical technologies. We were among the first companies to achieve commercial success in the complex field of cell therapies with treatments that use tissue engineering to regenerate skin and healthy knee cartilage. We currently market two U.S. Food and Drug Administration ("FDA") approved autologous cell therapy products and one FDA-approved specialty biologic product in the U.S. MACI® is an autologous cellularized scaffold product indicated for the repair of symptomatic, single or multiple full-thickness cartilage defects of the knee with or without bone involvement in adults. Since MACI's commercial launch, the product's FDA-approved labeling has provided for a treating surgeon to use MACI to treat a patient through an open surgical procedure. In August 2024, the FDA approved a supplemental Biologics License Application ("sBLA") expanding the MACI indication to add instructions for the arthroscopic delivery of MACI to the product's approved labeling. MACI Arthro® allows surgeons to evaluate and prepare the cartilage defect site as well as deliver the MACI implant through small incisions using custom-designed arthroscopic instruments developed by the Company ("MACI Arthro instruments"). MACI Arthro became commercially available in the U.S. during the third quarter of 2024, and the Company began selling MACI Arthro instruments at that time.

Epicel® is a permanent skin replacement Humanitarian Use Device ("HUD") indicated for the treatment of adult and pediatric patients with deep-dermal or full-thickness burns comprising greater than or equal to 30 percent of a patient's total body surface area ("TBSA"). We also hold an exclusive license from MediWound Ltd. ("MediWound") for the North American rights to NexoBrid® (anacaulase-bcdb), a topically-administered biological orphan product containing proteolytic enzymes, which is indicated for the removal of eschar in adult and pediatric patients with deep partial-thickness and/or full-thickness thermal burns.

Our Strategy

Our objective is to expand our leadership position in the sports medicine and severe burn care markets and deliver a unique combination of revenue and profitability growth. To achieve this objective, we intend to:

- Continue to invest in potential MACI growth initiatives;
- Seek clinical indication expansion for MACI, including for usage in additional joints;
- Launch MACI outside the United States in select markets, including the United Kingdom;
- Leverage our unique burn portfolio to expand the number of burn centers and surgeons using Epicel and NexoBrid; and;
- Generate positive operating income and cash flow.

Manufacturing

We have a cell manufacturing facility in Cambridge, Massachusetts, which is currently used for U.S. manufacturing and distribution of MACI and Epicel. In January 2022, we entered into a lease agreement (as amended, the "Burlington Lease") to lease approximately 126,000 square feet of manufacturing, laboratory and office space in Burlington, Massachusetts. The Burlington facility is complete, and we are currently utilizing the facility's office space. Once validated, the facility's manufacturing component will eventually become the primary manufacturing facility for MACI and Epicel.

The manufacturing process for NexoBrid is conducted by MediWound, primarily at manufacturing locations in Israel. Certain raw materials utilized in NexoBrid's manufacture, including the supply of the active ingredient bromelain, are sourced from Taiwan.

On July 1, 2023, we renewed our long-term supply agreement with Matricel GmbH ("Matricel") for the supply of ACI-Maix collagen membranes used in the manufacture of MACI (the "Matricel Supply Agreement"). In the event Matricel is unable to supply the membranes, we may license the technology and procure the membranes from another source. The Matricel Supply Agreement provides that Matricel will supply the ACI-Maix membranes exclusively to us during the term of the agreement.

The Matricel Supply Agreement is effective until December 31, 2030, with an option to extend its term for three additional years to December 31, 2033. Thereafter, the Matricel Supply Agreement may be renewed for additional three-year periods.

Product Portfolio

Our current marketed products include two FDA-approved autologous cell therapies and one FDA-approved specialty biologic product. MACI is a third-generation autologous cellularized scaffold product indicated for the repair of symptomatic, single or multiple full-thickness cartilage defects of the knee with or without bone involvement in adults. In connection with our MACI product, we sell MACI biopsy kits, which are used by treating surgeons to obtain a sample of cartilage tissue, which is later sent to us. If a patient decides to move forward with MACI treatment, we subsequently use the cartilage sample to manufacture a MACI implant. When an orthopedic surgeon decides to treat a patient by implanting MACI through an arthroscopic approach, the surgeon may choose to use our custom MACI Arthro instruments during the procedure, which we sell by way of a separate transaction.

Epicel is a permanent skin replacement indicated for the treatment of adult and pediatric patients with deep-dermal or full-thickness burns comprising greater than or equal to 30 percent of a patient's TBSA. Both autologous cell therapy products, MACI and Epicel, are currently manufactured and marketed in the U.S. NexoBrid is a topically-administered biological orphan product containing proteolytic enzymes that is indicated for eschar removal in adult and pediatric patients with deep partial-thickness and/or full-thickness thermal burns. We hold exclusive license and supply agreements with MediWound to commercialize NexoBrid in North America.

MACI

Background of Cartilage Defects

Damage to cartilage in the knee can occur from acute or repetitive trauma from playing sports, exercising, work-related physical demands, or performing everyday activities. When damaged, cartilage in the knee does not usually heal on its own. If left untreated, cartilage defects can progress and lead to degenerative joint disease, osteoarthritis and potentially require total knee replacement, which is a poor option for younger and more active patients.

Carticel was the first FDA-approved autologous cartilage repair product for the repair of symptomatic cartilage defects. It was indicated for the repair of symptomatic cartilage defects of the femoral condyle (medial, lateral or trochlea), caused by acute or repetitive trauma, in patients who have had an inadequate response to a prior arthroscopic or other surgical repair procedure such as debridement (the removal of damaged or defective cartilage), microfracture (the creation of tiny fractures in the bone to encourage new cartilage), drilling/abrasion arthroplasty, or osteochondral allograft/autograft. The FDA approved a BLA for Carticel in 1997, and Carticel was marketed in the U.S. by Vericel through the second quarter of 2017. The FDA approved a BLA for MACI on December 13, 2016.

MACI is an autologous cellular scaffold product consisting of autologous cultured chondrocytes seeded onto a resorbable Type I/III porcine-derived collagen membrane. Autologous cultured chondrocytes are human-derived cells which are obtained from a sample of the patient's own cartilage for the manufacture of MACI. An orthopedic surgeon obtains the sample by taking a cartilage biopsy during an initial arthroscopic procedure. We isolate the patient's chondrocytes (the cells that produce cartilage) from the biopsy and expand those cells in a manufacturing process that is compliant with current Good Manufacturing Practices ("cGMP"). The expanded cells are then uniformly seeded onto a resorbable collagen membrane using a proprietary process prior to shipment. After receipt by the surgeon, MACI is implanted into the cartilage defect(s). A key driver of the therapeutic advantage of autologous chondrocyte implantation ("ACI") relative to other approaches, such as microfracture, is that autologous chondrocytes have the potential to produce the hyaline-like cartilage that is naturally present in the knee, rather than fibrous cartilage, which lacks the durability and wear characteristics of hyaline cartilage. Unlike Carticel, which was a cell suspension and required a membrane to be sutured in place to confine the cell suspension to the defect area, MACI is comprised of cells uniformly seeded on a collagen membrane resulting in a surgery that is simpler than Carticel involved surgeries. MACI may be implanted through a smaller incision or mini arthrotomy for focal defects. Additionally, since the FDA approval of MACI Arthro in August 2024, surgeons are now able to evaluate and prepare the cartilage defect site, as well as deliver the MACI implant, through small incisions using the MACI Arthro instruments. MACI is simply trimmed by the surgeon to the size of the defect, allowing for a precise fit, and fixed to the bone with an off-the-shelf surgical fibrin sealant. MACI has expanded the ACI market beyond Carticel because it: (i) shares the efficacy advantages of Carticel, while being less invasive; (ii) has a shorter procedure time; (iii) eliminates the need for a periosteal harvest and suture fixation of the periosteal patch; and (iv) has been recognized to have a short rehabilitation timeline. In addition, MACI is indicated for a broader range of cartilage defects of the knee, ensures more uniform distribution of the cells in the cartilage defect, and is supported by Phase 3 clinical data demonstrating a statistically significant improvement in pain and function scores compared to microfracture.

The pivotal clinical trial supporting MACI registration in Europe and approval in the U.S., the Superiority of MACI Implant versus Microfracture Treatment in patients with symptomatic articular cartilage defects in the knee ("SUMMIT") trial, was completed in 2012. Analysis of this 144-patient study demonstrated a statistically significant greater improvement in the co-primary endpoint of pain and function at Week 104 for those patients treated with MACI compared to microfracture.

MACI became commercially available in the European Union (the "EU") in 2001 and in Australia in 2002, prior to promulgation of regulations requiring marketing authorizations for cell therapies in those markets. MACI received marketing authorization in Europe in June 2013 by meeting the requirements of the Advanced Therapy and Medicinal Product ("ATMP") guidelines based on the results of the SUMMIT trial. We suspended the marketing of MACI in Europe in September 2014 and the European manufacturing authorization for MACI expired by its terms at the end of June 2018. Australian operations and the commercialization of MACI in that country was discontinued prior to our acquisition of the product in 2014.

Our Burlington facility, discussed more fully above, is designed to meet both U.S. and global manufacturing requirements, which provides strategic flexibility to potentially again commercialize MACI outside the U.S., and we are currently evaluating introducing MACI in additional geographies. We are currently focused on obtaining regulatory and marketing approval for MACI in the United Kingdom through the Medicine and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency ("MHRA") and, if successful, anticipate commercializing MACI in the United Kingdom in 2027.

Market Opportunity for MACI

Our target audiences are orthopedic surgeons who self-identify and/or have formal specialty training in sports medicine, and a subpopulation of general orthopedic surgeons who perform a high volume of cartilage repair procedures involving the knee. A vast majority of the largest commercial payers in the U.S. have a formal medical policy that provides benefit coverage for treatment with MACI. With respect to private commercial payers that have not yet approved a medical policy for MACI, we often obtain approval on a case-by-case basis.

We estimate that approximately 750,000 patients undergo cartilage repair procedures of the knee annually in the U.S. Of these, approximately 315,000 patients are consistent with the current MACI label. Based on defect characteristics, doctors that have implanted MACI consider approximately 125,000 of these patients clinically appropriate for MACI. Approximately 60,000 of these eligible patients have larger lesions and are likely to secure insurance authorization for MACI.

We have traditionally experienced a level of seasonality with respect to the timing of MACI revenues. In the last five years through 2025, MACI sales volumes from the first through the fourth quarter on average represented 21% (20%-22% range), 23% (22%-24% range), 22% (21%-24% range) and 34% (33%-34% range) respectively, of total annual volumes. Historically, MACI orders are normally stronger in the fourth quarter due to several factors including the satisfaction by patients of insurance deductible limits and the time of year patients prefer to start rehabilitation.

Seasonal sales patterns and other variations related to our revenue recognition may cause significant fluctuations in our results of operations and cash flows. We expect to continue to experience this seasonality effect in subsequent years.

Since MACI's commercial launch, the product's FDA-approved labeling has provided for a treating surgeon to use MACI to treat a patient through an open surgical procedure. In August 2024, the FDA approved an sBLA expanding the MACI indication to add instructions for the arthroscopic delivery of MACI to the product's approved labeling, permitting the repair of single or multiple full-thickness cartilage defects of the knee up to 4 cm^2 in size via an arthroscopic approach. MACI Arthro provides a less invasive technique compared to the open arthrotomy approach and allows surgeons to evaluate, prepare and treat the cartilage defect and deliver the MACI implant, under direct arthroscopic visualization and, should the surgeon so choose, to use specialized and custom-designed instruments (the "MACI Arthro instruments") through small incisions or portals. The arthroscopic delivery of MACI may increase the ease of MACI's use for physicians and may reduce both the length of the procedure as well as procedure-induced trauma, which may result in a reduction of a patient's post-operative pain and accelerate a patient's recovery. MACI Arthro became commercially available in the U.S. during the third quarter of 2024, and we began selling the MACI Arthro instruments at that time. We have experienced strong surgeon interest in the MACI Arthro technique since its launch. To date, more than 900 surgeons have participated in Company-sponsored education and training programs concerning the arthroscopic approach. We believe that the availability of MACI Arthro provides a significant growth opportunity for the overall MACI business, as we have already seen a significant increase in both MACI biopsies and implants from those surgeons who have engaged in MACI Arthro training and education programs. In conjunction with the launch of MACI Arthro, we have expanded our target surgeon base from 5,000 to 7,000 to include orthopedic surgeons that perform high volumes of knee cartilage repair surgeries, predominantly through arthroscopic procedures.

We also are focused on delivering MACI treatment to patients suffering from cartilage damage in the ankle. Following an application to the FDA, we received Investigational New Drug ("IND") clearance for MACI's use in the ankle during the second quarter of 2025, and during the fourth quarter of 2025 initiated a Study of MACI in Patients Aged 17 to 65 with Symptomatic Chondral or Osteochondral Defects of the Talus ("MASCOT"). MASCOT is a two-year prospective, multicenter, two-arm, parallel group open-label trial in which a total of 309 subjects, aged 17 to 65 will be randomized using a 2:1 ratio to receive a one-time treatment in the talus with MACI or arthroscopic bone marrow stimulation. MASCOT is the first randomized, controlled clinical trial evaluating MACI for the treatment of Osteochondral Lesion of the Talus ("OLT"). There are approximately 165,000 ankle resurfacing procedures conducted in the U.S. each year. Approximately 66,000 of those patients each year are considered clinically appropriate for MACI by surgeons. We estimate that approximately 18,000 of those patients suffer from larger ankle cartilage lesions, resulting in an increase of MACI's addressable market. If approved, we believe MACI's label expansion allowing its use to repair cartilage defects in the ankle will be a significant long-term growth driver for the product in the coming years.

Epicel

Epicel is a permanent skin replacement for deep-dermal or full-thickness burns comprising greater than or equal to 30 percent of total body surface area ("TBSA"). The extent of the skin surface that the burn affects is usually referred to as a percent of TBSA. Epicel is currently the only FDA-approved cultured epidermal autograft product available for large total surface area burns in both adult and pediatric patients.

Epicel is produced by isolating and expanding keratinocytes, which are the predominant cell type in the epidermis or outer layer of the skin, and which are originally obtained by taking a small biopsy of a patient's healthy skin. Epicel is an important treatment option for patients with severe burns who are generally understood to need a keratinocyte-based epithelium, and, because of the severity and extent of their burns, these patients generally have very little healthy skin remaining on their bodies from which to obtain keratinocyte-based epithelium for autografting.

Epicel is a cell-based product that is regulated by the FDA's Center for Biologics Evaluation and Research ("CBER") under medical device authorities. Epicel was designated as a HUD in 1998 and a Humanitarian Device Exemption ("HDE") application for the product was submitted in 1999. HUDs are devices that are intended for diseases or conditions that affect fewer than 8,000 individuals annually in the U.S., and, for certain HUDs, the amount a manufacturer may charge for the product's use is restricted. Epicel is not price-restricted in this manner because in 2016, the FDA approved our HDE supplement to revise the labeled indications of use for Epicel to specifically include pediatric patients, thus allowing Epicel to be sold for profit. The product label also specifies that the probable benefit of Epicel, mainly related to survival, was demonstrated in two Epicel clinical experience databases and a physician-sponsored study comparing outcomes in patients with large burns treated with Epicel relative to standard care.

Market Opportunity for Epicel

Each year in the U.S., more than 40,000 people are hospitalized for burns. Approximately 1,500 of these patients are treated for burns covering more than 30% TBSA, the labeled indication for Epicel. Currently, the mortality rate for this group is approximately 34%, partially due to the inability to quickly close wounds because of the lack of remaining healthy tissue from which to harvest autografts. The typical Epicel patient has suffered full-thickness burns due to a wide variety of occupational, household or vehicular accidents. Many of the most severely burned patients are transported by medivac to one of the approximately 140 specialized burn centers across the U.S. While the average acute care hospital has less than three admissions for burns annually, these specialized burn centers average over 200 admissions per year.

Relative to clinical need, we believe Epicel has been underutilized by burn centers due to the lack of a consistent promotional and educational effort prior to our acquisition of the product. We expect Epicel's utility to continue to grow as commercial and medical efforts are appropriately dedicated to the product and the burn centers that use it to treat patients.

Due to the low incidence and sporadic nature of severe burns, Epicel revenue has inherent variability from quarter to quarter and does not exhibit significant seasonality. Over the past five years, a single quarter has ranged from as high as 33% to as low as 16% of annual volumes.

