Stemedica Cell Technologies

Provide explanation below:

In early 2023, I was an investor in a company named Stemedica Cell Technologies. At that time, they were involved in a lawsuit prior to my relationship with the company. I consulted with them for about six months.

Stemedica asked for my assistance is trying to get their company back on track and officially hired me as their CEO in September of 2023 - without a salary. My focus was to cut any non-essential expenses, inefficiencies, and misalignments. Unfortunately, after about a year of effort, it was apparent the Company could not survive.

I left the company as the decision was made to dissolve. After I left, the company declared Bankruptcy and their cases are ongoing as far as I know. I do not have any further information on the status of the case.

Subject: Clarification of DME Licensure Requirement

To Whom It May Concern,

I am writing to address the request for a Durable Medical Equipment (DME) license as part of the provider enrollment process. Per the National Supplier Clearinghouse (NSC) licensure database, Washington does not require a separate state-issued DME license for suppliers operating within its jurisdiction.

As such, we respectfully request that the application proceed without the requirement for a state DME license. Please refer to the NSC licensure database for verification. If any further clarification is needed, kindly let us know, and we will be happy to provide additional documentation.

Thank you for your time and attention to this matter. We look forward to your confirmation of receipt and processing of the application without this requirement.

Sincerely,
Frumi Levitin Marasow

Cautionary Note Regarding Forward-Looking Statements and Industry Data

This Annual Report on Form 10-K, or this Annual Report, contains forward-looking statements within the meaning of the U.S. Private Securities Litigation Reform Act and Section 21E of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, as amended, that involve substantial risk and uncertainties. All statements other than statements of historical fact, contained in this Annual Report, including statements regarding our strategy, future operations, future financial position, future revenue, projected costs, prospects, plans and objectives of management, are forward-looking statements. The words "anticipate," "believe," "continue," "could," "estimate," "expect," "intend," "may," "might," "plan," "potential," "predict," "project," "should," "target," "will," "would," or the negative of these words or other similar expressions are intended to identify forward-looking statements, although not all forward-looking statements contain these identifying words.

The forward-looking statements in this Annual Report include, among other things, statements about:

- the initiation, timing, design, progress and results of our research and development programs, preclinical studies and clinical trials;
- the anticipated timing of the submission and clearance of investigational new drug applications, or INDs, and comparable foreign applications for any product candidates we may develop;
- the timing of and our ability to submit applications for, obtain and maintain regulatory approvals for any product candidates we may develop;
- our estimates regarding expenses, future revenue, capital requirements, need for additional financing and the period over which we believe our cash, cash equivalents and marketable securities will be sufficient to fund our operating expenses, debt service obligations and capital expenditure requirements;
- our ability to comply with restrictive covenants under our loan agreement, or the Loan Agreement, with Hercules Capital, Inc., or Hercules;
- our ability to satisfy interest and principal payments under the Loan Agreement;
- our plans to develop and, if approved, subsequently commercialize any product candidates we may develop;
- the potential advantages of our FORCE platform;
- our commercialization, marketing and manufacturing capabilities and strategy;
- our intellectual property position and our expectations regarding our ability to obtain and maintain intellectual property protection;
- our ability to identify additional products, product candidates or technologies with significant commercial potential that are consistent with our commercial objectives;
- the impact of government laws and regulations;
- our competitive position and expectations regarding developments and projections relating to our competitors and any competing therapies that are or become available; and
- our ability to establish and maintain collaborations or obtain additional funding.

We may not actually achieve the plans, intentions or expectations disclosed in our forward-looking statements, and you should not place undue reliance on our forward-looking statements. Actual results or events could differ materially from the plans, intentions and expectations disclosed in the forward-looking statements we make. We have included important factors in this Annual Report, particularly in Item 1A. "Risk Factors" in this Annual Report, that we believe could cause actual results or events to differ materially from the forward-looking statements that we make. Moreover, we operate in a competitive and rapidly changing environment. New risk factors and uncertainties may emerge from time to time, and it is not possible for management to predict all risk factors and uncertainties, nor can we assess the impact of all factors on our business or the extent to which any factor, or combination of factors, may cause actual results to differ materially from those contained in any forward-looking statements we may make. Our forward-looking statements do not reflect the potential impact of any future acquisitions, mergers, dispositions, collaborations, joint ventures or investments we may make or enter into.

You should read this Annual Report and the documents that we have filed or incorporated by reference as exhibits to this Annual Report with the understanding that our actual future results may be materially different from what we expect. The forward-looking statements contained in this Annual Report are made as of the date of this Annual Report, and we do not assume any obligation to update any forward-looking statements, whether as a result of new information, future events or otherwise, except as required by applicable law.

This Annual Report includes statistical and other industry and market data that we obtained from independent industry publications and research, surveys and studies conducted by independent third parties as well as our own estimates of the prevalence of certain diseases and conditions. The market data used in this Annual Report involves a number of assumptions and limitations, and you are cautioned not to give undue weight to such data. Industry publications and third-party research, surveys and studies generally indicate that their information has been obtained from sources believed to be reliable, although they do not guarantee the accuracy or completeness of such information. Our estimates of the patient population with the potential to benefit from treatment with any of our product candidates includes several key assumptions based on our industry knowledge, industry publications, third-party research and other surveys, which may be based on a small sample size and may fail to accurately reflect the addressable patient population. While we believe that our internal assumptions are reasonable, no independent source has verified such assumptions.

This Annual Report contains references to our trademarks and service marks and to those belonging to other entities. Solely for convenience, trademarks and trade names referred to in this Annual Report, including logos, artwork and other visual displays, may appear without the ® or ™ symbols, but such references are not intended to indicate in any way that we will not assert, to the fullest extent under applicable law, our rights or the rights of the applicable licensor to these trademarks and trade names. We do not intend our use or display of other entities' trade names, trademarks or service marks to imply a relationship with, or endorsement or sponsorship of us by, any other entity.

Risk Factor Summary

Our business is subject to a number of risks that, if realized, could materially affect our business, prospects, operating results and financial condition. These risks are discussed more fully in the "Risk Factors" section of this Annual Report. These risks include, but are not limited to, the following:

- we will need substantial additional funding. If we are unable to raise capital when needed, we could be forced to delay, reduce or eliminate our product development programs or commercialization efforts;
- our product candidates are in varying stages of preclinical and clinical development, and we have not completed clinical development of any product candidate. We do not expect to have a product candidate ready for commercialization at least until 2027, if ever. If we are unable to advance product candidates through preclinical studies and clinical trials, obtain marketing approval and ultimately commercialize them, or experience significant delays in doing so, our business will be materially harmed;
- we may encounter substantial delays in commencement, enrollment or completion of our clinical trials and the data from the clinical trials of our product candidates may fail to demonstrate sufficient safety and efficacy to warrant further development or satisfy the applicable regulatory authorities, which could prevent us from commercializing any product candidates we determine to develop on a timely basis, if at all;
- our approach to the discovery and development of product candidates based on our FORCE platform is unproven, and we may not be successful in our efforts to develop our product candidates;
- the outcome of preclinical studies and initial data from earlier-stage clinical trials may not be predictive of final results of clinical trials or future clinical trials and data from trials in one indication may not be predictive of results of clinical trials in other indications;
- if our product candidates cause undesirable side effects or have other unexpected adverse properties, such side effects or properties could delay or prevent us from conducting clinical trials or seeking or obtaining regulatory approval, limit the commercial potential of our product candidates or result in significant negative consequences to the extent such effects or adverse properties are observed following any marketing approval;
- our Loan Agreement contains restrictive and financial covenants that may limit our operating flexibility and our failure to comply with the covenants or other terms of the Loan Agreement, including as a result of events beyond our control, could result in a default under the Loan Agreement that could materially and adversely affect our business;
- we rely, and expect to continue to rely, on third parties to conduct some or all aspects of our product manufacturing, research, preclinical and clinical testing, and these third parties may not perform satisfactorily;
- we face substantial competition, which may result in others discovering, developing or commercializing products before us or more successfully than we do;
- our rights to develop and commercialize certain of our product candidates are subject or may in the future be subject, in part, to the terms and conditions of licenses granted to us by third parties. If we fail to comply with our obligations under current or future intellectual property license agreements or otherwise experience disruptions to our business relationships with our current or any future licensors, we could lose intellectual property rights that are important to our business; and
- if we or our licensors are unable to obtain, maintain and defend patent and other intellectual property protection for any product candidates or technology, or if the scope of the patent or other intellectual property protection obtained is not sufficiently broad, our competitors could develop and commercialize products and technology similar or identical to ours, and our ability to successfully develop and commercialize our product candidates or our technology may be adversely affected due to such competition.

Item 1. Business.

Overview

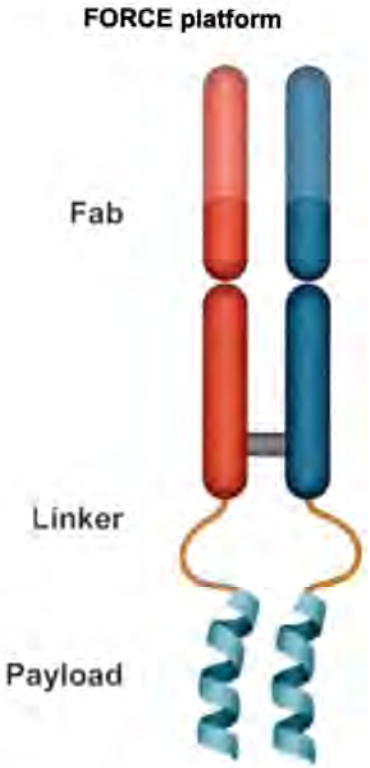
We are a clinical-stage company focused on delivering functional improvement for people living with genetically driven neuromuscular diseases. Our proprietary FORCE platform is designed to leverage the transferrin receptor 1, or TfR1, to deliver targeted therapeutics to muscle tissue and the central nervous system, or CNS. The FORCE platform utilizes an antigen-binding fragment antibody, or Fab, targeting TfR1 conjugated to a payload that we rationally design to target the genetic basis of the disease we are seeking to treat. With our FORCE platform, we have the flexibility to deploy different classes of payloads (such as oligonucleotides and enzymes) with specific mechanisms of action that modify target functions. We currently leverage this modularity to focus on neuromuscular diseases with high unmet need, with etiologic targets and with clear translational potential from preclinical disease models to well-defined clinical development and regulatory pathways.

Using our FORCE platform, we are assembling a broad portfolio of product candidates, including product candidates being developed for Duchenne muscular dystrophy, or DMD, myotonic dystrophy type 1, or DM1, facioscapulohumeral dystrophy, or FSHD, and Pompe disease. In addition, we plan to expand our portfolio through development efforts focused on diseases involving the CNS, rare skeletal muscle diseases, and cardiac and metabolic muscle diseases, including some with larger patient populations. We have identified product candidates for each of our DMD (amenable to skipping exons 51, 53, 45, 44, and 55), DM1, FSHD and Pompe programs that are in varying stages of preclinical and clinical development.

The following table summarizes our portfolio:

Our product candidate zeleciment rostudirsen, or z-rostudirsen (also known as DYNE-251), is currently being evaluated in the DELIVER trial, a global Phase 1/2 clinical trial in patients with DMD amenable to exon 51 skipping, which is designed to be registrational. We plan to submit a biologics license application, or BLA, to the U.S. Food and Drug Administration, or FDA, for U.S. Accelerated Approval of z-rostudirsen for DMD patients who have mutations amenable to exon 51 skipping in the second quarter of 2026 based on dystrophin as a surrogate endpoint. We continue to expect a potential U.S. launch of z-rostudirsen in the first quarter of 2027, assuming the FDA grants priority review and FDA approval is received on the anticipated timeline. Further, we plan to initiate a global confirmatory Phase 3 clinical trial of z-rostudirsen in the second quarter of 2026, and we have aligned with the FDA on the Phase 3 trial design and protocol. We continue to pursue approval pathways outside of the United States for z-rostudirsen.

Our product candidate zeleciment basivarsen, or z-basivarsen (also known as DYNE-101) is being evaluated in the ACHIEVE trial, a global Phase 1/2 clinical trial in patients with DM1, which is designed to be registrational. We plan to submit a BLA to the FDA for U.S. Accelerated Approval of z-basivarsen for DM1 patients early in the third quarter of 2027. We anticipate a potential U.S. launch of z-basivarsen in the first quarter of 2028, assuming we receive favorable data from the ACHIEVE trial, priority review is granted, and FDA approval is received on the anticipated timeline. We plan to initiate a global confirmatory Phase 3 clinical trial of z-basivarsen in March 2026, and we have aligned with the FDA on the Phase 3 trial design and protocol. We continue to pursue approval pathways outside of the United States for z-basivarsen.



Our approach

We have designed our proprietary FORCE platform using our deep knowledge of muscle biology. Our therapeutics consist of three essential components: a proprietary Fab, a linker and a payload that we attach to our Fab using the linker. We engineered our proprietary Fab to bind to TfR1 to enable targeted delivery to skeletal, cardiac and smooth muscle, and TfR1 binding may also enable delivery to the CNS. We connect the proprietary Fab to the therapeutic payload with a linker. We selected the linker for our DMD, DM1, and FSHD product candidates based on its clinically validated safety and efficacy in approved products, its serum stability and its ability to release the therapeutic payload within the muscle cell. For our Pompe product candidate, we selected a linker that effectively connects to the GAA enzyme payload. We attach the Fab and linker to a therapeutic payload that can be a phosphorodiamidate morpholino oligomer, or PMO, an antisense oligonucleotide, or ASO, a small interfering RNA, or siRNA, a small molecule, or a large molecule such as an enzyme, that we rationally select to target the genetic basis of disease to potentially stop or reverse disease progression. We use the same Fab for our product candidates which enables modularity of the platform.

While some therapeutics have been approved for the treatment of neuromuscular diseases, the development of these therapeutics has been limited by challenges in the delivery of the payload to the tissue or area of the CNS that requires therapy. To overcome these limitations, our FORCE platform utilizes the importance of TfR1, which is highly expressed on the surface of muscle cells, as the foundation of our novel approach of linking therapeutic payloads to our TfR1-binding Fab to deliver targeted therapeutics for muscle diseases. The mechanism of FORCE delivery is designed to utilize the natural biology of TfR1. We do not use membrane destabilizing agents to enter the cell or to escape the endosome. As a result, FORCE displays a distinct pharmacokinetic and pharmacodynamic profile, with the potential for a wide therapeutic index.

We have demonstrated proof-of-concept of our FORCE platform in our DELIVER and ACHIEVE clinical trials as well as in multiple in vitro and in vivo studies. In murine and non-human primate, or NHP, studies, we have delivered PMOs and ASOs to genetic targets within muscle tissue and observed durable, disease-modifying, functional benefit in preclinical models of disease. In DELIVER, z-rostudirsen has demonstrated best-in-class levels of dystrophin expression, exon skipping and percent dystrophin positive fibers while also showing improvement across multiple clinical measures including strength and time function tests. In ACHIEVE, z-basivarsen has demonstrated robust splicing correction and DMPK knockdown while also showing improvement across multiple clinical measures including myotonia, strength, timed function tests, and patient reported outcomes including measurements of the CNS manifestations of DM1.

The following graphic illustrates the three components of our therapeutics:

Proprietary antibody (Fab)

Our proprietary Fab is engineered to bind to TfR1 to enable targeted delivery of nucleic acids and other molecules to skeletal, cardiac and smooth muscle. A Fab is the region of an antibody that binds to antigens. We selected a Fab antibody over monoclonal antibodies, or mAbs, due to its potential significant advantages when targeting TfR1 to enable muscle delivery, including enhanced tissue penetration, increased tolerability due to lower protein load and reduced risk of immune system activation due to the lack of the Fc domain, the portion of an antibody that interacts with the immune system, on the Fab. To identify the proprietary Fab we use in our product candidates, we generated and screened proprietary antibodies for selectivity to TfR1 in order to enhance muscle specificity and for binding to TfR1 without interfering with the receptor's function of transporting iron into cells. Binding to TfR1 may also enable delivery to the CNS.

Linker

The role of the linker is to connect, or conjugate, the Fab and the therapeutic payload, such as oligonucleotide or enzyme. As a result, it is critical that the linker maintain stability in serum and provide release kinetics that favor sufficient payload accumulation in the targeted muscle cell. For our DMD, DM1 and FSHD product candidates, we have selected the Val-Cit linker based on its clinically validated safety and efficacy in approved products, its serum stability and its endosomal release attributes. We believe that serum stability is necessary to enable systemic intravenous administration, stability of the conjugated oligonucleotide in the bloodstream, delivery to muscle tissue and internalization of the therapeutic payload in the muscle cells. In preclinical studies, our Val-Cit linker facilitated precise conjugation of multiple types of payloads to our proprietary Fabs, including PMOs, ASOs and siRNAs. For our Pompe product candidate, we selected a linker that effectively connects to the GAA enzyme payload. This broad flexibility enables us to rationally select the appropriate type of payload to address the genetic basis of each muscle disease. Additionally, our linker and conjugation chemistry allow us to optimize the ratio of payload molecules attached to each Fab for each type of payload. We believe that our linker and conjugation chemistry will enable us to rapidly design, produce and screen molecules to enable new muscle disease programs.

Optimized payload

With our FORCE platform, we have the flexibility to deploy different types of therapeutic payloads with specific mechanisms of action that modify target functions. Using this modularity, we rationally select the therapeutic payload for each program to match the biology of the target, with the aim of addressing the genetic basis of disease and stopping or reversing disease progression. For instance, in our DM1 program, where the genetic driver of DM1 is mutant DMPK pre-mRNA located in the nucleus, we have determined to use an ASO because ASOs have advantages in degrading RNA in the nucleus when compared to siRNAs. In the case of our DMD program, we are utilizing an exon skipping PMO payload with the goal of enhancing dystrophin expression. For our FSHD program, we are utilizing a siRNA payload designed to reduce DUX4 expression. For our Pompe program, we are utilizing enzyme replacement therapy to address the deficiency of the lysosomal enzyme, acid alpha glucosidase, or GAA, the genetic basis of Pompe.