NexoBrid

Our portfolio of commercial-stage products also includes NexoBrid (anacaulase-bcdb), a topically-administered biological orphan product containing proteolytic enzymes, for which the FDA approved a BLA in December 2022. NexoBrid is indicated for the removal of eschar in adults with deep partial-thickness and/or full-thickness thermal burns. Subsequently, in August 2024, the FDA approved an sBLA expanding NexoBrid's indication to include pediatric patients.

The treatment pathway for burn patients is generally determined by the ultimate size and depth of the patient's burn injury. Patients with full-thickness burn injuries of any size and partial-thickness burn injuries greater than 10% TBSA are most often transferred to specialized burn centers. These types of burn injuries, which damage the epidermal and dermal layers of the skin, require removal of the damaged tissue, or eschar, followed by grafting of the wound area to achieve closure of the wound. Early eschar removal and burn assessment are critical first steps in the treatment of burn patients. The early removal of eschar can help reduce inflammation, slow or stop burn progression and reduce the potential for infection and sepsis. Surgical excision of eschar, which involves slicing away the burn tissue until healthy tissue is reached, currently is the standard of care for the removal of eschar. There are limitations to surgical excision, however, in that this procedure is non-selective and can cause pain, blood loss and loss of healthy tissue. Currently, there also exist certain non-surgical approaches for the removal of eschar, which have limited efficacy and have not been shown to reduce the need for surgical eschar removal.

In treating patients with deep partial-thickness and/or full-thickness thermal burns, NexoBrid works to selectively degrade eschar over the course of approximately four hours while preserving viable tissue. NexoBrid can be administered to an area of up to 20% body surface area, in two separate applications, at the patient's bedside through a series of steps. First, pain management as practiced for extensive dressing changes of burn wounds is administered, the wound is cleaned, a dressing soaked with antibacterial solution is applied to the treatment area and a petrolatum ointment barrier is created. Then, the NexoBrid lyophilized powder is mixed with a gel vehicle and applied to the wound. After a film dressing is applied, NexoBrid is left in place for four hours, after which the dissolved eschar is removed by scraping it away with a sterile blunt-edged instrument.

Market Opportunity for NexoBrid

In addition to the U.S., NexoBrid is approved in the European Union ("EU") and other international markets and has been designated as an orphan biologic in the U.S., EU and other international markets. NexoBrid has the potential to change the standard of care for eschar removal with respect to hospitalized burn patients and treat a significant addressable market in the U.S. With respect to NexoBrid, of the approximately 40,000 people that are hospitalized in the U.S. each year for burn-related injuries, the majority, over 30,000, have thermal burns and will likely require some level of eschar removal. NexoBrid's FDA approval expands our burn care franchise's total addressable market, which permits us to treat a significantly larger segment of hospitalized burn patients than with Epicel alone. The expansion of our target addressable market supports a broader commercial footprint, and we believe that this will help drive both increased NexoBrid use as well as increased Epicel awareness throughout the burn care space.

The manufacturing process for NexoBrid is conducted by MediWound, primarily at manufacturing locations in Israel. Certain raw materials utilized in NexoBrid's manufacture, including the supply of the active ingredient bromelain, are sourced from Taiwan.

Pursuant to the terms of our existing license agreement, following the FDA's approval of the BLA for NexoBrid, MediWound transferred the BLA to Vericel. Subsequently, in August 2024, the FDA approved a supplemental BLA expanding NexoBrid's indication to include pediatric patients.

Research & Development

The bulk of our ongoing research and development activities have historically focused on exploring methods that improve our ability to efficiently manufacture high quality cell therapy products for patients. In 2025, we initiated a Study of MACI in Patients Aged 17 to 65 with Symptomatic Chondral or Osteochondral Defects of the Talus ("MASCOT"). MASCOT is a two-year prospective, multicenter, two-arm, parallel group open label trial with a total of 309 subjects, aged 17 to 65, which will be randomized 2:1 to receive a one-time treatment in the ankle with MACI or arthroscopic bone marrow stimulation. MASCOT is the first randomized, controlled clinical trial evaluating MACI for the treatment of Osteochondral Lesions of the Talus ("OLT"). Therefore, for the next several years our research and development activities will be more balanced between manufacturing method development and clinical activities for the MASCOT trial.

Patents and Proprietary Rights

Our success depends in part on our ability, and the ability of our future licensors, to obtain patent protection for our products and processes.

As part of the acquisition of the Cell Therapy and Regenerative Medicine ("CTRM") business from Sanofi, we acquired a multinational intellectual property estate, which includes patents and patent applications directed to chondrocyte implants and technologies related to the determination of the presence of chondrocytes in the cell cultures used to produce the chondrocyte implants. Although we do not own any patents or patent applications relating to Epicel, many of the processes and techniques are trade secrets and would be difficult to replicate without significant investment and time. We own issued patents directed to methods of determining the presence of chondrocytes in cell cultures used to produce both MACI and Carticel, which are scheduled to expire in September 2030 in the U.S. and in April 2028 abroad. We own two issued patents directed to compositions and methods for repairing cartilage defects, which are scheduled to expire in the U.S. in March 2039 and February 2040. We have one issued patent in the U.S. directed to a device related to MACI that is set to expire in November 2033, and one issued patent in the EU that is set to expire in November 2034. We own one issued patent directed to methods and devices for repairing cartilage defects via arthroscopic MACI, which is scheduled to expire in the U.S. in March 2043.

As a biologic, MACI is entitled to twelve years of data exclusivity, until December 13, 2028, calculated from its date of approval. When these patents and data exclusivity expire, our opportunity to establish or maintain product revenue could be substantially reduced.

Since 2019, we have held exclusive license and supply agreements with MediWound to commercialize NexoBrid in North America. We will need to continue to comply with the terms of such agreements in order to maintain our exclusive rights to commercialize NexoBrid in the U.S.

Our efforts to secure our proprietary rights also include our reliance on trade secrets and know-how, which we seek to protect, in part, by confidentiality agreements. It is our policy to require our employees, consultants, contractors, manufacturers, outside scientific collaborators, sponsored researchers and other advisors to execute confidentiality agreements upon the commencement of employment or consulting relationships with us. These agreements provide that all confidential information developed or made known to the individual during the course of the individual's relationship with us is to be kept confidential and not disclosed to third parties except in specific limited circumstances. We also require signed confidentiality or material transfer agreements from any company that is to receive our confidential information. In the case of employees, consultants and contractors, the agreements generally provide that all inventions conceived by the individual while rendering services to us shall be assigned to us as the exclusive property of Vericel.

See "Government Regulation — Product Approval" and "Risk Factors — Risks Related to Intellectual Property," below, for additional information.

We also own a broadly filed trademark portfolio with registrations for MACI and Epicel, and additional registrations and applications for various marks related to those two products. MediWound has additionally registered trademarks with respect to NexoBrid, which we have licensed as part of our License Agreement with MediWound.

Sales and Marketing

MACI, Epicel and NexoBrid are specialty products with focused physician and institutional call points. We have two sales teams, one dedicated to MACI and a Burn Care team focused on both Epicel and NexoBrid. Our MACI commercial team, which we expanded by approximately 30% in late 2025, is divided into geographic regions and consists of sales representatives that regularly engage with our target audience and who are managed by a senior sales leadership team. In conjunction with the launch of MACI Arthro, we have expanded our target surgeon base from 5,000 to 7,000 to include orthopedic surgeons that perform high volumes of knee cartilage repair surgeries, predominantly through arthroscopic procedures.

A vast majority of the largest commercial payers in the U.S. have a formal medical policy that provides benefit coverage for treatment with MACI. Even for private payers that have not yet approved a medical policy for MACI, for medically appropriate cases, we often obtain approval on a case-by-case basis.

We contract with two specialty pharmacies, Orsini Pharmaceutical Services, Inc. ("Orsini") and AllCare Plus Pharmacy, Inc. ("AllCare") to distribute MACI in a manner in which we retain the credit and collection risk from the end customer. We pay each specialty pharmacy a fee in each instance when it dispenses MACI for use in treating a patient. Both Orsini and AllCare perform collection activities to collect payment from customers. In addition, we sell MACI directly to hospitals pursuant to an agreed upon purchase order and to a distributor, DMS Pharmaceutical Group, Inc. ("DMS") at a contracted rate for the treatment of patients at military facilities throughout the U.S. We engage a third-party contractor to provide services in connection with a patient support program to manage patient cases and to ensure that complete and accurate billing information is provided to payers and hospitals.

Following the approval and commercial launch of NexoBrid, we have expanded the burn care commercial team to include both account management and clinical specialist professionals. The burn care commercial team is divided into geographic regions and consists of sales representatives that regularly engage with our target audience and who are managed by a senior sales leadership team. There are approximately 140 burn centers in the U.S., and a subset of these institutions regularly treat patients suffering from large TBSA burns. We sell Epicel directly to hospitals and burn centers based on contracted rates stated in an approved contract or an applicable purchase order with the hospital. We sell NexoBrid to specialty distributors. These customers subsequently resell NexoBrid to hospitals and burn centers.

Government Regulation

Our research and development activities and the manufacturing and marketing of our products are subject to the laws and regulations of governmental authorities in the U.S. and other countries in which our products may be marketed. Specifically, in the U.S., the FDA regulates drugs, biologics and medical devices and requires new product approvals or clearances to assure the safety and effectiveness of these products. Governments in other countries have similar requirements for testing and marketing. In the U.S., in addition to meeting FDA regulations, we are also subject to other federal laws, such as the Occupational Safety and Health Act and the Environmental Protection Act, as well as certain state laws.

Some human cell or tissue products that are intended for implantation, transplantation, infusion, or transfer into a human recipient are regulated solely as human cell, tissue, and cellular or tissue-based products ("HCT/Ps") and do not require the FDA's premarket review. If these cell or tissue products do not meet the FDA's requirements for regulation solely as an HCT/P, they require FDA premarket review and marketing authorization. The types of marketing authorizations required for non-HCT/P cell therapy products have evolved since cell therapy products were initially introduced. Epicel was approved by FDA's Center for Devices and Radiological Health ("CDRH") as an HUD under an HDE in 2007 but now is regulated by CBER under the same medical device regulations. MACI, approved in 2016, is regulated by CBER as a combination cell therapy/device product and required an approved BLA to be marketed in the U.S. Significant changes to products approved under a BLA require a supplemental BLA to be approved before such changes to products may be marketed in the U.S. In August 2024, the FDA approved a supplemental BLA expanding the MACI indication to add instructions for the arthroscopic delivery of MACI to the product's approved labeling. NexoBrid is regulated by FDA's Center for Drug Evaluation and Research ("CDER") as a botanical protein biologic, and the BLA associated with it was approved by the FDA on December 28, 2022, paving the way for marketing and commercialization in the U.S. Subsequently, in August 2024, the FDA approved a supplemental BLA expanding NexoBrid's indication to include pediatric patients. Commercial production of these products must occur in FDA-registered facilities in compliance with cGMP requirements.

Regulatory Process

The FDA regulates biologics under the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act ("FFDCA") and the Public Health Service Act ("PHSA"), and their implementing regulations. Obtaining approval of a BLA for a new biological product is a lengthy process, from the development of a new product through preclinical and clinical testing. This process takes several years and requires the expenditure of significant resources. There can be no assurance that our current or future product candidates will ultimately receive approval.

The FFDCA, PHSA, and other federal and state statutes and regulations govern the research, testing, manufacture, safety, labeling, storage, record-keeping, approval, distribution, use, adverse event reporting, and advertising and promotion of our products. Noncompliance with applicable requirements can result in inspectional observations, FDA warning letters, civil penalties, recalls, injunctions or seizures of products, refusal of the government to approve our marketing applications or to allow us to enter into government supply contracts, withdrawal of previously approved applications and criminal prosecution.

The MHRA is responsible for regulating the medicinal products market in the United Kingdom (Great Britain and Northern Ireland). An MHRA authorization must be obtained for each medicine to be marketed in the regions that comprise the United Kingdom. On January 1, 2024, the MHRA launched the International Recognition Procedure ("IRP"), which provides for an expedited authorization procedure for products that have received positive marketing authorization decisions from trusted partner agencies, such as the FDA. Even so, there can be no assurance that our current or future product candidates will ultimately receive approval.

Product Approval in the U.S.

To obtain an FDA license for, or approval of, a new biological product, sponsors must submit proof of safety, purity and potency, or effectiveness. In most cases, such proof entails extensive non-clinical (also known as preclinical) studies in animal models and well-controlled clinical trials in human subjects. The testing and preparation of necessary applications and the processing of those applications by the FDA is expensive, can take several years to complete, and can have uncertain outcomes. The FDA regulatory review and approval process is complex and can result in requests for additional data, resulting in increased development costs, and time to market delays, or could preclude us altogether from bringing to market new products. The FDA may also require post-marketing studies and risk evaluation and mitigation strategies ("REMS") as conditions of approval. These requirements, if imposed, add to the cost of regulatory compliance and the cost of selling, due to complex distribution and restricted commercial operations. Product approvals may be withdrawn if compliance with applicable regulations is not maintained or if safety issues are identified during routine safety monitoring following commercialization.

Adequate and well-controlled clinical studies are required by the FDA for approval of a BLA. To conduct a clinical trial in the U.S., the study sponsor is required to submit an IND application, including the study protocols, prior to commencing human clinical trials. The submission must be supported by data, typically including the results of nonclinical, manufacturing and laboratory testing. The conduct of the nonclinical tests must comply with Good Laboratory Practices, as well as applicable cGMP requirements. Long-term nonclinical testing, such as animal reproductive toxicity and carcinogenicity studies, is conducted if warranted and its results are submitted in connection with the IND to support clinical investigations conducted to support a future BLA. Following the initial submission of the IND, the FDA has 30 days to review the application and raise safety and other clinical trial issues. If questions or objections are not raised within that period, the clinical trial of the investigational product may commence according to the protocol submitted to the FDA and following Institutional Review Board ("IRB") approvals for each of the clinical sites where the study will be conducted. Protocol amendments need to be submitted and approved by the IRB and/or FDA prior to implementation. Clinical studies can also be conducted outside of the U.S. with or without a U.S. IND. However, a clinical trial application ("CTA") or IND is required to be submitted to the local competent regulatory authority to begin conducting human clinical trials. The CTA has similar data requirements to those of an IND including the need for IRB and/or Ethics Committee approvals for investigational protocols.

MACI and NexoBrid are regulated by the FDA as biologics. For products that are regulated as biologics, the FDA requires: (i) nonclinical animal testing to establish a safety profile and/or a starting dose for initiation of clinical trials in humans; (ii) submission to the FDA of an IND application, which must become effective prior to the initiation of human clinical trials; (iii) adequate and well-controlled clinical trials to demonstrate the safety, purity and potency, or effectiveness, of the product for its intended use; (iv) submission to the FDA of a BLA; and (v) review and approval of the BLA, including pre-license inspections conducted by FDA of the facilities that manufacture the biological product or components of the biological product.

For purposes of BLA approval, human clinical trials are typically conducted in three sequential phases that may sometimes overlap:

- Phase 1—The biological product is initially tested for safety and tolerability. The initial human testing is generally conducted in healthy patients. These trials may also provide early evidence of effectiveness.

- Phase 2—These trials are conducted in a limited number of subjects in the target population to determine a safe and effective dosage to evaluate in Phase 3 and to identify possibly related adverse effects and safety risks. Multiple Phase 2 clinical trials may be conducted by the sponsor to obtain information prior to beginning larger and more expensive Phase 3 clinical trials.

- Phase 3—Phase 3 trials are undertaken to provide evidence of clinical efficacy and to further evaluate dosage, potency, and safety in an expanded patient population at multiple clinical trial sites. Phase 3 studies are performed after preliminary evidence suggesting effectiveness of the product has been obtained and they are intended to establish the overall benefit-risk relationship of the investigational product, and provide an adequate basis for product approval and labeling.

Post-approval clinical trials, sometimes referred to as Phase 4 clinical trials, may be conducted after initial marketing approval. These trials may be required by the FDA as a condition of approval to generate additional information and data from the treatment of patients in the intended therapeutic indication, particularly for long-term safety follow-up. The FDA has express statutory authority to require post-market clinical trials to address safety issues. All of these trials must be conducted in accordance with good clinical practice ("GCP") requirements in order protect the health and safety of human subjects and for the data to be considered reliable for regulatory purposes.