Advantages of our FORCE platform

Our FORCE platform is designed to deliver disease-modifying therapeutics for a broad portfolio of serious muscle diseases. We believe that our FORCE platform may provide the following potential advantages:

We have global commercial rights to all of our programs.

Duchenne muscular dystrophy (DMD)

Overview

We are developing product candidates under our DMD program to address the genetic basis of DMD by delivering a PMO to muscle tissue to promote the skipping of specific DMD exons in the nucleus, allowing muscle cells to create a more complete, functional dystrophin protein and to potentially stop or reverse disease progression. We believe that PMOs, with their preferential targeting of nuclear mechanisms, are the best payload to address nuclear exon skipping. In in vitro and in vivo preclinical studies, our PMOs when conjugated to a Fab targeting TfR1 have shown increased exon skipping, increased dystrophin expression, reduced muscle damage and increased muscle function. We are seeking to build a global DMD franchise by initially focusing on the development of our product candidate z-rostudirsen for patients with mutations amenable to skipping exon 51. Additionally, we are advancing four development candidates (DYNE-253, DYNE-245, DYNE-244 and DYNE-255) for the treatment of DMD amenable to skipping of exons 53, 45, 44 and 55, respectively, into IND-enabling studies. These programs are designed to enable the production of near full-length dystrophin in patients with DMD amenable to skipping of exons 53, 45, 44, or 55 by utilizing the same FORCE platform (Fab, linker, and payload chemistry) as z-rostudirsen.

Z-rostudirsen is currently being evaluated in the DELIVER trial, a Phase 1/2 global clinical trial in males with mutations amenable to skipping exon 51. The DELIVER trial began with a 24-week placebo-controlled multiple ascending dose, or MAD, portion, followed by a 24-week open-label extension, a 192-week long-term extension, and a registrational expansion cohort, or REC, designed to support Accelerated Approval in the United States. In September 2024, we announced the completion of the MAD portion of the trial, and in December 2025, we announced positive topline data from the REC portion of the trial.

Disease overview and prevalence

DMD is a monogenic, X-linked, disease caused by mutations in the gene that encodes for the dystrophin protein. Dystrophin protein is essential to maintain the structural integrity and normal function of muscle cells for walking, breathing and cardiac function. In patients with DMD, mutations in the dystrophin gene lead to certain exons being misread, resulting in the loss of function of the dystrophin protein. The reduction or absence of dystrophin leads to damage to muscle cell membranes, resulting in muscle cell death and progressive loss of muscle function.

DMD symptoms typically begin to manifest with weakness and progressive loss of muscle function beginning in the first few years of life. Young boys experience progressive muscle wasting and have difficulty standing up, climbing stairs, running, breathing and performing daily functions. As the disease progresses the severity of damage to skeletal and cardiac muscles results in patients experiencing total loss of ambulation in the pre-teenage or early teenage years. Progressive loss of upper extremity function is often observed in the mid-to-late teens followed by respiratory and/or cardiac failure, resulting in death before the age of 30. The below graphic highlights the mechanism of exon skipping and resulting dystrophin expression in healthy individuals and in DMD patients and how our DMD program is designed to address the genetic basis of DMD.

Targeting the Genetic Basis of DMD

We estimate that DMD occurs in approximately one in every 3,500 to 5,000 live male births and that approximately 12,000 patients in the United States, and approximately 16,000 patients in Europe, have DMD. Approximately 80% of patients with DMD have DMD mutations amenable to exon skipping in the nucleus. Exons 51, 53, 45 and 44 represent nearly half of the total mutations observed in DMD that are amenable to exon skipping, as illustrated in the figure below.

Overview of DMD exons amenable to skipping

Current approaches and limitations

Currently, patients with DMD are treated with corticosteroids to manage the inflammatory component of the disease. There are four FDA-approved naked PMO-based oligonucleotide therapies, each addressing a specific mutation: EXONDYS 51 (eteplirsen), which is approved for the treatment of DMD patients amenable to exon 51 skipping, VYONDYS 53 (golodirsen), which is approved for the treatment of DMD patients amenable to exon 53 skipping, VILTEPSO (vitolarsen), which is approved for the treatment of DMD patients amenable to exon 53 skipping and AMONDYS 45 (casimersen), which is approved for the treatment of DMD patients amenable to exon 45 skipping. Additionally, there is one FDA-approved gene therapy for use in ambulatory patients with a confirmed mutation in the dystrophin gene, ELEVIDYS (delandistrogene moxeparvovec-rokl). Each of the four naked PMO-based oligonucleotide therapies requires weekly intravenous infusions and ELEVIDYS requires a one-time intravenous infusion. Eteplirsen, golodirsen and casimersen have demonstrated a less than 1% mean increase in dystrophin in clinical trials and vitolarsen has demonstrated an approximately 5% increase in dystrophin in clinical trials. The FDA-approved labels for all four drugs state that a clinical benefit has not yet been established and that continued approval may be contingent upon the verification of such clinical benefit in confirmatory clinical trials. In Europe, the EMA has rejected an application for approval of eteplirsen citing insufficient evidence of clinical benefit. In addition, a fourth drug, TRANSLARNA (ataluren), has only been conditionally approved in the European Union, or EU, Iceland and South Korea for non-sense mutations in DMD in ambulatory patients aged five years and older. However, the European Commission issued a decision to not renew the conditional marketing authorization for TRANSLARNA in March 2025, following a negative opinion by the Committee for Medicinal Products for Human Use, or CHMP. In addition, two recent pivotal Phase 3 trials of other PMO therapies in development for treatment of DMD failed to meet their primary endpoint in function (viltolarsen Phase 3 and golodirsen/casimersen Phase 3). Each of these approved PMO products seeks to address DMD through the exon skipping approach we are pursuing, but we believe their limited efficacy is due to poor muscle uptake and biodistribution. There are a number of product candidates in development, including product candidates in late-stage clinical development, which seek to address DMD through the exon skipping approach we are pursuing, including naked oligonucleotides, targeted oligonucleotides and PMOs conjugated to charged peptides, as well as product candidates that seek to address DMD through gene editing and gene replacement with viral gene therapies and with other approaches. We believe that each of these approaches currently have significant limitations, and that there continues to be a high unmet medical need for new disease-modifying therapies.

Our approach

Our DMD program is designed to address the genetic basis of DMD by promoting the skipping of specific DMD exons in the nucleus, allowing muscle cells to create more complete, functional dystrophin protein. Under our DMD program, we are developing product candidates that incorporate our proprietary Fab targeting TfR1 conjugated to a PMO designed to promote the skipping of specific DMD exons in the nucleus. Existing clinical data generated by others supports the benefits of utilizing a single stranded ASO or PMO to skip the faulty exon in the nucleus of DMD patient cells. We believe our Fab targeting TfR1 allows for more efficient delivery of a PMO to skeletal, cardiac and smooth muscle cells, creating an opportunity to increase dystrophin expression, enable less frequent dosing and provide greater clinical benefit compared to current therapeutic approaches. We plan to develop our program candidates for DMD with a PMO, initially for exon 51 and in the future for other exon mutations including exons 53, 45 and 44.

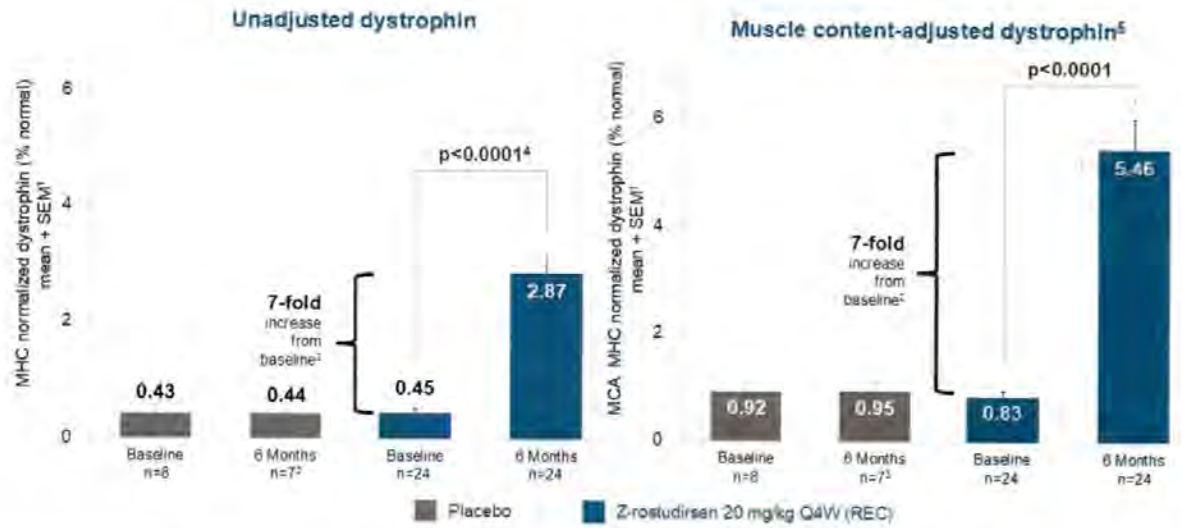
Z-Rostudirsen

We are evaluating z-rostudirsen in the global Phase 1/2 DELIVER clinical trial for people living with DMD who are amenable to exon 51 skipping. Z-rostudirsen consists of a PMO conjugated to a Fab that binds to TfR1. Z-rostudirsen has been awarded Breakthrough Therapy, Fast Track, and Rare Pediatric Disease designations by the FDA as well as Orphan Drug designation from the FDA, the EMA and the Japanese Ministry of Health, Labour and Welfare for the treatment of DMD mutations amenable to exon 51 skipping.

Preclinical data

We have conducted multiple in vitro and in vivo preclinical studies of our FORCE platform in DMD that have shown increased exon skipping, increased dystrophin expression, reduced muscle damage and increased muscle function. We believe these data support the potential for z-rostudirsen to be a disease-modifying therapy for patients with DMD amenable to skipping exon 51.

In studies in the mdx mouse DMD model, a validated and widely accepted mouse model in DMD which has a mutation in exon 23, we observed that single intravenous doses of an exon 23-targeting PMO conjugated to a Fab targeting TfR1 which we refer to as FORCE-M23D, achieved robust, durable exon skipping in cardiac and skeletal muscles after a single dose. In NHPs, z-rostudirsen demonstrated a favorable safety profile and achieved robust exon skipping, especially in the heart and diaphragm muscles which weaken over time leading to mortality in people living with DMD.



Phase 1/2 DELIVER Clinical Trial of Z-Rostudirsen in DMD

Z-rostudirsen is currently being evaluated in the DELIVER trial, a Phase 1/2 global clinical trial for DMD amenable to exon 51 skipping, which is designed to be registrational. DELIVER enrolled ambulant and non-ambulant males with DMD who are ages 4 to 16 and have mutations amenable to exon 51 skipping. The primary endpoints are safety, tolerability and change from baseline in dystrophin levels as measured by Western blot. Additional endpoints include pharmacokinetics and change from baseline in exon 51 skipping levels, muscle tissue percent dystrophin positive fibers, multiple assessments of muscle function, including rise from floor velocity, or RFF velocity, North Star Ambulatory Assessment, or NSAA, score, Stride Velocity 95th Centile and certain timed functional tests.

DELIVER began with a 24-week placebo-controlled MAD portion wherein participants were randomized to receive z-rostudirsen in doses ranging from 0.7 mg/kg to 40 mg/kg (approximate PMO dose) every four or eight weeks intravenously. Following the placebo-controlled period, MAD participants transitioned to z-rostudirsen treatment in the 24-week open-label portion of the trial and the 192-week long-term extension. In September 2024, we announced the completion of the MAD portion of the trial, and in November 2024, we announced the initiation of the 20 mg/kg administered once every four weeks, or Q4W (approximate PMO dose) REC to support submission for Accelerated Approval in the United States.

We completed enrollment of 32 participants in the REC, of whom 24 were randomized to receive z-rostudirsen 20 mg/kg Q4W (approximate PMO dose) and eight were randomized to placebo, in March 2025. In December 2025, we reported that the REC met its primary endpoint of demonstrating a statistically significant increase in muscle content-adjusted dystrophin relative to baseline at six months ($p<0.0001$) with a mean absolute expression of 5.46% of normal, as shown in the image below:

1. Biopsies taken approximately 28 days after most recent dose.
2. Based on geometric mean.
3. One REC placebo participant sample could not be analyzed at week 25.
4. Prespecified nominal p-value with no adjustment for multiplicity.
5. Muscle content-adjusted dystrophin is equal to MHC normalized dystrophin divided by a percentage of muscle content. 6 months corresponds to week 25 for DELIVER.
In the image above, REC means registrational expansion cohort; MCA means muscle content-adjusted; MHC means myosin heavy chain; Q4W means every 4 weeks; and SEM means standard error of the mean.

In addition, in the REC, functional improvement was observed across multiple clinical endpoints, and lung function (as measured by forced vital capacity percent predicted, or FVC%p) remained stable with clear separation from placebo. Two of these endpoints, RFF Velocity and 10-Meter Walk/Run Velocity, both improved relative to placebo at six months with a nominal $p<0.05$, even though the study was not powered to demonstrate statistical significance in any of the functional measures (post-hoc analysis; the prespecified statistical analysis plan did not include formal hypothesis testing for any functional endpoint). Importantly, lung function, the loss of which is a leading cause of mortality in DMD, as measured by Forced Vital Capacity Percent Predicted was preserved at six months compared to a decline in placebo. In December 2025, we also reported long-term results from the MAD cohorts, including 24-month functional data from six participants that were randomized to the 10 mg/kg Q4W cohort and escalated to 20 mg/kg Q4W after six months, 18-month functional data from the six participants that were randomized to the 20 mg/kg Q4W cohort, and pooled 18-month functional data from both cohorts, showing sustained functional improvement across multiple functional endpoints out to 24 months.

In December 2025, we reported safety and tolerability data from the DELIVER trial based on 86 total participants in the DELIVER trial and followed for up to 36 months, including participants initially enrolled in the MAD cohorts and the REC and who have transitioned to the longer-term extension portions of the trial. As of August 19, 2025, z-rostudirsen continued to demonstrate a favorable safety profile, and most related treatment emergent adverse events, or TEAEs, were mild or moderate. The most commonly reported related TEAEs were pyrexia (fever) and headache. No related serious TEAEs were observed in the REC.

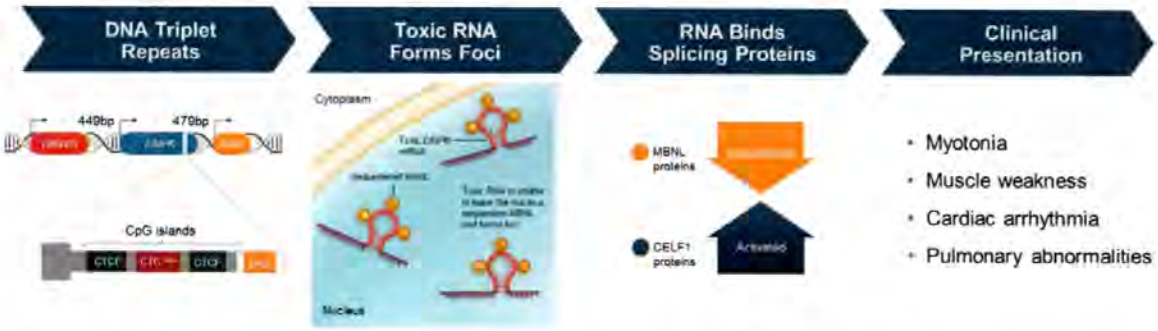
We plan to submit a BLA to the FDA for U.S. Accelerated Approval in the second quarter of 2026 based on dystrophin as a surrogate endpoint. We continue to expect a potential U.S. launch of z-rostudirsen in the first quarter of 2027, assuming the FDA grants priority review and approval is received on the anticipated timeline. Further, we plan to initiate a global confirmatory Phase 3 clinical trial of z-rostudirsen in the second quarter of 2026, and we have aligned with the FDA on the Phase 3 trial design and protocol. We continue to pursue approval pathways outside of the United States for z-rostudirsen.

Myotonic dystrophy type 1 (DM1)

Overview

We are developing our product candidate, z-basivarsen, to address the genetic basis of DM1 by targeting the toxic nuclear DMPK RNA that causes the disease. Z-basivarsen consists of our proprietary Fab conjugated with a clinically-validated linker to an ASO and is designed to reduce the accumulation of DMPK pre-mRNA in the nucleus, release splicing proteins and potentially stop or reverse disease progression. In in vitro and in vivo preclinical studies supporting our DM1 program, we have observed a reduction in nuclear foci and toxic nuclear DMPK RNA, correction of splicing changes, reversal of myotonia, which is a neuromuscular condition in which the relaxation of a muscle is impaired, and enhanced muscle distribution. Z-basivarsen is currently being evaluated in the ACHIEVE trial, a Phase 1/2 global clinical trial of adult patients with DM1. ACHIEVE, which is designed to be a registrational trial, consists of a 24-week MAD randomized, placebo-controlled period, a 24-week OLE, a 96-week long-term extension and a registrational expansion cohort.



In January 2025, we announced the completion of the MAD portion of the trial and announced significant splicing correction at three months compared to baseline and observed functional improvement across multiple clinical endpoints at the registration dose of 6.8 mg/kg administered once every eight weeks, or Q8W. In June and October 2025, we reported positive long-term efficacy and safety data from adult DM1 patients enrolled in the MAD portion of the ACHIEVE trial including data from the 6.8 mg/kg Q8W cohort (n=6) at up to 12 months, showing robust and sustained improvement in myotonia as measured by video hand-opening time, or vHOT.