During all phases of clinical development, regulatory agencies require extensive monitoring and auditing of all clinical activities, clinical data, and clinical trial investigators. Annual progress reports detailing the results of the clinical trials must be submitted to the IND. Written IND safety reports must be promptly submitted to the FDA and the investigators for serious and unexpected adverse events; any findings from other studies, testing in laboratory animals or in vitro testing that suggests a significant risk for human subjects; or any clinically important increase in the rate of a serious suspected adverse reactions over that listed in the protocol or investigator's brochure. The sponsor must submit an IND safety report within 15 calendar days after the sponsor determines that the information qualifies for reporting. The sponsor also must notify the FDA of any unexpected fatal or life-threatening suspected adverse reaction within seven calendar days after the sponsor's initial receipt of the information.

Phase 1, Phase 2, and Phase 3 clinical trials may not be completed successfully or within any specified period, or at all. Regulatory authorities, a data safety monitoring board or the sponsor may suspend a clinical trial at any time on various grounds, including a finding that the participants are being exposed to an unacceptable health risk. Similarly, an IRB can suspend or terminate approval of a clinical trial at its institution if the clinical trial is not being conducted in accordance with the IRB's requirements or if the biological product has been associated with unexpected serious harm to patients.

An unapproved drug being studied in clinical trials may be made available to individual patients who are not enrolled in the trial in certain circumstances. Pursuant to the 21st Century Cures Act, or Cures Act, which was signed into law in December 2016, the manufacturer of an unapproved, investigational drug for a serious disease or condition is required to make public and readily available, such as by posting on its website, its policy on evaluating and responding to requests for individual patient access to such investigational drug. This requirement applies upon initiation of a Phase 2 or Phase 3 trial of the investigational drug.

Concurrent with clinical trials, companies usually complete additional animal studies and must also develop additional information about the physical characteristics of the biological product as well as finalize a process for manufacturing the product in commercial quantities in accordance with cGMP requirements. To help reduce the risk of the introduction of adventitious agents with the use of biological products, the Public Health Service Act emphasizes the importance of manufacturing control for products whose attributes cannot be precisely defined. The manufacturing process must be capable of consistently producing quality batches of the product candidate and, among other things, the sponsor must develop methods for testing the identity, strength, quality, potency, and purity of the final biological product. Additionally, appropriate packaging must be selected and tested and stability studies must be conducted to demonstrate that the biological product candidate does not undergo unacceptable deterioration over its shelf life.

After completion of the required clinical testing, a BLA is prepared and submitted to the FDA. FDA review and approval of the BLA is required before the marketing of the product may begin in the U.S. The BLA must include the results of all nonclinical, clinical, and other testing, as well as a compilation of data relating to the quality and manufacture of the product, including, chemistry, manufacturing, and controls ("CMC") information demonstrating the safety, purity and potency, or efficacy, of the product. The cost of preparing and submitting a BLA is substantial. Under federal law, the submission of most BLAs is subject to an application user fee, as well as an annual prescription drug product program user fee, which may total several million dollars; these fees generally are increased annually.

The FDA has 60 days from its receipt of a BLA to determine whether the application will be accepted for filing based on the agency's threshold determination that the application is sufficiently complete to permit substantive review. Once the application is accepted for filing, the FDA begins an in-depth review. The FDA has agreed to certain performance goals in its review of BLAs, including to review 90 percent of standard BLAs within 10 months from the date the application is accepted for filing. Although the FDA often meets its user fee performance goals, the FDA can extend these timelines as warranted. The FDA usually refers applications for novel biologics, or biologics which present difficult questions of safety or efficacy, to an advisory committee (typically a panel that includes clinicians and other experts) for review, evaluation, and a recommendation as to whether the application should be approved. The FDA is not bound by the recommendation of the advisory committee, but it generally follows such recommendations. Before approving a BLA, the FDA will typically inspect one, or more, clinical sites to assure compliance with GCPs. Additionally, the FDA typically will inspect the facility or facilities at which the biologic is manufactured as part of a pre-license inspection. The FDA will not approve the product unless it verifies that compliance with cGMP requirements is satisfactory and that the BLA contains data that provides substantial evidence that the biologic is safe, pure, and potent, or effective, for its intended use.

For certain products, the FDA also will not approve the product if the manufacturer is not in compliance with Good Tissue Practice ("GTP") requirements. GTP requirements are set forth in the FDA regulations that govern the methods used in, and the facilities and controls used for, the manufacture of HCT/Ps, which are human cells or tissue intended for implantation, transplant, infusion, or transfer into a human recipient. The primary intent of the GTP requirements is to ensure that cell and tissue-based products are manufactured in a manner designed to prevent the introduction, transmission and spread of communicable disease. FDA regulations also require tissue establishments to register and list their HCT/Ps with the FDA and, when applicable, to evaluate donors through screening and testing. To assure compliance with cGMP, GTP and GCP requirements, an applicant must expend significant time, money, and effort in the areas of training, record keeping, production, and quality control.

After the FDA evaluates the BLA and the manufacturing facilities, it issues either an approval letter or a complete response letter. A complete response letter means that the BLA will not be approved in its present form and generally outlines the deficiencies in the submission. Complete responses may require substantial additional testing, or information, in order for the FDA to reconsider the application. If and when those deficiencies have been addressed to the FDA's satisfaction, the FDA will issue an approval letter. The agency generally will review such resubmissions within two or six months, depending on the type of information included in the resubmission. The FDA's approval is never guaranteed, and the agency may refuse to approve a BLA if regulatory requirements are not satisfied.

An approval letter authorizes commercial marketing of the biologic with specific prescribing information for specific indications. The approval of a biologic may be significantly more limited than requested in the application, including limitations on the specific diseases and dosages or the indications for use, which could restrict the commercial value of the product. The FDA may also require that certain contraindications, warnings, or precautions be included in the product labeling. In addition, as a condition of BLA approval, the FDA may require a Risk Evaluation and Mitigation Strategy ("REMS") to help ensure that the benefits of the biologic outweigh potential risks. A REMS can include medication guides, communication plans for healthcare professionals, and elements to assure safe use ("ETASU"). ETASU can include, but are not limited to, special training or certification for prescribing or dispensing, distribution controls, dispensing only under certain circumstances, special monitoring, and the use of patient registries. The requirement for a REMS (or use of a companion diagnostic with a biologic) can materially affect the potential market and profitability of the biologic. Moreover, product approval may require, as a condition of approval, substantial post-approval testing and surveillance to monitor the biologic's safety or efficacy. Once granted, product approvals may be withdrawn if compliance with regulatory requirements and standards is not maintained, or problems are identified following initial marketing.

Facilities manufacturing biological products for commercial distribution must be registered with the FDA. In addition to describing the preclinical studies and clinical trials of the biologic product, the BLA includes a description of the facilities, equipment and personnel involved in the manufacturing process. A biologics license, which is the product's approval, is granted on the basis of inspections of the facilities where the product is manufactured. The primary focus of such inspections is compliance with cGMPs and the facility's ability to consistently manufacture the product in the facility in accordance with the BLA. If the FDA finds the results of the inspection to be unsatisfactory, it may decline to approve the BLA, resulting in a delay in production and commercialization of products.

Product Approval in the UK

We are currently focused on obtaining regulatory and marketing approval for MACI in the United Kingdom through the MHRA and, if successful, anticipate commercializing MACI in the UK in 2027. MACI is regulated by the MHRA as an advanced therapy medicinal product. As of January 1, 2021, European Union law no longer directly applies in the UK. The UK has adopted existing European Union medicines regulation as standalone UK legislation with some amendments to reflect procedural and other requirements with respect to marketing authorizations and other regulatory provisions. The MHRA has introduced changes to national licensing procedures, including procedures to prioritize access to new medicines that will benefit patients, an accelerated assessment procedure and new routes of evaluation for novel products and biotechnology products.

On January 1, 2024, the MHRA implemented a new international recognition procedure ("IRP"), which enables applicants who have already received marketing authorization for a medicinal product from a specified "Reference Regulator" to obtain UK authorization through a streamlined assessment process. The procedure applies to marketing authorization applications for chemical and biological new active substances, known active substances, generic applications, hybrid applications, biosimilar applications, and new fixed combination products. Reference Regulators include the FDA (United States), the Therapeutic Goods Administration (Australia), Health Canada (Canada), SwissMedic (Switzerland), the Health Science Authority (Singapore), the Pharmaceuticals and Medical Devices Agency (Japan), and the European Medicines Agency, along with EU/EEA Member State Competent Authorities.

The IRP features two recognition routes with distinct eligibility requirements and timelines. Recognition Route A follows a 60-day timetable (with no clock stop) and is available when the Reference Regulator approval was granted within the previous two years, the manufacturing process remains the same as that approved by the Reference Regulator, and none of the Recognition B criteria apply. Recognition Route B follows a 110-day timetable (with one clock stop at day 70) and applies when the Reference Regulator approval was granted within the previous 10 years and at least one of 24 specified criteria is met. These criteria include situations where the Reference Regulator granted a conditional or exceptional circumstances authorization; additional manufacturing sites have been cited that were not assessed by the Reference Regulator; substantial changes exist in the manufacturing process or analytical methods; the environmental risk assessment or risk management plan was not assessed by the Reference Regulator; the product is a first-in-class new active substance, an advanced therapy medicinal product, or a fractionated plasma product; or the application seeks orphan drug designation.

Humanitarian Device Exemption

Unless an exemption applies, each medical device commercially distributed in the U.S. requires either a substantial equivalence determination under a premarket notification submission pursuant to Section 510(k) of the FFDCA, or approval of a premarket approval application ("PMA"). The FDA provides an incentive for the development of certain devices intended to benefit patients by treating or diagnosing a disease or condition that affects or is manifested in not more than 8,000 individuals in the U.S. per year. These devices receive a HUD designation and may be eligible for marketing approval under an HDE application. An HDE application is a premarket approval application that seeks an exemption from the effectiveness requirement that would otherwise apply to the application. FDA approval of an HDE application authorizes the applicant to market the device.

To obtain marketing approval for a HUD, an HDE application is submitted to the FDA. An HDE application is similar in both form and content to a PMA application in that the applicant must demonstrate a reasonable assurance of safety, but in an HDE application, the applicant seeks an exemption from the PMA requirement to demonstrate reasonable assurance of effectiveness. An HDE application is not required to contain the results of scientifically valid clinical investigations demonstrating that the device is effective for its intended purpose. The application, however, must contain sufficient information for the FDA to determine that the device does not pose an unreasonable or significant risk of illness or injury, and that the probable benefit to health outweighs the risk of injury or illness from its use, taking into account the probable risks and benefits of currently available devices or alternative forms of treatment. Additionally, the applicant must demonstrate that no comparable devices are available to treat or diagnose the disease or condition, and that they could not otherwise bring the device to market.

Except in certain circumstances, HUDs approved under an HDE cannot be sold for profit, i.e., for an amount that exceeds the costs of research and development, fabrication, and distribution of the device. Under the current HDE provision, as amended by the Food and Drug Administration Safety and Innovation Act (the "FDASIA"), a device is eligible to be sold for profit after receiving HDE approval if the device is intended for the treatment or diagnosis of a disease or condition that occurs in pediatric patients or in a pediatric subpopulation, and such device is labeled for use in pediatric patients or in a pediatric subpopulation in which the disease or condition occurs; or is intended for the treatment or diagnosis of a disease or condition that does not occur in pediatric patients or that occurs in pediatric patients in such numbers that the development of the device for such patients is impossible, highly impracticable, or unsafe. If the FDA determines that a HUD meets the eligibility criteria, the HUD is permitted to be sold for profit after receiving HDE approval so long as the number of devices distributed in any calendar year does not exceed the FDA-determined Annual Distribution Number ("ADN") for the device. The holder of the HDE must immediately notify the FDA if the number of devices distributed during a calendar year exceeds the ADN. The ADN is determined by the FDA (i) when the agency approves the original HDE application, or (ii) when the agency approves an HDE supplement for an HDE approved before the enactment of FDASIA if the HDE holder seeks a determination based upon the profit-making eligibility criteria, and the FDA determines that the HUD meets the eligibility criteria.

Post-Approval Requirements

Maintaining substantial compliance with applicable federal, state, local, and foreign statutes and regulations requires the expenditure of substantial time and financial resources. Rigorous and extensive FDA regulation of biological products and devices continues after approval, particularly with respect to cGMPs. We will rely, and expect to continue to rely, on third parties to manufacture or supply certain components, equipment, disposable devices, testing and other materials used in our manufacturing process for any products that we commercialize or may commercialize. With respect to NexoBrid, we will rely on MediWound to source supplies for the manufacture and to manufacture the product to support our commercialization efforts in the U.S. Manufacturers of our products are required to comply with applicable cGMP requirements, including quality control, quality assurance and maintenance of records and documentation. We cannot be certain that we, MediWound, or our

SUMMARY OF RISKS ASSOCIATED WITH OUR BUSINESS

An investment in shares of our Class A common stock involves a high degree of risk. Below is a list of some of the material risks associated with our business. This summary does not address all of the risks that we face. Additional discussion of the risks listed in this summary, as well as other risks that we face, is set forth under Part I, Item 1A, "Risk Factors" in this Annual Report on Form 10-K:

- We have completed a limited number of clinical trials for our lead product candidate, atacicept, and have no products approved for commercial sale, which may make it difficult to evaluate our current business and predict our future success and viability.
- We will require substantial additional capital to finance our operations. If we are unable to raise such capital when needed, or on acceptable terms, we may be forced to delay, reduce and/or eliminate one or more of our research and drug development programs of our product candidates or future commercialization efforts.
- We have incurred net losses since inception, and we expect to continue to incur net losses for the foreseeable future. In addition, we may be unable to continue as a going concern over the long-term.
- The terms of our loan agreement place restrictions on our operating and financial flexibility. If we raise additional capital through debt financing, the terms of any new debt could further restrict our ability to operate our business.
- We are substantially dependent on the success of our product candidates, atacicept and MAU868, which are currently in the clinical development stage, and VT-109, which is in the pre-clinical development stage. If we are unable to complete development of, obtain regulatory approval for and commercialize our product candidates in one or more indications and in a timely manner, our business, financial condition, results of operations and prospects will be significantly harmed.
- Enrollment and retention of participants in clinical trials is an expensive and time-consuming process and could be made more difficult or rendered impossible by multiple factors outside our control, including difficulties in identifying patients with IgAN, the availability of competitive products, and significant competition for recruiting participants in clinical trials.
- The incidence and prevalence for target patient populations of our product candidates in specific indications are based on estimates and third-party sources. If the market opportunities for atacicept, MAU868, VT-109, or any future product candidate we may develop, if and when approved, are smaller than we estimate or if any approval that we obtain is based on a narrower definition of the patient population, our revenue and ability to achieve profitability might be materially and adversely affected.
- Interim, initial, "top-line" and preliminary data from our clinical trials that we announce or publish from time to time may change as more participant data become available and are subject to audit and verification procedures that could result in material changes in the final data.
- We face significant competition, which may result in others discovering, developing or commercializing products before or more successfully than us.
- Changes in methods of manufacturing or formulation of our product candidates may result in additional costs or delays.
- Our product candidates may cause significant adverse events, toxicities or other undesirable side effects when used alone or in combination with other approved products or investigational new drugs that may result in a safety profile that could inhibit regulatory approval, prevent market acceptance, limit their commercial potential or result in significant negative consequences.
- Even if any product candidate we develop receives regulatory approval, it could be subject to significant post-marketing regulatory requirements and will be subject to continued regulatory oversight.
- Biosimilars to our product candidates may provide competition sooner than anticipated.
- Unfavorable geopolitical and global economic conditions could adversely affect our business, financial condition and results of operations.