Disease overview and prevalence

DM1 is a monogenic, autosomal dominant, progressive disease that primarily affects skeletal, cardiac and smooth muscles. DM1 patients can suffer from various manifestations of the disease including myotonia, muscle weakness, CNS manifestations including fatigue, cognition and sleep complications, gastrointestinal, or GI, complications, cardiac arrhythmias, and respiratory problems.

DM1 is caused by an abnormal expansion in a region of the DMPK gene. Specifically, DM1 is caused by an increase in the number of CTG triplet repeats found in the 3' non-coding region of the DMPK gene. The number of repeats ranges from up to approximately 35 in healthy individuals to many thousands in DM1 patients. The higher-than-normal number of triplet repeats form large hairpin loops that entrap the DMPK pre-mRNA in the nucleus and impart toxic activity, referred to as a toxic gain-of-function mutation. The mutant DMPK pre-mRNA sequesters in the nucleus, forming nuclear foci that bind splicing proteins. This inhibits the ability of splicing proteins to perform their normal function in the nucleus of guiding pre-mRNA processing of gene transcripts from many other genes. As a result, multiple pre-mRNAs that encode key proteins are mis-spliced. This mis-splicing in the nucleus results in the translation of atypical proteins which ultimately cause the clinical presentation of DM1. When nuclear DMPK levels are reduced, the nuclear foci that bind splicing proteins are diminished, releasing splicing proteins, allowing normal mRNA processing and translation of normal proteins, and potentially stopping or reversing disease progression. This disease process is illustrated below:

DM1: Genetic basis and clinical presentation

DM1 is estimated to have a genetic prevalence of 1 in 2,500 to 1 in 8,000 people in the United States and Europe, affecting approximately 40,000 people in the United States and over 55,000 people in the European Union. However, we believe that the patient population is currently underdiagnosed due to lack of available therapies as is observed for other rare diseases. DM1 is highly variable with respect to disease severity, presentation and age of onset.

We are advancing our own efforts to better characterize the actual DM1 patient population through a natural history study that we are sponsoring. We believe that the introduction of new therapies for DM1 will cause the diagnosis rate to improve, resulting in an increase in the overall prevalence estimates for the disease. Based on age of onset and severity of symptoms, DM1 is typically categorized into four overlapping phenotypes: late-onset; classical (adult-onset); childhood; and congenital (cDM1):

Overview of DM1 phenotypes

Phenotype	Clinical presentation	Estimated % of DM1 patients	Age of onset
Late-onset	• Myotonia • Muscle weakness • Cataracts	10%	40 - 70 years
Classical (Adult-onset)	• Muscle weakness and wasting • Myotonia • Cardiac conduction abnormalities • Respiratory insufficiency • Fatigue/Excessive daytime sleepiness • GI disturbance • Cataracts	65%	Early teens - 50 years
Childhood	• Psychological problems • Low IQ • Incontinence	15%	1 - 10 years
Congenital (cDM1)	• Infantile hypotonia • Severe generalized weakness • Respiratory deficits • Intellectual disability • Classic signs present in adults	10%	Birth

All DM1 phenotypes, except the late-onset form, are associated with high levels of disease burden and premature mortality. The clinical course of DM1 is progressive, and may become extremely disabling, especially when more generalized limb weakness and respiratory muscle involvement develops. Systemic manifestations such as fatigue, GI complications, cataracts and excessive daytime sleepiness greatly impact a patient's quality of life. As a result, DM1 leads to physical impairment, activity limitations and decreased participation in social activities and work. Excluding congenital DM1 deaths, life expectancy ranges from 45 years to 60 years. Approximately 80% of early mortality is caused by cardiorespiratory complications. Respiratory failure due to muscle weakness (especially diaphragmatic weakness) causes at least 50% of early mortality, and cardiac abnormalities, including sudden death, account for approximately 30% of early mortality.

Current approaches and limitations

There are currently no disease-modifying therapies to treat DM1 that are approved and treatment is focused largely on symptom management or palliative therapies. There are a number of product candidates in development, including product candidates in late-stage clinical development, that also are focused on symptom management or palliative therapies and do not target toxic nuclear DMPK RNA, which is the genetic basis of the disease. In addition, delpacibart etedesiran is an antibody linked siRNA that targets the genetic basis of DM1 and is currently being evaluated in a Phase 3 clinical trial. There remains a high unmet medical need for new disease-modifying therapies.

Our approach - Z-Basivarsen

Our program is designed to address the genetic basis of DM1 by targeting the toxic nuclear DMPK RNA that is the cause of the disease. Our product candidate, z-basivarsen, consists of our proprietary Fab targeting TfR1 conjugated to an ASO to reduce the levels of mutant DMPK RNA in the nucleus, thereby releasing splicing proteins, allowing normal mRNA processing and translation of normal proteins, and potentially stopping or reversing disease progression. The ASO is a gapmer oligonucleotide that is designed to translocate to the nucleus, bind its complementary sequence on the DMPK RNA, recruit RNAseH1 to degrade DMPK RNA and thus reduce toxic nuclear DMPK RNA. We have chosen to develop our product candidate with an ASO because single-stranded ASOs preferentially target nuclear RNAs, which is essential for degradation of toxic nuclear DMPK RNA. Z-basivarsen has been awarded orphan drug designation for the treatment of DM1 by both the FDA and the European Medicines Agency, or EMA. The FDA has granted Fast Track and Breakthrough designations for z-basivarsen for the treatment of DM1.

Preclinical data

We have conducted extensive preclinical studies supporting the development of z-basivarsen in multiple preclinical disease models. In in vitro and in vivo preclinical studies, we observed a reduction of nuclear foci, correction of splicing and reversal of myotonia in disease models, as well as reduction of toxic human nuclear DMPK in a hTfR1/DMSXL DM1 mouse model developed by us. In NHPs, z-basivarsen demonstrated a favorable safety profile and achieved enhanced muscle distribution as evidenced by a reduction in wild-type DMPK RNA.

Phase 1/2 ACHIEVE Clinical Trial of Z-Basivarsen in DM1

Z-basivarsen is currently being evaluated in the ACHIEVE trial, a global Phase 1/2 clinical trial consisting of a 24-week MAD, randomized, placebo-controlled period, a 24-week OLE, a 96-week long-term extension, and a registrational expansion cohort. The primary endpoints of the MAD portion of the trial were safety and tolerability; with secondary endpoints of pharmacokinetics and pharmacodynamics, including change from baseline in splicing as measured by the composite alternative splicing index, or CASI-22, myotonia, as measured by vHOT, as well as multiple measures of muscle strength and function and patient-reported outcomes, including the Myotonic Dystrophy Health Index, or MDHI. In the MAD portion of the ACHIEVE trial, patients were randomized to receive z-basivarsen or placebo intravenously every four weeks or every eight weeks for 24 weeks, depending on cohort. Patient cohorts were dosed from 1.8 mg/kg to 6.8 mg/kg (approximate ASO dose). Following the MAD placebo-controlled period, patients transitioned to z-basivarsen treatment in the OLE portion of the trial and in the long-term extension.

In January 2025, we announced the completion of the MAD portion of the ACHIEVE trial in adults with DM1 and reported efficacy and safety data, including data from the 6.8 mg/kg Q8W cohort (n=8) at up to 6 months. At the 6.8 mg/kg Q8W dose, z-basivarsen resulted in significant splicing correction at 3 months compared to baseline, early and robust improvement in myotonia at six months, improvement in multiple functional endpoints, beginning at 3 months and continuing at 6 months, and improvement in patient reported outcomes, including scales assessing CNS disease manifestations, at 6 months.

In June and October 2025, we reported positive long-term efficacy and safety data from adult DM1 patients enrolled in the MAD portion of the ACHIEVE trial, including data from the 6.8 mg/kg Q8W cohort (n=6) at up to 12 months. At the 6.8 mg/kg Q8W dose, z-basivarsen demonstrated robust and sustained improvement in myotonia as measured by vHOT as well as sustained improvements across multiple other endpoints. Treatment with z-basivarsen led to an improvement in vHOT of 3.3 seconds as compared to placebo at 6 months, and data demonstrated that mean improvements at 6 months were sustained at 12 months for vHOT, 10-Meter Walk/Run Test, or 10MWR, 5 Times Sit to Stand Test, or 5xSTS, MDHI, and Qualitative Muscle Testing, or QMT, which demonstrated a 10% improvement in strength at 6 months, increasing to 20% at 12 months relative to baseline. Improvements from baseline were also observed in the 9-Hole Peg Test, a measure of upper limb function focused on manual dexterity and coordination; QMT scores across both upper and lower extremities showing robust and sustained improvement; MDHI subscales of mobility, ability to do activities and upper extremity function showing robust and sustained improvement; and the Patient Global Impression of Change, and Clinician Global Impression of Change, scales showing improvement in overall disease burden.

In June 2025, we also reported updated safety and tolerability data from the 56 patients enrolled through the MAD and OLE portions of the ACHIEVE trial. As of the data cutoff date of April 23, 2025, z-basivarsen demonstrated a favorable safety profile. Additionally, the majority of treatment-emergent adverse events were mild or moderate, and no related serious treatment-emergent adverse events were identified.

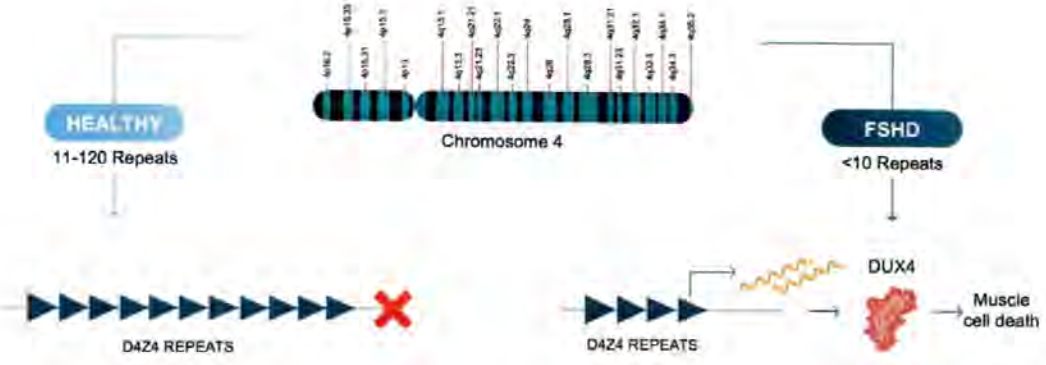
The ACHIEVE trial also includes a REC, which is currently ongoing. The primary endpoint in the REC is the change from baseline in middle finger myotonia as measured by vHOT at 6 months compared to placebo, which is intended to serve as an intermediate clinical endpoint for U.S. Accelerated Approval. Secondary endpoints include change from baseline in splicing as measured by CASI-22, muscle strength as assessed by QMT, performance on both the 10MWR and 5xSTS, as well as the MDHI, all at 6 months compared to placebo. We intend that the data from the REC portion and ongoing long-term extension portions of the ACHIEVE trial will support a potential submission for U.S. Accelerated Approval.

The ACHIEVE REC is expected to enroll 60 patients at the 6.8 mg/kg Q8W. We expect to complete enrollment in the REC in the second quarter of 2026, with data from this cohort planned for the first quarter of 2027 and potential submission for U.S. Accelerated Approval planned for early in the third quarter of 2027.

We plan to initiate a global confirmatory Phase 3 clinical trial of z-basivarsen in March 2026, and we have aligned with the FDA on the Phase 3 trial design and protocol. We continue to pursue approval pathways for z-basivarsen outside of the United States. We anticipate a potential launch of z-basivarsen in the first quarter of 2028, assuming we receive favorable data, priority review is granted, and FDA approval is received on the anticipated timeline.

Facioscapulohumeral Dystrophy (FSHD)

Overview



We are developing DYNE-302 to address the genetic basis of FSHD by reducing DUX4 expression in muscle tissue. In June 2024 and June 2025, we announced new preclinical data for DYNE-302, our product candidate for FSHD, that demonstrated robust and durable DUX4 suppression and functional benefit in a mouse model. We generated these data using an innovative hTfR1/iFLExD mouse model we developed that expresses TfR1 and enables tunable DUX4 induction in skeletal muscle. In hTfR1/iFLExD mice, a single intravenous dose of DYNE-302 resulted in dose-dependent and robust reduction of the DUX4 transcriptome that lasted up to three months, with benefit on muscle structure and function. DYNE-302 also demonstrated high in vitro potency in FSHD patient-derived myotubes. We are progressing DYNE-302 toward clinical development.

Disease overview and prevalence

FSHD is one of the most common muscular dystrophies and affects both sexes equally, with onset typically in teens and young adults. FSHD is characterized by progressive skeletal muscle loss that initially causes weakness in muscles in the face, shoulders, arms and trunk and progresses to weakness in muscles in lower extremities and the pelvic girdle. Skeletal muscle weakness results in significant physical limitations, including progressive loss of facial muscles that can cause an inability to smile or communicate, difficulty using arms for activities of daily living and difficulty getting out of bed, with many patients ultimately becoming dependent upon the use of a wheelchair for daily mobility activities. We estimate that the patient population is between 15,000 and 40,000 in the United States and approximately 20,000 to 50,000 in the European Union. We believe that there may be additional patients who are not formally diagnosed due to a perceived difficulty of obtaining a diagnosis and the fact that there are no approved treatments. Approximately two-thirds of cases are familial-inherited in an autosomal dominant fashion and one-third of cases occur randomly or as a result of environmental factors. FSHD affects all ethnic groups with similar incidence and prevalence.

FSHD is caused by aberrant expression of the DUX4 gene in muscle resulting in inappropriate presence of the DUX4 protein, a transcription factor causing the expression of other genes. Normally, DUX4-driven gene expression is limited to early embryonic development, after which time the DUX4 gene is silenced. In patients with FSHD, a genetic mutation causes expression of DUX4 protein to continue after embryonic development. The DUX4 protein regulates the expression of multiple genes encoding other proteins, some of which are toxic to muscle. Evidence of aberrant expression of DUX4 and the genes it activates, including ZSCAN4, MBD3L2, and TRIM43, is a major molecular signature that distinguishes muscles affected by FSHD from healthy muscle. The aberrant expression of DUX4 in FSHD results in muscle death and replacement by fat, which leads to the progressive muscle weakness and disability which characterize the disease, as shown in the figure below.

FSHD: genetic basis and disease process

Current approaches and limitations

There are currently no approved therapies for FSHD, and patients are treated with pain management and physical therapy. There are a number of product candidates in clinical development, including delpacibart braxlosiran, an antibody oligonucleotide conjugate which targets DUX4 being evaluated in a Phase 3 clinical trial. To aid in the development of therapies for FSHD, we are sponsoring an ongoing natural history study seeking to validate new clinical outcome assessments and evaluate physiological biomarkers to support the design and implementation of future clinical trials.

We have a broad portfolio of medicines to treat MS, have introduced the first approved treatment for SMA, co-developed treatments to address a defining pathology of Alzheimer's disease and launched the first approved treatment to target a genetic cause of ALS. We market the first and only drug approved in the U.S., the E.U. and certain international markets for the treatment of FA in adults and adolescents aged 16 years and older. We are focused on advancing our pipeline in neurology, specialized immunology and rare diseases. We support our drug discovery and development efforts through internal research and development programs, external collaborations and acquisitions.

Our marketed products include VUMERITY, TYSABRI, TECFIDERA, AVONEX and PLEGRIDY for the treatment of MS; SPINRAZA for the treatment of SMA; SKYCLARYS for the treatment of FA; and QALSODY for the treatment of ALS.

We also have collaborations with Eisai on the commercialization of LEQEMBI for the treatment of Alzheimer's disease and Supernus on the commercialization of ZURZUVAE for the treatment of PPD. The following is a summary of key developments affecting our business since the beginning of 2025.

ACQUISITIONS

ALCYONE THERAPEUTICS, INC.

In November 2025 we completed the acquisition of all of the issued and outstanding shares of Alcyone Therapeutics, Inc., a clinical-stage biotechnology company focused on pediatric care through precision CNS therapeutics and dosing platforms. Alcyone's lead asset is ThecaFlex DRx, an implantable subcutaneous port and catheter device being investigated for the intrathecal delivery of ASOs, including SPINRAZA, which is designed to provide an alternative to repeat lumbar punctures in chronic intrathecal administration of medicines.

Total consideration for this transaction, which was recorded in acquired in-process research and development, upfront and milestone expense in our consolidated statements of income for the year ended December 31, 2025, was approximately $85.0 million, comprising a $50.0 million payment made upon closing and a $35.0 million payment that was considered probable as of December 31, 2025, and made upon FDA approval of a supplemental application in January 2026.

We may pay additional development and regulatory milestone payments to the former shareholders of Alcyone of up to a total of $75.0 million if approval is received for ThecaFlex DRx administration of SPINRAZA or other additional pipeline products.

We accounted for this transaction as an asset acquisition as the value being acquired primarily relates to a single asset. Under the terms of this acquisition, we will oversee the end-to-end development, manufacturing and commercialization of ThecaFlex DRx.

For additional information on our acquisition of Alcyone, please read Note 2, Acquisitions, to our consolidated financial statements included in this report.

As there is a substantive transfer of risk to the financial partner for the amount invested, the development funding will be recognized by us as an obligation to perform contractual services. This funding is being recognized as a reduction to research and development expense within our consolidated statements of income, proportionate to the related expense. For the year ended December 31, 2025, we recorded a reduction to research and development expense of $200.0 million within our consolidated statements of income.

If the litifilimab clinical trials are successful for the indications based on the applicable clinical trials, upon regulatory approval in the U.S. or certain major markets in the world, Royalty Pharma will be eligible to receive approval-based fixed milestone payments of up to $250.0 million. The milestone payments due upon approval will be recorded as a component of other (income) expense, net within our consolidated statements of income, when incurred.