- Our success is highly dependent on our ability to attract and retain highly skilled executive officers and employees and key consultants.
- We have never commercialized a product candidate before and may lack the necessary expertise, personnel, and resources to successfully commercialize any products on our own or together with suitable collaborators.
- Our success depends on our ability to protect our intellectual property and our proprietary technologies.
- If we breach our license agreement (Ares Agreement) with Ares Trading S.A. (Ares), an affiliate of Merck KGaA, Darmstadt, Germany, related to atacicept, or the license agreement with Novartis International Pharmaceutical AG (Novartis) related to MAU868, or the license agreement with the Board of Trustees of Leland Stanford Junior University (Stanford) related to VT-109, we could lose the ability to continue the development and commercialization of atacicept, MAU868, or VT-109, respectively.
- We may be required to make significant payments under our license agreements related to atacicept, MAU868, and VT-109.
- If the scope of any patent protection we obtain is not sufficiently broad, or if we lose any of our patent protection, our ability to prevent our competitors from commercializing similar or identical product candidates would be adversely affected.
- Patent terms may be inadequate to protect our competitive position on atacicept, MAU868, VT-109, or any future product candidates we may develop for an adequate amount of time.
- We rely, and expect to continue to rely, on third parties, including independent clinical investigators and CROs, to conduct certain aspects of our nonclinical studies and clinical trials. If these third parties do not successfully carry out their contractual duties, comply with applicable regulatory requirements or meet expected deadlines, we may not be able to obtain regulatory approval for or commercialize atacicept, MAU868, VT-109, or future product candidates we may develop and our business, financial condition, results of operations and prospects could be significantly harmed.
- The manufacture of drugs is complex and our third-party manufacturers may encounter difficulties in production. If any of our third-party manufacturers encounter such difficulties, our ability to provide adequate supply of our product candidates for clinical trials or our product for patients, if approved, could be delayed or prevented.
- If we engage in future acquisitions or strategic partnerships, this may increase our capital requirements, dilute our stockholders, cause us to incur debt or assume contingent liabilities, and subject us to other risks.
- The price of our common stock may be volatile, and you could lose all or part of your investment.
- We no longer qualify as an "emerging growth company" or a "smaller reporting company" and, as a result, we will no longer be able to avail ourselves of certain reduced disclosure requirements applicable to emerging growth companies and/or smaller reporting companies.
- If we experience material weaknesses in internal control over financial reporting in the future or otherwise fail to maintain an effective system of internal controls in the future, we may not be able to accurately or timely report our financial condition or results of operations, which may adversely affect investor confidence in us and, as a result, the value of our common stock.
- Our principal stockholders and management own a significant percentage of our outstanding voting stock and will be able to exert significant control over matters subject to stockholder approval.
- Provisions in our amended and restated certificate of incorporation and amended and restated bylaws and Delaware law could make an acquisition of us, which may be beneficial to our stockholders, more difficult and may prevent attempts by our stockholders to replace or remove our current management.
- We may be subject to securities litigation, which is expensive and could divert management attention.

PART I

Item 1. Business.

Overview

We are a late clinical-stage biotechnology company focused on developing and commercializing transformative treatments for patients with serious immunological diseases. Our lead product candidate, atacicept, a fully humanized TACI-Fc fusion protein that binds both B-cell activating factor (BAFF) and A proliferation-inducing ligand (APRIL) and is self-administered subcutaneously, is currently being evaluated for the treatment of immunoglobulin A nephropathy (IgAN). We are conducting ORIGIN 3, the pivotal Phase 3 trial of atacicept 150 mg in IgAN, and in September 2024 completed enrollment of the initial cohort of 200 participants that will provide data for the 36-week urine protein creatinine ratio (UPCR) primary efficacy endpoint. We expect to announce primary endpoint results in the second quarter of 2025, supporting our planned submission for regulatory approval later in 2025. The Phase 2b ORIGIN clinical trial evaluated the safety and efficacy of atacicept in 116 participants with IgAN and reported positive results at 24 weeks in January 2023, 36 weeks in June 2023, and 96 weeks in October 2024. The trial remained blinded through 36 weeks, after which all participants were eligible for the open label extension portion of the study and received atacicept 150 mg through 96 weeks. At 24 and 36 weeks, atacicept met its primary and key secondary endpoints, respectively, with statistically significant reductions in UPCR, and stable estimated glomerular filtration rate (eGFR) was observed with clinically meaningful and statistically significant difference for participants on atacicept versus placebo. Participants treated with atacicept demonstrated reductions in galactose-deficient IgA1 (Gd-IgA1), the autoantigen produced by B cells in patients with IgAN, and a reduction in hematuria. The improvements in Gd-IgA1, hematuria, UPCR and eGFR represent the quartet of findings consistent with IgAN disease modification. The 96-week open label extension results showed consistent and sustained reductions in Gd-IgA1, hematuria, and UPCR, with continued eGFR stabilization at a rate similar to the general population without kidney disease. Additionally, atacicept's safety profile was comparable to placebo. We believe that atacicept has pipeline in a molecule potential, with potential application in multiple diseases. Based on data from the Phase 2b ORIGIN trial, the US FDA granted Breakthrough Therapy Designation to atacicept for the treatment of IgAN. We have also committed to providing long-term access to atacicept for all ORIGIN participants by initiating ORIGIN EXTEND, a long-term Phase 2 extension study that offers open-label atacicept to participants who completed ORIGIN Phase 2b or 3 until commercial availability in their country or region. We will be evaluating atacicept in non-IgAN autoimmune kidney diseases, including primary membranous nephropathy (pMN), focal segmental glomerulosclerosis (FSGS) and minimal change disease (MCD), in the Phase 2 PIONEER clinical trial that will initiate in 2025, in patients with anti-PLA2R antibodies or other autoantibodies. Potential other future indications include several rheumatologic diseases such as systemic lupus erythematosus and Sjogren's disease, and hematologic diseases, including idiopathic thrombocytopenic purpura and autoimmune hemolytic anemia. We also hold worldwide, exclusive development and commercial rights to MAU868, a potentially first-in-class monoclonal antibody to treat reactivated BK virus (BKV) infections for which we completed a Phase 2 clinical trial in 2022, and in January 2025, we acquired field-limited, worldwide, exclusive development and commercial rights to VT-109, a novel, next-generation dual BAFF/APRIL inhibitor that is in preclinical development. We believe that our current pipeline programs leverage the deep expertise of our team and have strong potential commercial synergies. We hold global developmental and commercial rights to all of our pipeline molecules.

Atacicept in IgAN

IgAN is a serious and progressive autoimmune disease of the kidney that is driven by the production of Gd-IgA1 and its corresponding autoantigen produced by B cells. IgAN is associated with a high risk of kidney-related morbidity and mortality. We estimate there will be approximately 157,000 biopsy-confirmed IgAN patients in the United States, 136,000 in Europe, and 130,000 in Japan, at estimated peak year of sales. Up to 50% of patients diagnosed with IgAN develop end-stage renal disease (ESRD) within 20 years from initial diagnosis, requiring dialysis or kidney transplant. ESRD causes considerable morbidity and impact on patients' lives and represents a significant health economic burden, which was estimated to be $70.6 billion in the United States in 2022. Despite this high level of morbidity, only three treatments have been approved for this indication: TARPEYO (budesonide, developed by Calliditas Therapeutics AB), a reformulated steroid, FILSPARI (sparsentan, developed by Travere Therapeutics), a dual endothelin angiotensin receptor antagonist, and FABHALTA (iptacopan, developed by Novartis), a complement inhibitor. None of these agents have been shown to reduce the rate of eGFR decline to a level that minimized the lifetime risk of kidney failure, and thus are not disease-modifying treatments in IgAN. The current standard of care continues to consist of non-specific CKD therapies such as off-label use of renin-angiotensin-aldosterone system (RAAS) inhibitors, including angiotensin-converting enzyme (ACE) inhibitors and angiotensin II receptor blockers (ARBs), and, in some patients, sodium-glucose cotransporter-2 (SGLT2) inhibitors. We estimate the global market opportunity for novel, disease-modifying therapeutics in IgAN is approximately $6.0 billion to $10.0 billion annually, based on the disease prevalence and the segment of IgAN patients at high risk of progressing to ESRD.

Atacicept is a TACI-Fc fusion protein self-administered at home as a subcutaneous injection once weekly that blocks both BAFF and APRIL, which stimulate B cells to produce autoantibodies contributing to certain autoimmune diseases. We believe that atacicept's mechanism has the potential to generate clinical success by measures designed to assess efficacy in IgAN and other immunologic diseases. BAFF inhibition has been clinically and commercially validated through the approval of Benlysta (belimumab) in both systemic lupus erythematosus (SLE) and lupus nephritis (LN). Preclinical and clinical evidence support that atacicept's mechanism of dual inhibition of BAFF and APRIL may provide improved clinical outcomes, measured by endpoints designed to assess efficacy, compared to inhibiting either signal alone. Atacicept has the potential to be the first disease-modifying therapy for IgAN due to its ability to precisely modulate B cell activity, with reductions in Gd-IgA1, hematuria, and proteinuria – and stabilization of eGFR.

We have worldwide, exclusive rights to atacicept from Ares, an affiliate of Merck KGaA, Darmstadt, Germany, pursuant to the Ares Agreement, which advanced atacicept in randomized, double-blind, placebo-controlled clinical trials for several autoimmune diseases in over 1,500 patients, in which it was well tolerated. In IgAN, Merck KGaA, Darmstadt, Germany, conducted a randomized, double-blind, placebo-controlled Phase 2a trial known as JANUS. Results from the JANUS trial showed a dose-dependent effect of atacicept 25 mg and 75 mg weekly on serum Gd-IgA1, proteinuria, and key biomarkers, including serum Ig levels. As reported at the American Society of Nephrology (ASN) Kidney Week conference in 2022, atacicept is also the first therapeutic candidate in IgAN to show reduction in all first three hits of disease pathogenesis—serum Gd-IgA1, anti-Gd-IgA1 autoantibody, and immune complex levels.

We are conducting a multinational, randomized, double-blind, placebo-controlled Phase 3 clinical trial in IgAN, which we refer to as ORIGIN 3, and have completed the open label extension of our Phase 2b clinical trial in IgAN, which we refer to as ORIGIN 2b. The ORIGIN 3 trial is evaluating atacicept 150 mg by weekly subcutaneous injection at home versus placebo through 104 weeks. The primary endpoint is reduction in UPCR in a 24-hour urine collection versus placebo at 36 weeks to support potential accelerated approval. A significant reduction in proteinuria, as measured by UPCR in a 24-hour urine collection, is associated with improved renal outcomes in patients with IgAN. UPCR is a surrogate endpoint accepted by the FDA for primary glomerular diseases associated with significant proteinuria, including IgAN. Given the FDA's recent approvals of TARPEYO and FILSPARI, we believe the use of proteinuria as a surrogate endpoint for accelerated approval has been validated. The key secondary endpoint is eGFR change up to week 104.

The ORIGIN 2b trial evaluated three subcutaneous weekly doses of atacicept (25 mg, 75 mg and 150 mg) and their impact on the reduction of proteinuria as measured by UPCR as the primary endpoint, with secondary endpoints including the difference in kidney function between treated and placebo participants as measured by eGFR and reduction in Gd-IgA1. We completed enrollment of the Phase 2b ORIGIN trial in mid-2022, enrolling a total of 116 participants at multiple global sites. In January 2023, we announced that atacicept met the primary endpoint: the pooled 75 mg and 150 mg arms achieved a statistically significant reduction in proteinuria versus placebo at 24 weeks. In June 2023, we announced positive results at 36 weeks in a late-breaking presentation at the European Renal Association (ERA) Conference. In a prespecified per-protocol (PP) analysis in which a blinded third-party CRO identified and excluded participants with protocol deviations, atacicept 150 mg achieved a 43% mean reduction in proteinuria versus placebo, and a 35% mean reduction in proteinuria versus placebo in the intent-to-treat (ITT) population. Stable eGFR was observed for participants on atacicept 150 mg at 36 weeks, with an 11% mean eGFR change versus placebo, approximating to an absolute difference of 5.8 mL/min/1.73m2. Atacicept 150 mg reduced Gd-IgA1 64% from baseline and resolved hematuria in 80% of participants receiving atacicept 150 mg compared to 5% of those receiving placebo. Furthermore, Atacicept was well tolerated, and its safety profile in IgAN was comparable to placebo. The ORIGIN 2b trial remained blinded through 36 weeks, after which all participants were eligible to roll onto the open label portion of the trial and receive atacicept 150 mg once weekly through 96 weeks, allowing for the evaluation of long-term safety and durability of response of atacicept in IgAN. In October 2024, we simultaneously announced positive results through 96 weeks with a late breaking presentation at ASN Kidney Week and a publication in the Journal of the American Society of Nephrology (JASN). Through 96 weeks of treatment, atacicept demonstrated further reductions in Gd-IgA1, hematuria resolution, reductions in UPCR, and eGFR stabilization at a rate of decline similar to the general population without kidney disease. The open label extension adverse events profile was consistent with the randomized period. In aggregate, we believe these data provide evidence that atacicept offers a potential safe, long-term, disease-modifying treatment for patients with IgAN.

We completed full enrollment for the primary endpoint of ORIGIN 3 in the second half of 2024. With Phase 3 topline results expected in the second quarter of 2025, if positive, we expect to submit a biologics license application (BLA) for atacicept in IgAN to the FDA in the second half of 2025.

Pipeline

Beyond our lead indication in IgA nephropathy, we have several late-stage opportunities for potential patient benefit – consisting of both indication expansion opportunities for atacicept, and the development of VT-109 in B cell mediated diseases and MAU868 for BK viremia among kidney transplant recipients. We are currently evaluating these opportunities for future development.

For atacicept, we plan to evaluate the possibility of extended dosing intervals as part of our life cycle management strategy. There are also multiple indications in which blocking BAFF and APRIL may offer therapeutic benefit and offer an attractive commercial opportunity.

In January 2025, we announced a license agreement with Stanford University to acquire global rights to VT-109, a novel, next generation fusion protein targeting BAFF and APRIL that is in preclinical development with wide therapeutic potential across the spectrum of B cell mediated diseases. These rights are for all therapeutic, prophylactic, diagnostic, and treatment uses in humans outside of cancer immunotherapy.

Regarding MAU868 for BK viremia among kidney transplant recipients, at ASN Kidney Week 2022, final results from the Phase 2 clinical trial of MAU868 versus placebo showed that MAU868 was well tolerated and demonstrated clinically meaningful reductions in BK antiviral activity through 36 weeks in kidney transplant patients with BK viremia. Following feedback from the FDA on the Phase 2 clinical trial, we are evaluating strategies for continued development, including a potential next clinical trial.

MAU868 in BK viremia among kidney transplant recipients

We have exclusive worldwide rights, pursuant to the Novartis license, to MAU868, which is a potential treatment for reactivated BK infection in kidney transplant recipients. While up to 90% of healthy adults have been infected with BKV at some point in their lives, it remains latent except in severely immunocompromised populations such as kidney transplant recipients. BKV is a polyoma virus that can cause BKV nephropathy (BKVN), a condition in which BK infection, typically first identified as BK viremia, triggers inflammation, which then progresses to fibrosis and tubular injury; BKVN is a leading cause of allograft loss. Currently, there are no approved treatment options for BK viremia or BKVN. We estimate that approximately 80,000 kidney transplants are conducted globally each year, with approximately 20,000 in the United States, 20,000 in Europe, 1,500 in Japan, and 10,000 in China. Approximately 15% of kidney transplant recipients develop BK viremia; 3–4% of kidney transplant recipients develop BKVN. We estimate the market for a novel agent to treat reactivated BK infection in kidney transplant recipients to be a large commercial opportunity worldwide. We believe that MAU868 has the potential to become standard of care for the treatment of reactivated BK infection in order to prevent devastating consequences following kidney transplantation such as BKVN and graft loss.

Our business principles and strategy

Our goal is to develop and commercialize transformative treatments for patients suffering from severe immunological diseases. We believe the successful translation of biomedical science into innovative therapeutic products for patients with immunological diseases will enable outsized growth over the next decade and beyond. Specifically, our strategy is based on the following business principles:

- Develop disease-modifying medicines to improve patients' lives. Our team seeks to bring transformative medical products to patients with severe immunological diseases, who often receive steroids as the current standard of care. The non-specific immunosuppressive effect of steroids, with known acute and chronic side effects, presents an important opportunity for innovation. We aim to develop and commercialize disease-modifying drugs that target the source of disease, minimize side effects, and have high potential to meaningfully change standard medical care and improve patients' lives.
- Establish clear line-of-sight to successful products. We apply our deep drug development experience, scientific rigor, and disciplined decision making to establish clear line-of-sight along the full spectrum of drug development. We pursue biologic targets, product candidates, and disease indications with a strong scientific rationale, de-risked profile, and capital-efficient development pathway, and optimize for high probability of clinical, regulatory, and commercial success.
- Build a leading biotech company that delivers innovative medicines to patients. We believe our team's expertise and our business culture are fundamental to our success. Our Research and Development and Commercial teams are led by experienced drug development executives with proven track records in clinical and commercial development who have led or been involved in the approvals of more than 15 medicines from leading companies, including Gilead Sciences and Amgen. We leverage our team's know-how with additional outsourced resources and enable focused clinical development of our product candidates with the goal of improving patients' lives.

These principles have guided us to the successful in-licensing of atacicept from Ares, VT-109 from Stanford University, and obtaining the rights to MAU868 from Pfizer, in each case with worldwide rights for development and commercialization. We take a gated-capital raise approach and scale product candidate investment and exposure in close step with key development milestones to ensure high return on development costs.

The near- and long-term objectives to achieve our goal include:

- Complete global development of atacicept in IgAN. We reported positive 96-week results from the open label extension of the ORIGIN Phase 2b clinical trial in October 2024. We completed enrollment for the primary endpoint cohort of our global pivotal Phase 3 clinical trial in September 2024 and full enrollment is projected in Q2 2025. We anticipate primary endpoint results in the second quarter of 2025. If positive, we expect to submit a biologics license application (BLA) for atacicept in IgAN to the FDA in the second half of 2025. We have also committed to providing access to atacicept for all global ORIGIN participants until atacicept is available in their region through the ORIGIN EXTEND study. The PIONEER study will evaluate atacicept in an expanded IgAN population beyond the ORIGIN program. We anticipate clinical results from the ORIGIN EXTEND and PIONEER studies in 2025 and 2026.
- Build and scale organizational capabilities to support commercialization of atacicept. Under the leadership of our experienced management team, we are building a specialized commercial organization with deep launch experience in nephrology, B cell, and autoimmune therapeutics, to launch atacicept in the United States and other key markets, if approved. During 2024, we hired a Chief Commercial Officer and Executive Vice President, Commercial, to lead this organization.

- Explore additional disease areas where atacicept holds significant therapeutic promise. By targeting BAFF and APRIL, atacicept's ability to reduce disease-causing autoantibodies may provide clinical benefit. We intend to explore additional immunologic diseases where BAFF and APRIL are abnormally elevated, or where autoantibodies play an important role.
- Advance the development of VT-109 and explore its potential in multiple B-cell mediated diseases. We acquired rights to this novel, next-generation dual BAFF/APRIL inhibitor in January 2025 and plan to leverage our research, translational medicine, clinical development and commercial expertise in developing this program.

Atacicept in IgAN

We are developing atacicept as a potential treatment for patients with IgAN, a serious and progressive autoimmune disease of the kidney with a high unmet medical need and limited treatment options available. Up to 50% of confirmed IgAN patients progress to ESRD, requiring dialysis or kidney transplant. ESRD causes significant morbidity and impact on patients' lives and represents a significant health economic burden estimated to be over $70 billion annually in the United States. Despite this high level of morbidity, the current standard of care consists of non-IgAN specific CKD therapies, including off-label use of RAAS inhibitors (ACE inhibitors and ARBs), increasing use of SGLT2 inhibitors, and potentially steroids. IgAN is driven by the production of pathogenic Gd-IgA1, and patients with elevated Gd-IgA1 are at increased risk of kidney-related morbidity and mortality. We reported positive topline 24-week results in January 2023, 36-week results in June 2023, and 96-week results in October 2024 from the Phase 2b ORIGIN trial. We initiated a pivotal Phase 3 clinical trial in the second quarter of 2023, which we refer to as ORIGIN 3, that is currently ongoing. We believe that atacicept has the potential to be the best-in-class, leading B-cell modulator therapy for IgAN.

Pathophysiology of IgAN

The IgA antibody plays a key role in the immune system by protecting the body from foreign substances such as bacteria and viruses. Patients with IgAN produce elevated levels of Gd-IgA1. This abnormal glycosylation pattern of IgA1 is of central importance to the disease etiology.

As shown in Figure 1 below, a multi-step process leads to the ultimate development of progressive renal injury.

(1) B cells, which mature into plasma cells, are abnormally primed in the Peyer's patch region of the ileum of the intestines, potentially due to a combination of genetic predisposition and environmental, bacterial or dietary factors. BAFF and APRIL are upregulated, leading to B cell maturation and survival, and antibody class switching, a mechanism that changes cells' production from one immunoglobulin to another, causing an increase in the production of immunogenic Gd-IgA1.

(2) The Gd-IgA1 antibodies are immunogenic when found in the systemic circulation, and are recognized as an autoantigen by autoantibodies, or antibodies created by the body in response to a constituent of its own tissue.

(3) Gd-IgA1 and anti-Gd-IgA1 autoantibodies combine to form pathogenic immune complexes, or clusters of antibodies.

(4) Pathogenic immune complexes are deposited and become trapped in the kidney's glomeruli. This initiates an inflammatory response that damages the membranes.

(5) As the glomeruli are destroyed, the kidney's ability to remove waste products from the blood is reduced, and protein and blood leak into the urine. This can result in potentially life-threatening complications that lead to the need for dialysis or kidney transplant in many patients.

Gd-IgA1 is central to the pathogenesis of IgAN

Gd-IgA1 is a subclass of IgA antibodies that lack units of galactose, a type of sugar, at the O-linked glycans of their hinge region. The hinge region is a stretch of amino acids in the IgA antibody. Circulating Gd-IgA1 antibodies have been shown to be the target of autoantigens for IgG antibodies with specificity for the hinge region.

A histopathological hallmark of IgAN is deposition of Gd-IgA1 in the glomerular mesangium, either alone or in combination with IgG and/or IgM. Sampling of the serum of patients with IgAN has confirmed the presence of elevated levels of circulating immune complexes containing Gd-IgA1.

Clinical trials of patients with IgAN have correlated higher serum levels of Gd-IgA1 with greater severity of IgAN disease, suggesting that reduction in serum Gd-IgA1 may slow disease progression. Compared with healthy subjects, patients with IgAN have an increased proportion of Gd-IgA1 O-glycoforms in the serum. As published in Kidney International, in a prospective study of 275 patients with IgAN, higher serum levels of aberrantly glycosylated IgA1 demonstrated correlation with a higher likelihood of developing progressive renal failure, as shown in Figure 2 below. A separate clinical trial of patients with IgAN of varying severity found that higher titers of autoantibodies specific for Gd-IgA1 corresponded to both absolute renal risk score and risk of ESRD or death.

In addition, high serum APRIL levels correlate with increased expression of serum Gd-IgA1 in IgAN patients and high serum BAFF levels are associated with more severe clinical features, as well as more severe histopathological features. For these reasons, we believe a fusion protein that blocks both BAFF and APRIL, which has the potential to reduce serum Gd-IgA1, would address the upstream source of IgAN, and represent the first disease-modifying approach for IgAN.

Disease burden, diagnosis, and predictors of disease progression

IgAN is a rare disease in the United States and Europe and is also the predominant cause of primary glomerulonephritis. Patients with IgAN are diagnosed throughout life, but most commonly in the second and third decades. There are three common ways in which patients present:

- 40–50% present with one or more episodes of gross (visible) hematuria, often linked to an upper respiratory tract infection.
- 30–40% present with microscopic hematuria and mild proteinuria, which is detected in a routine physical or during chronic kidney disease evaluation.
- Less than 10% present with either nephrotic syndrome or an acute, rapidly progressive glomerulonephritis with symptoms including edema, hypertension, renal insufficiency, and hematuria.

Once IgAN is suspected based on clinical history and laboratory data, kidney biopsy, which is the gold standard for IgAN diagnosis, is performed.

IgAN market opportunity

We estimate there will be approximately 157,000 biopsy-confirmed IgAN patients in the United States, 136,000 in Europe, and 130,000 in Japan, at estimated peak year of sales, and that growth in the diagnosed prevalent population is due to overall population growth. Underlying genetic differences may contribute to the significantly higher rate in Japan. As therapies become commercially available, however, an increase in diagnosis rate or longer time to progression, due to better treatments, may increase the diagnosed population over time.

Current standard of care for IgAN patients

Despite the high unmet medical need in IgAN, there are limited treatment options available. The following two general approaches are typically employed for the treatment of patients with IgAN:

- Non-specific measures to slow progression, including RAAS inhibitors (including ACE inhibitors or ARBs) and SGLT2 inhibitors.

- Steroids with or without other immunosuppressive agents to non-specifically reduce inflammation as a result of immune complex deposition in the glomeruli.

Treatment is selected based on perceived risk of progressive kidney disease, and clinical measures such as hematuria, proteinuria, and eGFR are used to monitor patients while on treatment. The current standard of care is seen as insufficient by physicians and patients; these treatment approaches have limited clinical efficacy and are not well tolerated. Approximately 50% of patients fail to achieve controlled UPCR on ACE inhibitors, ARBS, or steroids. The use of steroids may cause significant side effects, including serious infections, high blood pressure, weight gain, diabetes, and osteoporosis. As such, there is a high unmet medical need for targeted therapies that impact the underlying disease pathophysiology and more tolerable, steroid-sparing treatment options for IgAN patients.

Emerging therapies in development

There are three agents approved for the treatment of IgAN and there are several treatments in clinical development. The multistep IgAN pathogenesis hypothesis offers potential target points and approaches for therapeutic intervention. Most therapeutic candidates in clinical development have employed various approaches to target inflammation and the downstream effects. Atacicept is the first agent in development for IgAN that has demonstrated a 64% reduction of Gd-IgA1, the upstream source of IgAN pathogenesis, after 36 weeks of treatment. Importantly, atacicept is the first agent in development to demonstrate Gd-IgA1 reductions, hematuria improvements, and UPCR reductions with eGFR stabilization at a rate of decline similar to the general population without kidney disease through 96 weeks, suggesting atacicept may offer a potential long-term, disease-modifying treatment for IgAN with a favorable safety profile.

These agents can be grouped mechanistically into the following categories: glucocorticoid receptor agonists, endothelin receptor antagonists (ERAs), complement inhibitors, B cell modulators, and a variety of other approaches that are earlier in development.

Glucocorticoid receptor agonists. Glucocorticoid receptor agonists are a well-known class of molecules that have broad anti-inflammatory effects, and well-established acute and chronic side effects. Though reduction in the risk of eGFR decline was shown in clinical trials, there is no consensus on whether glucocorticoids may improve renal survival. The glucocorticoid budesonide has been reformulated to concentrate steroid effects locally on the gut mucosa, theoretically suppressing the abnormal B cell activity and reducing systemic steroid toxicity. Reformulated budesonide is currently approved by the FDA and European Commission for reducing the loss of kidney function in adults with IgAN who are at risk for disease progression, though systemic steroid side effects have been observed in clinical trials.

ERAs. Aberrant endothelin signaling is implicated in structural podocyte changes and increased mesangial proliferation in chronic kidney diseases, including IgAN. ERAs block endothelin-induced cell proliferation and hence may reduce renal perfusion pressure and proteinuria. Since this mechanism of action works downstream of disease-related immune activities, it is not expected to reduce Gd-IgA1 or the resulting immune complexes that cause the disease. ERAs have previously been approved for the treatment of pulmonary arterial hypertension and erectile dysfunction and make use of a vasodilatory effect. One ERA that is currently approved by the FDA has a boxed warning for hepatotoxicity and embryo-fetal toxicity and a Risk Evaluation and Mitigation Strategies (REMS) assigned for liver toxicity, and another ERA is completing Phase 3 development. ERAs have been associated with edema, significant liver toxicity and increased risk of heart failure.

Complement inhibitors. Increased complement activation is commonly observed in patients with IgAN. It is hypothesized that immune-complex deposition in glomeruli may contribute to complement activation, though the exact mechanism is not well understood. Several agents that inhibit complement activation are in clinical development for IgAN. Modest reduction of proteinuria has been observed in early clinical trials. As complement inhibition works downstream of immune complex formation, these agents are not expected to impact the upstream cause of disease and reduce Gd-IgA1 or the resulting immune complexes that cause inflammation and complement activation in the kidney.

B cell modulators. B cell modulators, including atacicept, are an important category of emerging therapies for IgAN. The disease-causing Gd-IgA1 is predominantly produced by B cells. Therefore, control of B cell activation may reduce production of Gd-IgA1 and the downstream formation of autoantibodies and immune complexes. Preclinical models have shown that dual inhibition of BAFF and APRIL offers improved suppression of B cell activities over blocking BAFF or APRIL alone. Atacicept blocks both BAFF and APRIL and has shown substantial reduction (64% at 36 weeks) in Gd-IgA1. We believe that dual inhibition may also confer a potential dosing advantage versus APRIL-only inhibition.

Our solution: Atacicept

Atacicept is a fusion protein that blocks both BAFF and APRIL, which play key roles in the upstream pathway that causes IgAN and is dosed once weekly via a 1-mL subcutaneous injection, self-administered at home. As a result, we believe atacicept has the potential to be the first disease-modifying therapy for IgAN. Through an integrated analysis of randomized, double-blind, placebo-controlled clinical trials in multiple autoimmune diseases with over 1,500 participants to date, atacicept has a well-characterized clinical safety profile. We completed enrollment of participants in the Phase 2b ORIGIN trial in 2022, and we reported positive results at 24 weeks in January 2023, 36 weeks in June 2023, 72 weeks in January 2024, and 96 weeks in October 2024.

Our approach to IgAN: Reducing Gd-IgA1, the source of autoantibodies

Atacicept is a fully humanized fusion protein that is designed to modulate the B cell pathway, which has well characterized implications in immunologic diseases. Specifically, as shown in Figure 4 below, atacicept contains the soluble extracellular domain of the TACI receptor fused with the inactivated Fc domain of IgG1. TACI is a native receptor for BAFF and APRIL, members of the tumor necrosis factor family that promote B cell survival and autoantibody production associated with IgAN and other immunologic diseases. Dual blockade of BAFF and APRIL by TACI has been shown to be more potent than blocking BAFF alone or APRIL alone and has the benefit of targeting long-lived plasma cells, in addition to B cells, thus reducing production of Gd-IgA1 and its autoantibodies. Therefore, atacicept is designed to precisely modulate B cell activity by binding both BAFF and APRIL, and follows a long history of impactful agents that are logically designed Fc fusion proteins. This mechanism acts directly on the source of IgAN, which we believe will significantly mitigate the downstream effects of the disease.

(1) Atacicept inhibits BAFF and APRIL, leading to decreased Gd-IgA1 production by B cells.

(2) This leads to a reduction in the autoantibodies that bind to Gd-IgA1.

(3) Therefore, formation of pathogenic immune complexes is greatly reduced.

(4) This, in turn, reduces immune complex deposition in glomeruli and glomerular inflammation is reduced.

(5) Ultimately, progressive renal injury is attenuated, with reductions in hematuria and proteinuria, and stabilization of eGFR, which we believe will significantly lower the morbidity and mortality associated with IgAN.

Atacicept's disease-modifying mechanism addresses the upstream processes that cause IgAN, while most other molecules in development act downstream. Therefore, we believe that the clinical outcomes of atacicept, measured by endpoints designed to assess efficacy and durability, will be favorable over competitors, with a demonstrated tolerability profile. Once weekly 1 mL subcutaneous dosing also provides an attractive target product profile for patients.

Atacicept in IgAN: clinical development

Atacicept was the subject of a collaboration agreement between Ares and ZymoGenetics, Inc. in 2001, and was licensed on an exclusive basis to Ares in 2008. It was advanced by Merck KGaA, Darmstadt, Germany, in clinical trials for several autoimmune diseases, including rheumatoid arthritis (RA), multiple sclerosis, SLE, and IgAN, and in totality studied in double-blind placebo-controlled clinical trials in over 1,500 participants to date.

Atacicept was studied in the Phase 2b ORIGIN clinical trial, a multinational, randomized, placebo-controlled, double-blind trial for the treatment of IgAN (Figure 6). The ORIGIN Phase 2b trial was designed to evaluate the efficacy and safety of atacicept in participants with biopsy-proven IgAN and persistent proteinuria despite stable and maximum-tolerated RASi regimen for at least 12 weeks. The clinical trial consisted of a 36-week double-blind treatment period, followed by a 60-week open-label treatment period and a 26-week safety follow-up period. The trial assessed three doses (25 mg, 75 mg and 150 mg) of once-weekly 1-mL subcutaneous injections, administered at home, of atacicept versus placebo on impact of renal function as measured by proteinuria and eGFR. The primary endpoint was change from baseline in UPCR at 24 weeks based on 24-hour urine collection, with a secondary endpoint of UPCR at 36 weeks. Other secondary endpoints include UPCR at multiple timepoints, the effect of atacicept on change in eGFR, and safety and tolerability.

Primary endpoint efficacy and secondary endpoint safety data were published in Kidney International in 2024. The primary endpoint was met at week 24 as the mean UPCR was reduced from baseline by 31% in the combined atacicept group (defined as atacicept 75mg and 150mg dosing groups) versus 8% with placebo, resulting in a significant 25% reduction with atacicept versus placebo. At week 36, the key secondary endpoint was met as the mean urine protein creatinine ratio reduced from baseline by 34% in the combined atacicept group versus a 2% increase with placebo, resulting in a significant 35% reduction with atacicept versus placebo. The reduction in proteinuria was accompanied by stabilization in endpoint eGFR with atacicept compared to a decline with placebo at week 36, resulting in significant between-group geometric mean difference of 11%, approximating an absolute difference of 5.7 mL/min/1.73m2. Endpoint Gd-IgA1 levels significantly decreased from baseline by 60% versus placebo. The safety profile of atacicept was similar to placebo.