If litifilimab receives regulatory approval, Royalty Pharma will be eligible to receive royalties of a mid-single digit percentage of the applicable net sales. Royalties on net sales will be recorded as cost of sales within our consolidated statements of income.

PRODUCT AND PIPELINE DEVELOPMENTS

NEUROLOGY

LEQEMBI (lecanemab)

- In December 2025 we and Eisai announced that LEQEMBI has been included in the "Commercial Insurance Innovative Drug List" recently introduced by the National Healthcare Security Administration of China. The Commercial Insurance Innovative Drug List is based on new policies of the Chinese government to support the development and access of innovative medicines.

- In December 2025 Eisai presented Phase 3 clinical data confirming pharmacological effect of LEQEMBI at the 2025 CTAD conference. The findings represent the results from a large-scale clinical study demonstrating, for the first time, that binding of lecanemab to protofibrils can be measured in cerebrospinal fluid, enabling further understanding of how lecanemab slows Alzheimer's disease progression.
- In July 2025 Eisai announced the interim results of a two-year real-world study of LEQEMBI in the U.S. at the 2025 AAIC conference. The study was conducted to investigate the actual state of real-world clinical treatment with LEQEMBI at 15 medical centers in the U.S., with a final report scheduled for late in the third quarter of Eisai's fiscal year ending March 31, 2026. In this interim study, 83.6% of patients either remained at the same clinical stage or improved from mild dementia to MCI (stable: 76.9%, improvement: 6.7%). Additionally, at time of interim data cut, 86.7% of patients who had received 40 or more doses over 18 months remained stable or showed clinical improvement (stable: 66.7%, improvement: 20%).

RARE DISEASE

ZOREVUNERSEN

- In December 2025 we and Stoke announced new data that further support the potential of zorevunersen, an investigational ASO, as a disease-modifying medicine for Dravet syndrome, at the 2025 American Epilepsy Society Annual Meeting in Atlanta, Georgia. Long-term results from the ongoing Phase 1/2a and OLE studies demonstrated durable seizure reductions, including increases in seizure-free days, in addition to improvements in cognition, behavior and quality of life in patients treated with zorevunersen on top of care anti-seizure medicines.
- In November 2025 we and Stoke announced the publication of final data from the BUTTERFLY study, a prospective, two-year natural history study in people with Dravet syndrome, a severe developmental and epileptic encephalopathy characterized by recurrent seizures and significant and behavioral impairments. The BUTTERFLY study evaluated the impact of Dravet syndrome on adaptive functioning and neurodevelopment over two years in children and adolescents ages 2 to 18 years old. Results showed neurodevelopment plateaued at the developmental age of approximately two years old. Over the two-year study, patients experienced minimal changes in cognitive and behavior, including communication, motor skills and personal skills, compared to typical neurodevelopment expected for children of the same age, and major motor seizure frequency increased by 10.6% over two years.
- In September 2025 we and Stoke announced data from Phase 1/2a and open-label extension studies of zorevunersen that support the potential for zorevunersen to be the first disease-modifying medicine for Dravet syndrome at the 36th International Epilepsy Congress in Lisbon, Portugal. The study showed durable reductions in seizures and continuing improvements in cognition and behavior through three years in patients who continued to receive zorevunersen in the OLE studies. The study also showed substantial increase in seizure-free days and continuous improvement in quality of life demonstrated in patients already taking standard of care anti-seizure medicines.
- In August 2025 we and Stoke announced the first patient dosed in the Phase 3 EMPEROR study of zorevunersen, a potential disease-modifying treatment for Dravet syndrome.
- In July 2025 we and Stoke announced the presentation of data from an analysis that informed the design of the Phase 3 EMPEROR study and evaluated the potential effects of the Phase 3 zorevunersen dosing regimen. The data are complementary to previously reported data from a broader cohort of patients treated with zorevunersen in the Phase 1/2a and OLE studies that showed improvements within the first 9 months and continuing improvements through an additional two years.

SPINRAZA (nusinersen)

- In June 2025 we announced new data that reinforce the clinical impact of nusinersen across a broad spectrum of individuals affected by SMA. These latest findings from Part C of the DEVOTE trial evaluating a higher dose regimen of nusinersen and the NURTURE trial which evaluated the approved 12 mg regimen of SPINRAZA in clinically presymptomatic SMA was presented at the SMA Research & Clinical Care Meeting hosted by Cure SMA. The study showed improvements observed with higher dose regimen of nusinersen in previously treated patient population.

SALANERSEN (BIIB115)

- In June 2025 we announced positive interim topline results from the Phase 1b study of salanersen, an ASO being developed for the treatment of SMA. Interim Phase 1b data shows children with SMA previously treated with gene therapy experienced a substantial slowing of neurodegeneration and clinically meaningful improvements in motor function following initiation of salanersen. Our Phase 3 registrational study of salanersen is expected to begin in 2026.

SKYCLARYS (OMAVELOXOLONE)

- In June 2025 we announced the initiation of dosing in the global Phase 3 BRAVE study of omaveloxolone in children with FA between the ages of two to sixteen. The BRAVE study will evaluate the efficacy, safety, pharmacokinetics and pharmacodynamics of omaveloxolone in approximately 255 children living with FA.

QALSODY

- In December 2025 the Journal of the American Medical Association Neurology published final results from the completed Phase 3 VALOR study and its OLE study evaluating QALSODY for the treatment of SOD1 ALS with over 3.5 years of follow-up. These results show that early initiation of QALSODY was associated with numerically slower decline in measures of clinical function, breathing and strength, as well as reduction in the risk of death or permanent ventilation. Sustained reductions in neurofilament, a marker of neurodegeneration, further validate the clinical results and demonstrate QALSODY's impact on the underlying biology of SOD1 ALS.

NEUROLOGY

MULTIPLE SCLEROSIS

We develop, manufacture and market a number of products designed to treat patients with MS. MS is a progressive disease in which the body loses the ability to transmit messages along nerve cells, leading to a loss of muscle control, paralysis and, in some cases, death. Patients with active RMS experience an uneven pattern of disease progression characterized by periods of stability that are interrupted by flare-ups of the disease after which the patient may return to a lower baseline of functioning.

ALZHEIMER'S DISEASE

Alzheimer's disease includes LEQEMBI for the treatment of early Alzheimer's disease. Alzheimer's disease, the most common form of dementia, is a progressive neurological illness that causes a gradual decline in cognitive abilities, usually during a span of seven to ten years. Nearly all brain functions, including memory, movement, language, judgement, behavior and abstract thinking, are eventually affected. In the U.S., Alzheimer's disease is the seventh-leading cause of death, accounting for over 120,000 deaths each year.

Alzheimer's disease is characterized by two abnormalities in the brain: amyloid plaques and neurofibrillary tangles. Amyloid plaques, which are found in the tissue between the nerve cells, are unusual clumps of a protein called beta amyloid along with degenerating bits of neurons and other cells. Neurofibrillary tangles are bundles of twisted filaments found within neurons. These tangles are largely made up of a protein called tau.

Our Alzheimer's disease products and major markets are as follows:

LEQEMBI™ (lecanemab-irmb)	Alzheimer's disease	Eisai	U.S. China Japan South Korea

For additional information on our collaboration arrangements with Eisai, please read Note 19, Collaborative and Other Relationships, to our consolidated financial statements included in this report.

NEUROPSYCHIATRY

Neuropsychiatry includes ZURZUVAE for PPD. RARE DISEASE

Rare disease includes SPINRAZA for SMA, QALSODY for ALS, which became commercially available in the E.U. during the second quarter of 2024, and SKYCLARYS for FA, which became commercially available in the E.U. during the first quarter of 2024.

SMA is characterized by loss of motor neurons in the spinal cord and lower brain stem, resulting in severe and progressive muscular atrophy and weakness. Ultimately, individuals with the most severe type of SMA can become paralyzed and have difficulty performing the basic functions of life, like breathing and swallowing. Due to a deletion or mutations in the SMN1 gene, people with SMA do not produce enough SMN protein, which is critical to the survival of the neurons that control muscles. The severity of SMA correlates with the amount of SMN protein. People with Type 1 SMA, the most severe life-threatening form, produce very little SMN protein and do not achieve the ability to sit without support, and typically do not live beyond two years of age without respiratory support and nutritional interventions. People with Type 2 and Type 3 SMA produce greater amounts of SMN protein and have less severe, but still life-altering, forms of SMA.

FA is an inherited, debilitating and degenerative neuromuscular disorder that is typically diagnosed during adolescence and can ultimately lead to premature death. Patients with FA experience progressive loss of coordination, muscle weakness and fatigue, which commonly progresses to motor incapacitation, wheelchair reliance and eventually death.

ALS is a rare, progressive and fatal neurodegenerative disease that results in the loss of motor neurons in the brain and the spinal cord that are responsible for controlling voluntary muscle movement. People with ALS experience muscle weakness and atrophy, causing them to lose independence as they steadily lose the ability to move, speak, eat and eventually breathe. Average life expectancy for people with ALS is three to five years from time of symptom onset. Multiple genes have been implicated in ALS. Genetic testing helps determine if a person's ALS is associated with a genetic mutation, even in individuals without a known family history of the disease. SOD1-ALS is a mutation in the SOD1 gene, and this form of ALS is diagnosed in approximately two percent of all ALS cases.