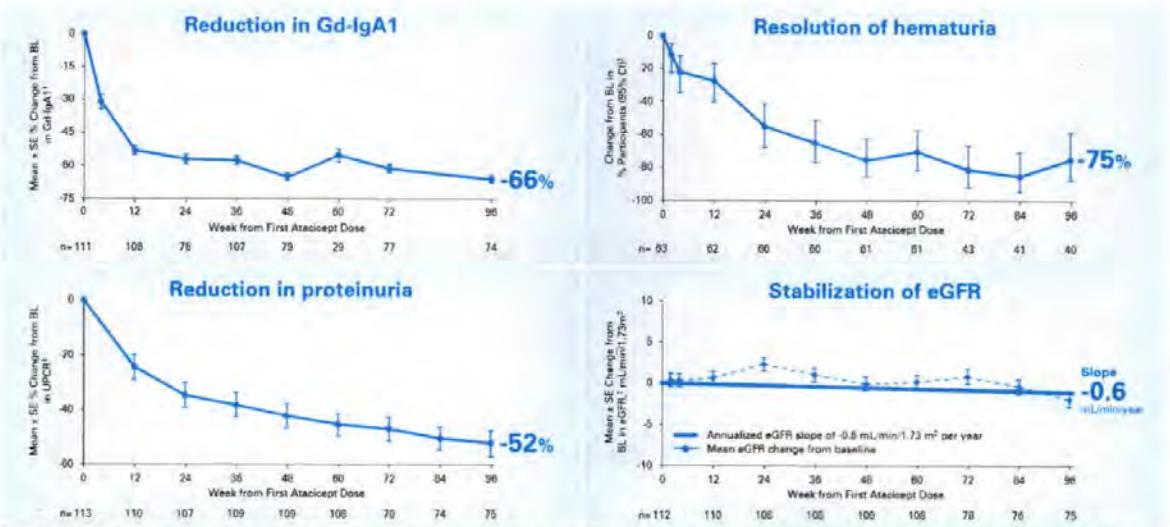
Vera reported positive results from the randomized phase of the Phase 2b ORIGIN clinical trial, which showed the following at 36 weeks:

- Gd-IgA1 reduction of 64% from baseline with atacicept 150 mg.

- Hematuria resolution in 80% of participants on atacicept 150 mg versus 5% on placebo.
- In a Per Protocol (PP) analysis, a blinded third-party CRO identified participants with protocol deviations that potentially confounded proteinuria measure. In the PP population that excludes these participants, atacicept 150 mg achieved a 43% mean reduction in proteinuria versus placebo ($p<0.05$); in the ITT population, atacicept 150 mg achieved a 35% further decrease from placebo.
- Stable eGFR observed for participants on atacicept, with clinically meaningful and statistically significant difference versus placebo.
- Clinical safety profile similar between atacicept and placebo.

In October 2024, long-term results from the ORIGIN Phase 2b trial were simultaneously presented in a late breaking oral presentation at ASN Kidney Week 2024 and published in a manuscript in the Journal of the American Society of Nephrology (JASN). Over 96 weeks, participants treated with atacicept demonstrated a 66% reduction in Gd-IgA1, resolution of hematuria in 75% of participants, a 52% reduction in proteinuria, and a mean annualized eGFR slope of -0.6 mL/min/1.73m2/year. This eGFR slope profile is consistent with the aging-related decline observed in the general population without biopsy-proven kidney disease. The cumulative generally favorable safety profile of atacicept remained consistent with that observed during the randomized period, with a 90% completion rate of atacicept treatment in the open-label extension period. We believe these data support the potential for atacicept to offer long-term, comprehensive IgAN disease modification and provide further confidence in the ongoing pivotal Phase 3 ORIGIN trial of atacicept in IgAN.

Figure 7: ORIGIN Phase 2b long-term 96-week results with atacicept was consistent with disease-modifying IgAN profile



Atacicept group includes all participants receiving any atacicept dose at each timepoint; with baseline (BL) defined as the last available measurement prior to the first dose of atacicept. Data from weeks 0 to 60 includes participants who switched from placebo to atacicept. 1. Percentage changes from BL computed using FDA-endorsed mixed-effects modeling; 2. Percentages represent change from BL in number of participants with hematuria at each visit divided by number with BL hematuria; 3. Changes from BL in eGFR were analyzed using MMRM analyses and LS estimation and SE were estimated from the model directly. eGFR slope was analyzed using mixed-effects model with random intercept and random slope and mean slope and SE were estimated from the model directly.

Atacicept safety and tolerability profile

In the randomized phase of the ORIGIN Phase 2b clinical trial, the clinical safety profile was similar between atacicept and placebo – and in the 96-week results, the safety profile observed was consistent with that of the randomized phase (Figure 8 below).

4. Reasons for discontinuation during double-blind period were previously reported; discontinuations during the OLE were due to: pneumonia in a heavy smoker, resolved (n=1); and worsening alanine aminotransferase and aspartate aminotransferase, resolved and unrelated to study treatment (n=1).

In an integrated safety analysis of clinical trials for multiple indications with over 1,500 participants, atacicept was well tolerated, as shown in Figure 9 below. Serious treatment-emergent adverse events (TEAEs) reported in the highest proportions were infections and infestations (placebo 3.9% versus atacicept 4.4%), musculoskeletal and connective tissue disorders (placebo 1.9% versus atacicept 1.3%), and nervous system disorders (placebo 2.1% versus atacicept 1.2%). The most frequently reported TEAE was pneumonia (placebo 1.2% versus atacicept 1.3%). We believe that this large and established data set is a competitive advantage for atacicept versus other approved and emerging therapies in development, many of which lack extensive safety data.

The safety profile of atacicept 25 mg, 75 mg and 150 mg has been characterized in healthy subjects and patients with RA, multiple sclerosis, optic neuritis, SLE, and B cell malignancies, and is considered acceptable in IgAN. Over 2,213 individuals have been enrolled in ongoing and completed interventional clinical trials with atacicept, of which over 1,635 individuals have received at least one dose of atacicept. As of February 19, 2025, 647 participants with SLE from five Phase 2/3 clinical trials have received at least one dose of atacicept, and 124 participants with IgAN from two Phase 2 clinical trials have received at least one dose of atacicept. An additional estimated 180 patients are being dosed with atacicept in the ongoing blinded ORIGIN Phase 3 study.

We believe the benefit-risk balance of atacicept to be favorable for further development in IgAN and certain additional autoimmune diseases, and we intend to explore additional immunologic diseases where BAFF and APRIL are abnormally elevated, or where autoantibodies play an important role.

UPCR is an accepted surrogate primary endpoint for clinical trials in IgAN, which potentially allows for a faster path to commercialization than rate of change/slope in eGFR, which is determined with two years of data. The recommendation for usage of this surrogate endpoint was put forward by the ASN, partnering with the FDA under the auspices of the Kidney Health Initiative, and the European Medicines Agency (EMA), and has now been implemented in five Phase 3 clinical trials in IgAN and in the three FDA approvals granted. Accelerated and/or conditional approval may be granted on the UPCR endpoint, with full approval to be granted upon longer-term data demonstrating stabilization of eGFR with treatment.

Ongoing Phase 3 ORIGIN clinical trial

We advanced atacicept 150 mg into a pivotal Phase 3 trial in IgAN in the second quarter of 2023, using the same formulation from the Phase 2b trial and learnings from the Phase 2b subgroup analyses to reduce risk in the design of a Phase 3 trial that aims to accurately assess treatment efficacy while minimizing potential confounders for proteinuria measure.

ORIGIN 3 is a Phase 3 global, multicenter, randomized, placebo-controlled, double-blind trial (Figure 10) in participants with IgAN who have persistent proteinuria and remain at high risk of disease progression despite being on a stable prescribed regimen of renin-angiotensin system inhibitors (ACE inhibitors or ARBs) for at least 12 weeks that is the maximum labeled or tolerated dose. The clinical trial consists of a 104-week double-blind treatment period which is currently ongoing, followed by a 52-week open-label extension and a 26-week safety follow-up period. The trial will assess at-home self-administered once weekly 1-mL subcutaneous injections of atacicept 150 mg versus placebo on impact of kidney function as measured by proteinuria and eGFR. The primary endpoint is change from baseline in UPCR at 36 weeks based on 24-hour urine collection and the key secondary endpoint is eGFR up to 104 weeks. Additional secondary endpoints are change in Gd-IgA1, hematuria resolution, change in eGFR up to 52 weeks, and time from randomization to first occurrence of composite kidney failure endpoint event.

We completed enrollment for the Phase 3 primary endpoint cohort in September 2024 and anticipate full enrollment of the study in the second quarter of 2025. The Phase 3 primary endpoint results are expected in the first half of 2025, and, if supportive, we expect to submit a BLA to the FDA for accelerated approval of atacicept in IgAN in the second half of 2025.

ORIGIN EXTEND Phase 2 clinical trial

We initiated the ORIGIN EXTEND trial, a Phase 2 extension study in participants who complete ORIGIN Phase 2b or Phase 3. The objectives of the trial are to 1) provide patients with extended access to atacicept prior to commercial availability in their country or region; 2) capture longer-term data for research purposes; and 3) generate data from reinitiation of atacicept treatment following an off-treatment period. We anticipate clinical results from the trial in 2025 and 2026.

Initiation of PIONEER Phase 2 Study to assess Atacicept in pMN, FSGS, and MCD

Due to the positive results of the ORIGIN Phase 2b clinical trial, and following discussions with the FDA, we plan to initiate a new Phase 2 clinical trial for atacicept to treat patients with nephrotic syndrome who have biomarkers that may predict a positive response to B cell modulation. The PIONEER study will initiate in 2025 and will study atacicept in additional autoimmune glomerular diseases characterized by the presence of antibodies to glomerular antigens, including within primary membranous nephropathy (pMN), focal segmental glomerulosclerosis (FSGS), and minimal change disease (MCD). We anticipate clinical results from the trial in 2025 and 2026.

Atacicept in primary membranous nephropathy (pMN)

pMN Pathophysiology and Disease Overview

pMN is an autoimmune disease characterized by glomerular membrane thickening and long-term proteinuria. pMN patients are initially treated with ACEi / ARBs, and upon progression typically are treated with either immunosuppressive or CD20 therapies. Despite proper management, patients still progress to ESRD, highlighting the need for a more effective standard of care.

pMN Market Opportunity, Current Standard of Care, and Our Proposed Solution

There are approximately 50,000 patients in the United States with pMN. In 70-80% of cases, inflammation of the renal glomeruli is caused by autoantibodies targeting the proteins phospholipase A2 receptor (PLA2R) and thrombospondin type 1 domain-containing 7A (THSD7A). The remaining 20-30% of cases develop as a secondary condition due to underlying issues such as infections, other autoimmune diseases, tumors, or drug poisoning. Most patients with biopsy-confirmed primary membranous nephropathy (pMN) have circulating anti-PLA2R autoantibodies, with approximately 70% of pMN cases associated with anti-PLA2R+ antibodies, and 65% of these cases considered moderate-to-severe. According to current KDIGO guidelines, PLA2R is recognized as a crucial diagnostic marker, eliminating the need for a kidney biopsy if the patient is seropositive for PLA2R and exhibits clinical symptoms. Additionally, the concentration of anti-PLA2R antibodies provides insights into disease activity and progression, serving as a clinical criterion for assessing the risk of progressive renal failure in pMN patients: 1) higher antibody concentrations indicate more active pMN and a greater risk of kidney failure, and 2) monitoring antibody levels can predict phases of clinical remission and relapses, as changes in anti-PLA2R antibody levels typically precede improvements or worsening of the disease.

Current treatments tackle the autoimmune aspect of pMN through B-cell depletion (e.g., agents such as rituximab) or immunosuppression via cyclophosphamide / high dose steroids; these therapies have been associated with significant toxicity. With no FDA-approved pMN therapies, significant unmet need remains for efficacious and safe agents, including those that can reduce adverse events associated with immunosuppressant therapy, offer benefit for the ~40% of patients that are refractory to rituximab, and further reduce disease progression to CKD and ESRD.

A more targeted approach that focuses on modulating autoimmune B-cell production, rather than broad immunosuppression, may offer a potential solution. Autoreactive B-cells are implicated in the immunopathogenesis of primary membranous nephropathy (pMN), with the phospholipase A2 receptor (PLA2R) identified as the target antigen for the typical immunoglobulin G (IgG) deposition observed in renal biopsies. While immunosuppressive treatments have shown reductions in PLA2R autoantibody (PLA2R-Ab) levels, patients with higher serum levels of both BAFF and APRIL are less likely to achieve clinical remission on standard immunosuppressive therapy. Additionally, the BAFF-targeting immunomodulator belimumab has been shown to improve proteinuria and PLA2R titers in an open-label trial. This supports the rationale for using other treatments involving B-cell modulation, such as atacicept. Atacicept's ability to block pathogenic B-cell activation via BAFF and APRIL cytokine binding suggests it may be effective in treating pMN, particularly in patients who have been treated with immunosuppressive therapies but still maintain high BAFF and APRIL serum levels.

Atacicept in FSGS and MCD

FSGS and MCD Pathophysiology and Disease Overview

FSGS is characterized by histological lesions (scarring) on kidney glomeruli, manifestations of proteinuria & hypoalbuminemia, and chronic kidney disease, which can present at any age. FSGS often presents with nephrotic syndrome manifestations, including high-grade proteinuria (>3.5 g/day), hypoalbuminemia, and edema, with 30 – 40% progressing to ESRD by 10 years. Nephrin is a transmembrane protein found in kidney podocytes, plays a significant role in maintaining the integrity and function of the glomerular filtration barrier, and it can be used as a biomarker for early glomerular injury, since elevated levels of nephrin in the urine (nephrinuria) can indicate damage to the podocytes and the filtration barrier. Recently, anti-nephrin antibodies were identified in ~10% of primary FSGS patients, indicating potential autoimmune involvement in the disease pathology and demonstrating a strong correlation to uACR.

MCD is a kidney disorder that leads to glomeruli damage and is characterized by sudden onset of nephrotic syndrome, including increased proteinuria, edema, and hypoalbuminemia. Immune dysregulation, including the presence of autoantibodies against nephrin and other podocyte components, contributes to podocyte injury and disease progression. MCD accounts for 70 – 90% of pediatric and 15% of adult idiopathic nephrotic syndrome patients. MCD is distinguished from other nephrotic diseases based on sudden onset of clinical features such as proteinuria (i.e., days/weeks vs. months) and distinct morphological features (e.g., podocyte effacement, normal glomerulus) based on kidney biopsy. Approximately two-thirds of adult patients with MCD and active nephrotic syndrome have anti-nephrin autoantibodies, while this figure rises to about 90% in children with idiopathic nephrotic syndrome.

FSGS and MCD Market Opportunity, Current Standard of Care, and Our Proposed Solution

There are approximately 44,000 diagnosed primary FSGS patients in the United States, of which approximately 7,000 may be identified as auto-immune assuming improved diagnostic methods. Primary FSGS patients are typically treated with background ACEi / ARBs, followed by sequencing steroids, calcineurin inhibitors (CNIs), immunosuppressive therapies (ISTs), and / or rituximab, with the aim to preserve kidney function and reduce risk to ESRD. Despite the current standard of care (which includes steroids, CNIs), there is persistent unmet need as up to 40% of patients reach ESRD and there are no FDA-approved disease-modifying drugs. Given the severity of clinical symptoms (e.g., ESRD risk), autoimmune FSGS patients would benefit from novel, efficacious therapies.

There are approximately 15,000 adult MCD patients and almost 10,000 pediatric MCD patients in the United States. Recently, anti-nephrin antibodies were identified in approximately 50% of pediatric MCD and adult MCD patients, indicating potential autoimmune involvement in disease pathology, which correlated to higher uACR and serum albumin levels. Patients are typically managed via steroids or other immunosuppressive therapies including CP, MMF and Levamisole. Additional treatments include diuretics for edema, ACE inhibitors or ARBs to reduce proteinuria, and dietary changes like a low-sodium diet. No FDA-approved therapies are currently available for MCD.

Given the autoimmune involvement in the disease pathology for at least some sub-populations of FSGS and MCD patients, potentially via B-cell mediated immune/inflammatory pathways, as demonstrated by response to rituximab in some patients, there is reason to believe that therapies that inhibit the proliferation and maturation of auto-reactive B-cells, such as atacicept, may be efficacious.

MAU868 in reactivated BK infection among kidney transplant recipients

We have exclusive worldwide rights, pursuant to the Novartis license, to MAU868, which is a potential treatment for reactivated BK infection in kidney transplant recipients. While up to 90% of healthy adults have been infected with BKV at some point in their lives, it remains latent in everyone except severely immunocompromised populations such as kidney transplant recipients. There are approximately 80,000 kidney transplants annually worldwide, with approximately 20,000 in the United States. Approximately 225,000 kidney allograft recipients are living in the United States. Waitlists to receive kidneys are long: approximately 3–5 years and 75,000 people long in the United States. Up to 12% of transplants per year are re-transplants, which further limits organ availability for new patients. BKV is a polyoma virus that is tropic to the kidney and bladder tissue and can reactivate with the immunosuppression required for kidney transplant. This reactivation can cause BKVN, a condition in which BK infection, typically first identified as BK viremia, triggers inflammation, which then progresses to renal fibrosis and tubular injury; as shown in Figure 11, BKVN is a leading cause of allograft loss, a devastating outcome for kidney transplant recipients.

Currently, there are no approved treatment options for BK viremia or BKVN. We shared full Cohort 1 and Cohort 2 results in 2022 from the Phase 2 trial conducted by Amplyx. Following feedback from the FDA on the Phase 2 clinical trial, we are evaluating strategies for continued clinical development, including a potential next clinical trial. We believe that MAU868 has the potential to become standard of care for the treatment of BK viremia in order to prevent devastating consequences such as BKVN.

Pathophysiology of BK virus in kidney transplant

BKV has a worldwide seroprevalence of up to 90%. Primary BK infection is typically acquired during childhood, after which the virus establishes lifelong infection in the kidney and bladder tissue. Most people do not experience any known adverse effects from either primary or persistent infection. Control of infection is dependent on CD4+ and CD8+ T cell immunity, which can be displaced by immunosuppressants. In the setting of kidney transplant and related immunosuppression, latent virus can be reactivated or new virus can be transmitted via the donor kidney. BKV reactivation is marked first by viruria—or detection of virus in the urine, and then viremia—detection of viral DNA in the blood, and most commonly occurs within the first year of transplant.

Viremia typically occurs in 15% of kidney transplant recipients, after which BKVN may occur. Approximately 3-4% of kidney transplant recipients develop BKVN.

BKVN disease burden and diagnosis

BKVN may lead to allograft injury and in some cases, allograft loss. 24–60% of all graft losses are due to BKV-associated disease. The average cost of a kidney transplant in the United States is over $440,000. Pre-transplant, recipients are typically on dialysis, for which the cost is approximately $90,000 per year; there is an approximate 450% increase in annual medical cost to treat transplant recipients who experience graft loss.

Most institutions monitor for BK in both the urine, through PCR and urinalysis, and plasma, via PCR. It is common practice to screen kidney transplant recipients for BK viremia via PCR test monthly in the first six months post-transplant and then every three months until two years post-transplant, after which patients are typically screened annually. Also, at any sign of allograft dysfunction, physicians will test for BK viremia. Viral load levels >1000 copies/mL are considered positive for BK viremia, and levels >10,000 copies/mL are considered presumptive BKVN. Kidney allograft biopsy is considered the gold standard for diagnosing BKVN. Late diagnosis of BKV can lead to irreversible renal function decline and poor treatment outcomes.

Kidney transplant market opportunity

An estimated 80,000 kidney transplants are conducted globally each year, with approximately 20,000 in the United States, 20,000 in Europe, 1,500 in Japan, and 10,000 in China. Approximately 225,000 kidney allograft recipients are living in the United States. Waitlists to receive kidneys are long: 3–5 years and 75,000 people deep in the United States. Up to 12% of transplants per year are re-transplants, which further limits organ availability for new patients. Approximately 15% of kidney transplant recipients develop BK viremia. Patients can be risk stratified for BK viremia based on the degree of immunosuppression employed, which is related to the degree of human leukocyte antigen (HLA) match between the graft and recipient; the greater the mismatch, the more intense immunosuppression required, which increases the risk of BKV reactivation.

We estimate the market for a novel agent to treat reactivated BK infection in kidney transplant recipients to be a large commercial opportunity. We believe that MAU868 has the potential to become standard of care for the treatment of reactivated BK infection in order to prevent devastating consequences following kidney transplantation such as BKVN and graft loss.

Current standard of care for kidney transplant patients with BK viremia

Currently, there is no approved treatment specific to BKV. Upon detection of BK viremia, physicians' first line of defense is to reduce immunosuppression with the goal of restoring CD4+ and CD8+ T cell immunity without causing acute rejection. Initial modification will typically consist of lowering MMF by 50% followed by a reduction in tacrolimus by 50%. If no improvement is observed, use of MMF and tacrolimus will be stopped and dose of prednisone will be increased. Other agents such as intravenous immunoglobulin (IVIG), leflunomide, and cidofovir, are occasionally used—but all have limited data and both leflunomide and cidofovir have serious safety concerns. After development of BKVN, patients have limited options and may continue to receive antivirals or IVIG. Physicians are not satisfied with current treatment options for BKV and highlight that there is a significant unmet need for a viable therapy.

Emerging therapies in development

Despite the high level of unmet need in treating BK viremia and preventing devastating consequences, there is limited development in the space. Memo Therapeutics is also developing a BKV-neutralizing monoclonal antibody and is in Phase 2 clinical development.

Our solution: MAU868 / scientific rationale

MAU868 is a human monoclonal antibody (IgG1/l isotype subclass) directed against the major viral capsid protein of BKV, VP1, which is essential for binding to and infection of new cells, as shown in Figure 12. MAU868 neutralizes all four serotypes of BKV at sub-nanomolar concentrations and has a high barrier to resistance in vitro (resistant isolates of BKV were not selected in vitro at any of the concentrations of MAU868 investigated). MAU868 is being developed for the treatment of BKV disease in kidney transplant recipients (BKV nephropathy) and being considered for hematopoietic stem cell transplant (HSCT) recipients (BKV-associated hemorrhagic cystitis). MAU868 also has neutralizing activity in vitro against the closely related JC virus, the cause of progressive multifocal leukoencephalopathy.

In June 2018, Dutch Ophthalmic, USA, Inc. (Dutch) entered into a Consent Order with the Alabama Board of Pharmacy (ALBOP) in connection with Dutch's wholesale drug distributor license. As outlined below, the circumstances surrounding this matter involve what we consider minor clerical errors (an incorrect Designated Representative address in the application and an error in the contact email address on file for Dutch) which resulted in Dutch's renewal application not being processed and the renewal license not being issued prior to the deadline. More specifically:

•Dutch submitted an application to ALBOP for renewal of its wholesale drug distributorlicense in December 2017, prior to the renewal due date of December 31, 2017.

•It was discovered by ALBOP that a portion of the Designated Representative's address wasentered incorrectly.

•ALBOP sent a deficiency notice informing Dutch of the error, however, the email on file withALBOP was incorrect and ALBOP's notification emails were returned as undeliverable.

•As ALBOP's notice was never received by Dutch, the company was not aware of anyproblem with the application and was waiting for notification from ALBOP that the renewalhad been processed.

•In February 2018, Kim Pickett of ALBOP called Dutch to inform the company of thedeficiency and the undeliverable emails.

•As soon as it was made aware of the problem, Dutch worked with ALBOP to resolve theissue, which resulted in the attached Consent Order dated June 26, 2018, and the companyhas maintained a license in good standing with ALBOP through the present.

Borrower: PHARMA DISTRIBUTION & FULFILLMENT SERVICES, INC.
634 Quality Ln
South Beloit, IL 61080-2608

Lender: First Mid Bank & Trust, N.A.
Rockford - Perryville
2475 N Perryville Rd
Rockford, IL 61107

Principal Amount: $25,000.00 Date of Note: January 2, 2026

PROMISE TO PAY. PHARMA DISTRIBUTION & FULFILLMENT SERVICES, INC. ("Borrower") promises to pay to First Mid Bank & Trust, N.A. ("Lender"), or order, in lawful money of the United States of America, the principal amount of Twenty-five Thousand & 00/100 Dollars ($25,000.00) or so much as may be outstanding, together with interest on the unpaid outstanding principal balance of each advance. Interest shall be calculated from the date of each advance until repayment of each advance.

PAYMENT. Borrower will pay this loan in full immediately upon Lender's demand. If no demand is made, Borrower will pay this loan in one payment of all outstanding principal plus all accrued unpaid interest on January 2, 2027. In addition, Borrower will pay regular monthly payments of all accrued unpaid interest due as of each payment date, beginning February 2, 2026, with all subsequent interest payments to be due on the same day of each month after that. Unless otherwise agreed or required by applicable law, payments will be applied first to any accrued unpaid interest; then to principal; and then to any late charges.

VARIABLE INTEREST RATE. The interest rate on this Note is subject to change from time to time based on changes in an independent index which is the base rate on corporate loans posted by at least 70% of the 10 largest U.S. banks known as the Wall Street Journal U.S. Prime Rate (the "Index"). The Index is not necessarily the lowest rate charged by Lender on its loans. Lender will tell Borrower the current Index rate upon Borrower's request. The interest rate change will not occur more often than each day. Borrower understands that Lender may make loans based on other rates as well. The Index currently is 6.750% per annum. Interest on the unpaid principal balance of this Note will be calculated as described in the "INTEREST CALCULATION METHOD" paragraph using a rate of 3.000 percentage points over the Index (the "Margin"), rounded to the nearest 0.125 percent, adjusted if necessary for any minimum and maximum rate limitations described below, resulting in an initial rate of 9.750%. If Lender determines, in its sole discretion, that the Index has become unavailable or unreliable, either temporarily, indefinitely, or permanently, during the term of this Note, Lender may amend this Note by designating a substantially similar substitute index. Lender may also amend and adjust the Margin to accompany the substitute index. The change to the Margin may be a positive or negative value, or zero. In making these amendments, Lender may take into consideration any then-prevailing market convention for selecting a substitute index and margin for the specific index that is unavailable or unreliable. Such an amendment to the terms of this Note will become effective and bind Borrower 10 business days after Lender gives written notice to Borrower without any action or consent of the Borrower. NOTICE: Under no circumstances will the interest rate on this Note be less than 8.000% per annum or more than the maximum rate allowed by applicable law.

INTEREST CALCULATION METHOD. Interest on this Note is computed on a 365/360 basis; that is, by applying the ratio of the interest rate over a year of 360 days, multiplied by the outstanding principal balance, multiplied by the actual number of days the principal balance is outstanding. All interest payable under this Note is computed using this method. This calculation method results in a higher effective interest rate than the numeric interest rate stated in this Note.

RECEIPT OF PAYMENTS. All payments must be made in U.S. dollars and must be received by Lender at:

First Mid Bank & Trust
Attn: Payment Processing
PO Box 499
Mattoon, IL 61938

All payments must be received by Lender consistent with any written payment instructions provided by Lender.

PREPAYMENT. Borrower may pay without penalty all or a portion of the amount owed earlier than it is due. Early payments will not, unless agreed to by Lender in writing, relieve Borrower of Borrower's obligation to continue to make payments of accrued unpaid interest. Rather, early payments will reduce the principal balance due. Borrower agrees not to send Lender payments marked "paid in full", "without recourse", or similar language. If Borrower sends such a payment, Lender may accept it without losing any of Lender's rights under this Note, and Borrower will remain obligated to pay any further amount owed to Lender. All written communications concerning disputed amounts, including any check or other payment instrument that indicates that the payment constitutes "payment in full" of the amount owed or that is tendered with other conditions or limitations or as full satisfaction of a disputed amount must be mailed or delivered to: First Mid Bank & Trust, N.A.; Rockford - Perryville; 2475 N Perryville Rd; Rockford, IL 61107.

LATE CHARGE. If a payment is 10 days or more late, Borrower will be charged 5.000% of the unpaid portion of the regularly scheduled payment or $25.00, whichever is greater.

INTEREST AFTER DEFAULT. Upon default, including failure to pay upon final maturity, the interest rate on this Note shall be increased by adding an additional 2.000 percentage point margin ("Default Rate Margin"). The Default Rate Margin shall also apply to each succeeding interest rate change that would have applied had there been no default. However, in no event will the interest rate exceed the maximum interest rate limitations under applicable law.

DEFAULT. Each of the following shall constitute an event of default ("Event of Default") under this Note:

Payment Default. Borrower fails to make any payment when due under this Note.

Other Defaults. Borrower fails to comply with or to perform any other term, obligation, covenant or condition contained in this Note or in any of the related documents or to comply with or to perform any term, obligation, covenant or condition contained in any other agreement between Lender and Borrower.

Default in Favor of Third Parties. Borrower or any Grantor defaults under any loan, extension of credit, security agreement, purchase or sales agreement, or any other agreement, in favor of any other creditor or person that may materially affect any of Borrower's property or Borrower's ability to repay this Note or perform Borrower's obligations under this Note or any of the related documents.

False Statements. Any warranty, representation or statement made or furnished to Lender by Borrower or on Borrower's behalf under this Note or the related documents is false or misleading in any material respect, either now or at the time made or furnished or becomes false or misleading at any time thereafter.

Insolvency. The dissolution or termination of Borrower's existence as a going business, the insolvency of Borrower, the appointment of a receiver for any part of Borrower's property, any assignment for the benefit of creditors, any type of creditor workout, or the commencement of any proceeding under any bankruptcy or insolvency laws by or against Borrower.

Creditor or Forfeiture Proceedings. Commencement of foreclosure or forfeiture proceedings, whether by judicial proceeding, self-help, repossession or any other method, by any creditor of Borrower or by any governmental agency against any collateral securing the loan. This includes a garnishment of any of Borrower's accounts, including deposit accounts, with Lender. However, this Event of Default shall not apply if there is a good faith dispute by Borrower as to the validity or reasonableness of the claim which is the basis of the creditor or forfeiture proceeding and if Borrower gives Lender written notice of the creditor or forfeiture proceeding and deposits with Lender monies or a surety bond for the creditor or forfeiture proceeding, in an amount determined by Lender, in its sole discretion, as being an adequate reserve or bond for the dispute.

Change in Ownership. Any change in ownership of twenty-five percent (25%) or more of the common stock of Borrower.

Adverse Change. A material adverse change occurs in Borrower's financial condition, or Lender believes the prospect of payment or performance of this Note is impaired.

Insecurity. Lender in good faith believes itself insecure.

Events Affecting Guarantor. Any of the preceding events occurs with respect to any guarantor, endorser, surety, or accommodation party of any of the indebtedness or any guarantor, endorser, surety, or accommodation party dies or becomes incompetent, or revokes or disputes the validity of, or liability under, any guaranty of the indebtedness evidenced by this Note.

LENDER'S RIGHTS. Upon default, Lender may declare the entire unpaid principal balance under this Note and all accrued unpaid interest immediately due, and then Borrower will pay that amount.

ATTORNEYS' FEES; EXPENSES. Lender may hire or pay someone else to help collect this Note if Borrower does not pay. Borrower will pay Lender that amount. This includes, subject to any limits under applicable law, Lender's attorneys' fees and Lender's legal expenses, whether or not there is a lawsuit, including attorneys' fees, expenses for bankruptcy proceedings (including efforts to modify or vacate any automatic stay or injunction), and appeals. If not prohibited by applicable law, Borrower also will pay any court costs, in addition to all other sums provided by law.

JURY WAIVER. Lender and Borrower hereby waive the right to any jury trial in any action, proceeding, or counterclaim brought by either Lender or Borrower against the other.

GOVERNING LAW. This Note will be governed by federal law applicable to Lender and, to the extent not preempted by federal law, the laws of the State of Illinois without regard to its conflicts of law provisions. This Note has been accepted by Lender in the State of Illinois.

CHOICE OF VENUE. If there is a lawsuit, Borrower agrees upon Lender's request to submit to the jurisdiction of the courts of Coles County, State of Illinois.

RIGHT OF SETOFF. To the extent permitted by applicable law, Lender reserves a right of setoff in all Borrower's accounts with Lender (whether checking, savings, or some other account). This includes all accounts Borrower holds jointly with someone else and all accounts Borrower may open in the future. However, this does not include any IRA or Keogh accounts, or any trust accounts for which setoff would be prohibited by law. Borrower authorizes Lender, to the extent permitted by applicable law, to charge or setoff all sums owing on the indebtedness against any and all such accounts, and, at Lender's option, to administratively freeze all such accounts to allow Lender to protect Lender's charge and setoff rights provided in this paragraph.

COLLATERAL. Borrower acknowledges this Note is secured by the following collateral described in the security instruments listed herein.

(A) a Commercial Security Agreement dated January 2, 2026 made and executed between Precision Dose, Inc. and Lender on collateral described as: inventory, chattel paper, accounts, equipment, general intangibles, fixtures, standing timber and mineral, oil and gas.

(B) a Commercial Security Agreement dated January 2, 2026 made and executed between TAGI PHARMA, INC. and Lender on collateral described as: inventory, chattel paper, accounts, equipment, general intangibles, fixtures, standing timber and mineral, oil and gas.

(C) a Commercial Security Agreement dated January 2, 2026 made and executed between CUP PAC PACKAGING, INC. and Lender on collateral described as: inventory, chattel paper, accounts, equipment, general intangibles, fixtures, standing timber and mineral, oil and gas.

(D) a Commercial Security Agreement dated January 2, 2026 made and executed between PHARMA DISTRIBUTION & FULFILLMENT SERVICES, INC. and Lender on collateral described as: inventory, chattel paper, accounts, equipment, general intangibles, fixtures, standing timber and mineral, oil and gas.

LINE OF CREDIT. This Note evidences a non-revolving line of credit. Payments made prior to termination of the line of credit do not entitle Borrower to readvances of the amounts already paid. Advances under this Note may be requested only in writing by Borrower or as provided in this paragraph. All communications, instructions, or directions by telephone or otherwise to Lender are to be directed to Lender's office shown above. The following person or persons are authorized, except as provided in this paragraph, to request advances and authorize payments under the line of credit until Lender receives from Borrower, at Lender's address shown above, written notice of revocation of such authority: Per Letter of Credit # 26-01. Advances will only be made when draft(s) that comply with the terms of the Letter of Credit are presented by Beneficiary. Borrower agrees to be liable for all sums either: (A) advanced in accordance with the instructions of an authorized person or (B) credited to any of Borrower's accounts with Lender. The unpaid principal balance owing on this Note at any time may be evidenced by endorsements on this Note or by Lender's internal records, including daily computer print-outs. Lender will have no obligation to advance funds under this Note if: (A) Borrower or any guarantor is in default under the terms of this Note or any agreement that Borrower or any guarantor has with Lender, including any agreement made in connection with the signing of this Note; (B) Borrower or any guarantor ceases doing business or is insolvent; (C) any guarantor seeks, claims or otherwise attempts to limit, modify or revoke such guarantor's guarantee of this Note or any other loan with Lender; (D) Borrower has applied funds provided pursuant to this Note for purposes other than those authorized by Lender; or (E) Lender in good faith believes itself insecure.

COMMERCIAL MAXIMUM LATE CHARGE . Late charge terms include a maximum of $1,000.00 per late payment.

COUNTERPART CLAUSE. "This agreement may be executed in any number of counterparts, each of which when executed and delivered shall constitute a duplicate original, but all counterparts together shall constitute a single agreement".

ADVANCES AT LENDER'S DISCRETION. Notwithstanding anything to the contrary in this Agreement, the Note or the Related Documents, Lender shall have no obligation whatsoever to make any Advance on the Loan at any time, in its sole absolute discretion, deny any request for an Advance or otherwise cease disbursing proceeds of the Loan.

SUCCESSOR INTERESTS. The terms of this Note shall be binding upon Borrower, and upon Borrower's heirs, personal representatives, successors and assigns, and shall inure to the benefit of Lender and its successors and assigns.

GENERAL PROVISIONS. This Note is payable on demand. The inclusion of specific default provisions or rights of Lender shall not preclude Lender's right to declare payment of this Note on its demand. If any part of this Note cannot be enforced, this fact will not affect the rest of the Note. Lender may delay or forgo enforcing any of its rights or remedies under this Note without losing them. Borrower and any other person who signs, guarantees or endorses this Note, to the extent allowed by law, waive presentment, demand for payment, and notice of dishonor. Upon any change in the terms of this Note, and unless otherwise expressly stated in writing, no party who signs this Note, whether as maker, guarantor, accommodation maker or endorser, shall be released from liability. All such parties agree that Lender may renew or extend (repeatedly and for any length of time) this loan or release any party or guarantor or collateral; or impair, fail to realize upon or perfect Lender's security interest in the collateral; and take any other action deemed necessary by Lender without the consent of or notice to anyone. All such parties also agree that Lender may modify this loan without the consent of or notice to anyone other than the party with whom the modification is made. The obligations under this Note are joint and several.

ILLINOIS INSURANCE NOTICE. Unless Borrower provides Lender with evidence of the insurance coverage required by Borrower's agreement with Lender, Lender may purchase insurance at Borrower's expense to protect Lender's interests in the collateral. This insurance may, but need not, protect Borrower's interests. The coverage that Lender purchases may not pay any claim that Borrower makes or any claim that is made against Borrower in connection with the collateral. Borrower may later cancel any insurance purchased by Lender, but only after providing Lender with evidence that Borrower has obtained insurance as required by their agreement. If Lender purchases insurance for the collateral, Borrower will be responsible for the costs of that insurance, including interest and any other charges Lender may impose in connection with the placement of the insurance, until the effective date of the cancellation or expiration of the insurance. The costs of the insurance may be added to Borrower's total outstanding balance or obligation. The costs of the insurance may be more than the cost of insurance Borrower may be able to obtain on Borrower's own.

PRIOR TO SIGNING THIS NOTE, BORROWER READ AND UNDERSTOOD ALL THE PROVISIONS OF THIS NOTE, INCLUDING THE VARIABLE INTEREST RATE PROVISIONS. BORROWER AGREES TO THE TERMS OF THE NOTE.

BORROWER ACKNOWLEDGES RECEIPT OF A COMPLETED COPY OF THIS PROMISSORY NOTE.

Provide explanation below:

This is in response to Question #5.
While employed by Precision Dose, Inc., and an owner of less than 1% of its stock, the company and its subsidiary was sued in a class action for allegedly violating the Telephone Consumer Protection Act.

Filed November 18, 2024, in Winnebago County, State of Illinois, and captioned as S.A.S.B. CORP. d/b/a Okeechobee Discount Drugs, individually and as the representative of a class of similarly-situated persons and entities vs. Precision Dose, Inc. and TAGI Pharma, Inc.

The case was later removed to Federal Court in the Northern District of Illinois as Case Number: 3:24-CV-50509.

I am neither a director nor an officer of the company or its subsidiary. I had no responsibility for anything related to the lawsuit.

This is in response to Question #6.

As part of PDFS's application to the South Carolina Board of Pharmacy I participated in a routine application interview by video conference. There were no concerns raised, and license # PY .20873 3PL was granted to PDFS in the ordinary course.

OFFERED BY Massachusetts Controlled Substances Registration

Manufacturer and distributor registration information

Learn about registration for manufacturers and distributors of medical devices and pharmaceuticals.

Medical device manufacturer and distributor registration

This policy is intended to assist manufacturers and/or distributors of medical devices in Massachusetts to ascertain whether they need to obtain a controlled substances registration from the Massachusetts Department of Public Health (MDPH). Such a controlled substances registration would be required under Massachusetts law and regulation (M.G.L. c. 94C and 105 CMR 700.000) if a company were to manufacture, distribute or dispense controlled substances in the Commonwealth, or possess controlled substances with the intent of manufacturing, distributing or dispensing. Please note that in accordance with Massachusetts law the term "controlled substance" denotes any prescription pharmaceutical (i.e., either a federally controlled substance or a "legend" drug). Thus, any medical device that contains a prescription pharmaceutical is considered to be a controlled substance in Massachusetts regardless of its standing as a medical device.

If you are a manufacturer and/or a distributor in Massachusetts and your company does not manufacture, dispense or distribute controlled substances within the Commonwealth, or possess controlled substances for such purposes your company does not need, and has no basis for obtaining, a controlled substances registration from Massachusetts.

Thus, for example, a manufacturer or distributor of a medical device is not required to register if:

1. the device does not contain any prescription pharmaceutical; or
2. the device does contain a prescription pharmaceutical but is not manufactured, stored, dispensed, or distributed within the Commonwealth.

Pharmaceutical manufacturer and distributor registration

This policy is intended to assist manufacturers and/or distributors of prescription pharmaceuticals to ascertain whether they need to obtain a controlled substances registration from the Massachusetts Department of Public Health (MDPH). Such a controlled substances registration would be required under Massachusetts law and regulation (M.G.L. c. 94C and 105 CMR 700.000) if a company were to manufacture, distribute or dispense a controlled substance in the Commonwealth, or possess a controlled substance with the intent of manufacturing, distributing or dispensing. Please note that in accordance with Massachusetts law the term "controlled substance" denotes any prescription pharmaceutical (i.e., either a federally controlled substance or a "legend" drug).

If you are a manufacturer and/or a distributor in Massachusetts and your company does not manufacture, dispense or distribute a controlled substance within the Commonwealth, or possess a controlled substance for such purposes your company does not need, and has no basis for obtaining, a controlled substances registration from Massachusetts.

If you are a manufacturer and/or a distributor outside of Massachusetts and your company does not manufacture, dispense or distribute a controlled substance within the Commonwealth, or possess a controlled substance in the Commonwealth for such purposes your company does not need, and has no basis for obtaining, a controlled substances registration from Massachusetts.

Thus, for example, a manufacturer or distributor of a prescription pharmaceutical is not required to register if manufacture, storage and distribution of the pharmaceutical is handled from outside the state and the only activity within Massachusetts is direct delivery to a registered entity in the state.

Good Afternoon Maria,

Please see responses below.

1. Certificate of Good Standing – attached.
2. COI- attached.
3. Employee List – attached.
4. Designated Representative. The designated representative's legal residence is in Michigan. The designated representative does have an apartment in Waltham, Massachusetts and is on site at Alcresta Therapeutics office. Mr. Parrish is onsite and is aware of daily activities at the Waltham, MA facility. We would like to clarify that Alcresta's business as it is not a typical manufacturer. Alcresta's Waltham facility performs research and development activities as well as finished product release testing for RELiZORB, which is a Class II prescription use medical device cleared by FDA. RELiZORB is Alcresta's only marketed product. As finished product release testing is a manufacturing activity, the Waltham facility is registered with FDA as a medical device manufacturer (FEIN 3009596666) and is listed as the Manufacturer of RELiZORB in accordance with the requirements of 21 CFR 807. However, no product is distributed from this address.

If you need anything further, please let us know.

Subject: Statement of Resident State Licensure

Dear Members of the Board,

Our company, Beacon Bio Dx, LLC sells and rents an FDA-cleared, prescription-only home sleep testing device exclusively to licensed healthcare providers for use within their professional practice. We do not sell or rent the device directly to patients or the general public.

Under Ohio law, any entity that provides home medical equipment[1] to the public must obtain an appropriate license from the Ohio Board of Pharmacy.[2] However, manufacturers and wholesale distributors of devices that do not sell directly to the public are expressly exempted from this licensure and oversight requirement.[3]

Because our company distributes only to licensed healthcare providers and does not engage in direct-to-patient sales, Ohio law does not require us to hold a device distributor or wholesaler license.

We provide this explanation to clarify our home-state licensing status and to demonstrate that our company operates in compliance with applicable Ohio law. Should the Board require additional documentation or references, we are happy to provide them.

Sincerely,

Allison Braly

INSTRUCTIONS FOR ATTORNEYS COMPLETING CIVIL COVER SHEET FORM JS 44

Authority For Civil Cover Sheet

The JS 44 civil cover sheet and the information contained herein neither replaces nor supplements the filings and service of pleading or other papers as required by law, except as provided by local rules of court. This form, approved by the Judicial Conference of the United States in September 1974, is required for the use of the Clerk of Court for the purpose of initiating the civil docket sheet. Consequently, a civil cover sheet is submitted to the Clerk of Court for each civil complaint filed. The attorney filing a case should complete the form as follows:

I.(a) Plaintiffs-Defendants. Enter names (last, first, middle initial) of plaintiff and defendant. If the plaintiff or defendant is a government agency, use only the full name or standard abbreviations. If the plaintiff or defendant is an official within a government agency, identify first the agency and then the official, giving both name and title.

(b) County of Residence. For each civil case filed, except U.S. plaintiff cases, enter the name of the county where the first listed plaintiff resides at the time of filing. In U.S. plaintiff cases, enter the name of the county in which the first listed defendant resides at the time of filing. (NOTE: In land condemnation cases, the county of residence of the "defendant" is the location of the tract of land involved.)

(c) Attorneys. Enter the firm name, address, telephone number, and attorney of record. If there are several attorneys, list them on an attachment, noting in this section "(see attachment)".

II. Jurisdiction. The basis of jurisdiction is set forth under Rule 8(a), F.R.Cv.P., which requires that jurisdictions be shown in pleadings. Place an "X" in one of the boxes. If there is more than one basis of jurisdiction, precedence is given in the order shown below.
United States plaintiff. (1) Jurisdiction based on 28 U.S.C. 1345 and 1348. Suits by agencies and officers of the United States are included here.
United States defendant. (2) When the plaintiff is suing the United States, its officers or agencies, place an "X" in this box.
Federal question. (3) This refers to suits under 28 U.S.C. 1331, where jurisdiction arises under the Constitution of the United States, an amendment to the Constitution, an act of Congress or a treaty of the United States. In cases where the U.S. is a party, the U.S. plaintiff or defendant code takes precedence, and box 1 or 2 should be marked.
Diversity of citizenship. (4) This refers to suits under 28 U.S.C. 1332, where parties are citizens of different states. When Box 4 is checked, the citizenship of the different parties must be checked. (See Section III below; NOTE: federal question actions take precedence over diversity cases.)

III. Residence (citizenship) of Principal Parties. This section of the JS 44 is to be completed if diversity of citizenship was indicated above. Mark this section for each principal party.

IV. Nature of Suit. Place an "X" in the appropriate box. If there are multiple nature of suit codes associated with the case, pick the nature of suit code that is most applicable. Click here for: Nature of Suit Code Descriptions.

V. Origin. Place an "X" in one of the seven boxes.
Original Proceedings. (1) Cases which originate in the United States district courts.
Removed from State Court. (2) Proceedings initiated in state courts may be removed to the district courts under Title 28 U.S.C., Section 1441.
Remanded from Appellate Court. (3) Check this box for cases remanded to the district court for further action. Use the date of remand as the filing date.
Reinstated or Reopened. (4) Check this box for cases reinstated or reopened in the district court. Use the reopening date as the filing date.
Transferred from Another District. (5) For cases transferred under Title 28 U.S.C. Section 1404(a). Do not use this for within district transfers or multidistrict litigation transfers.
Multidistrict Litigation – Transfer. (6) Check this box when a multidistrict case is transferred into the district under authority of Title 28 U.S.C. Section 1407.
Multidistrict Litigation – Direct File. (8) Check this box when a multidistrict case is filed in the same district as the Master MDL docket.
PLEASE NOTE THAT THERE IS NOT AN ORIGIN CODE 7. Origin Code 7 was used for historical records and is no longer relevant due to changes in statute.

VI. Cause of Action. Report the civil statute directly related to the cause of action and give a brief description of the cause. Do not cite jurisdictional statutes unless diversity. Example: U.S. Civil Statute: 47 USC 553 Brief Description: Unauthorized reception of cable service.

VII. Requested in Complaint. Class Action. Place an "X" in this box if you are filing a class action under Rule 23, F.R.Cv.P.
Demand. In this space enter the actual dollar amount being demanded or indicate other demand, such as a preliminary injunction.
Jury Demand. Check the appropriate box to indicate whether or not a jury is being demanded.

VIII. Related Cases. This section of the JS 44 is used to reference related pending cases, if any. If there are related pending cases, insert the docket numbers and the corresponding judge names for such cases.

Date and Attorney Signature. Date and sign the civil cover sheet.

Home State License

The Gary, Indiana facility is located in a state that does not require a license to distribute medical devices. Because Indiana does not require a license to distribute medical devices, a copy of the resident state license is not included. The Gary, Indiana facility is, however, regulated by the US Food and Drug Administration ('FDA').

Who Needs a Wholesale Drug Distributor License

For more information regarding the statutes and rules regulating wholesale drug distributors, please review them below.

For legal interpretations, please refer to your legal counsel; the Board office does not interpret the rules and regulations.