Our Rare disease products and major markets are as follows:

Product	Indication	Collaborator	Major Markets
SPINRAZA (nusinersen)	SMA	Ionis	U.S. Brazil France Germany Italy Poland
SKYCLARYS (omaveloxolone) 50 mg	FA in adults and adolescents aged 16 years and older	None	U.S. France Germany Greece Italy Turkey

PATIENT SUPPORT AND ACCESS

We interact with patients, advocacy organizations and healthcare societies in order to gain insights into unmet needs. The insights gained from these engagements help us support patients with services, programs and applications that are designed to help transform patients' lives. Among other things, we provide customer service and other related programs for our products, such as disease and product specific websites, insurance research services, financial assistance programs and the facilitation of the procurement of our marketed products.

We are dedicated to helping patients obtain access to our therapies. Our patient support representatives have access to a comprehensive suite of financial assistance tools. With those tools, we help patients understand their insurance coverage and, if needed, help patients compare insurance options and programs. In the U.S., we have established programs that provide co-pay assistance for qualified commercially insured patients and free product for qualified uninsured or underinsured patients, based on specific eligibility criteria.

We believe all healthcare stakeholders have a shared responsibility to ensure patients have equitable access to new, innovative medicines. We regularly review our pricing strategy and prioritize patient access to our therapies. We have a value-based contracting program designed to align the price of our therapies to the value our therapies deliver to patients. We also work with regulators, clinical researchers, ethicists, physicians and patient advocacy groups and communities, among others, to determine how best to address requests for access to our investigational therapies in ways that are consistent with our patient-focused values and compliant with regulatory standards and protocols. In appropriate situations, patients may have access to investigational therapies through clinical trials, early access programs, post-trial access programs or compassionate use based on humanitarian grounds.

MARKETING AND DISTRIBUTION

SALES FORCE AND MARKETING

We promote our marketed products worldwide, including in the U.S., Europe, Asia, the Middle East and Latin America, primarily through our own sales forces and marketing groups. In some countries, particularly in areas where we continue to expand into new geographic areas, we partner with third parties.

RITUXAN, RITUXAN HYCELA, GAZYVA, OCREVUS, LUNSUMIO and COLUMVI are marketed by the Roche Group and its sublicensees.

We commercialize BENEPALI, IMRALDI and FLIXABI pursuant to our agreement with Samsung Bioepis in certain international markets.

We focus our sales and marketing efforts on health care providers in private practice or at major medical centers. We use customary industry practices to market our products and to educate physicians. This includes our sales representatives calling on individual health care providers (in-person and virtually), advertisements, professional symposia, direct mail, digital marketing, point of care marketing, public relations and other methods.

DISTRIBUTION ARRANGEMENTS

We distribute our products in the U.S. principally through wholesale and specialty distributors of pharmaceutical products and specialty pharmacies. In other countries, the distribution of our products varies from country to country, including through wholesale distributors of pharmaceutical products and third-party distribution partners who are responsible for most marketing and distribution activities.

RITUXAN, RITUXAN HYCELA, GAZYVA, OCREVUS, LUNSUMIO and COLUMVI are distributed by the Roche Group and its sublicensees.

We distribute BENEPALI, IMRALDI and FLIXABI in certain countries in Europe and have an option to acquire exclusive rights to distribute these products in China.

Our product sales to two wholesale distributors each accounted for more than 10.0% of our total revenue for the years ended December 31, 2025, 2024 and 2023, and on a combined basis, accounted for approximately 43.9%, 39.3% and 36.9%, respectively, of our gross product revenue. For additional information, please read Note 5, Revenue, to our consolidated financial statements included in this report.

PATENTS AND OTHER PROPRIETARY RIGHTS

Patents are important for obtaining and protecting exclusive rights in our products and product candidates. We regularly seek patent protection in the U.S., the E.U., Asia, the Middle East and Latin America for inventions originating from our research and development efforts and those we license or acquire. In addition, we license rights to various patents and patent applications.

U.S. patents, as well as most foreign patents, are generally effective for 20 years from the date the earliest application was filed; however, U.S. patents on applications filed before June 8, 1995, may be effective until 17 years from the issue date, if that is later than the 20-year date. In some cases, the patent term may be extended to recapture a portion of the term lost during regulatory review of the claimed therapeutic or, in the case of the U.S., additional patent term may be awarded due to U.S. Patent and Trademark Office delays in prosecuting the application. In the U.S., under the Drug Price Competition and Patent Term Restoration Act of 1984, commonly known as the Hatch-Waxman Act, a patent that covers a drug approved by the FDA may be eligible for patent term extension (for up to 5 years, but not beyond a total of 14 years from the date of product approval) as compensation for patent term lost during the FDA regulatory review process. The duration and extension of the term of foreign patents vary, in accordance with local law. For example, in a number of European countries, SPCs can be granted to a product to compensate in part for delays in obtaining marketing approval.

Regulatory exclusivity, which may consist of regulatory data protection and market protection, can also provide meaningful protection for our products. Regulatory data protection provides to the holder of a drug or biologic marketing authorization, for a set period of time, the exclusive use of the proprietary preclinical and clinical data that it created at significant cost and submitted to the applicable regulatory authority to obtain approval of its product. After the period of exclusive use, third parties are permitted to reference such data in abbreviated applications for approval and to market (subject to any applicable market protection) their generic drugs and biosimilars. Market protection provides the holder of a drug or biologic marketing authorization the exclusive right to commercialize its product for a period of time, thereby preventing the commercialization of another product containing the same active ingredient(s) during that period. Although the World Trade Organization's agreement on trade-related aspects of intellectual property rights requires signatory countries to provide regulatory exclusivity to innovative pharmaceutical products, implementation and enforcement varies widely from country to country.

We also rely upon other forms of unpatented confidential information to remain competitive. We protect such information principally through refraining from public disclosure and utilizing confidentiality agreements with our employees, consultants, outside scientific collaborators, scientists whose research we sponsor and other advisers. In the case of our employees, these agreements also provide, in compliance with relevant law, that inventions and other intellectual property conceived by such employees during their employment are our exclusive property.

Our trademarks are important to us and are generally covered by trademark applications or registrations in the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office and the patent or trademark offices of other countries. We also use trademarks licensed from third parties. Trademark protection varies in accordance with local law, and continues in some countries as long as the trademark is used and in other countries as long as the trademark is registered. Trademark registrations generally are for fixed but renewable terms.

OUR PATENT PORTFOLIO

The following table describes certain patents in the U.S. and Europe that we currently consider of primary importance to our marketed products, including the territory, patent number, general subject matter and expected expiration dates. Except as otherwise noted, the expected expiration dates include any granted patent term extensions and issued SPCs. In some instances, there may be additional later-expiring patents relating to our products directed to, among other things, particular forms or compositions, methods of manufacturing or use of the drug in the treatment of particular diseases or conditions. We also continue to pursue additional patents and patent term extensions in the U.S. and other territories covering various aspects of our products that may, if issued, extend exclusivity beyond the expiration of the patents listed in the table.

DUBLIN, Ohio, April 30, 2026 – Cardinal Health (NYSE: CAH) today reported third quarter fiscal year 2026 revenues of $60.9 billion, an increase of 11% from the third quarter of fiscal year 2025.

Third quarter GAAP operating earnings decreased 30% to $509 million and GAAP diluted earnings per share (EPS) decreased 20% to $1.69, reflecting a $184 million pre-tax goodwill impairment in the company's Navista & ION reporting unit primarily due to changes in the risk profile of the business plans resulting in an increase in the discount rate. These changes reflect business model updates and base operational performance.

Third quarter non-GAAP operating earnings increased 18% to $956 million. Non-GAAP diluted EPS increased 35% to $3.17, reflecting the increase in non-GAAP operating earnings, a lower non-GAAP effective tax rate and a lower share count, partially offset by an increase in interest and other expense.

"An excellent third quarter extends our FY26 momentum, due to the durability and resilience of our business," said Jason Hollar, CEO of Cardinal Health. "We were pleased to see strong operating performance led by Pharmaceutical and Specialty Solutions and our three growth businesses, positioning us for long-term value creation and giving us the confidence to again raise our fiscal 2026 outlook."

Use of Non-GAAP Measures

This earnings release contains financial measures that are not calculated in accordance with U.S. generally accepted accounting principles ("GAAP").

In addition to analyzing our business based on financial information prepared in accordance with GAAP, we use these non-GAAP financial measures internally to evaluate our performance, engage in financial and operational planning, and determine incentive compensation because we believe that these measures provide additional perspective on and, in some circumstances are more closely correlated to, the performance of our underlying, ongoing business. We provide these non-GAAP financial measures to investors as supplemental metrics to assist readers in assessing the effects of items and events on our financial and operating results on a year-over-year basis and in comparing our performance to that of our competitors. However, the non-GAAP financial measures that we use may be calculated differently from, and therefore may not be comparable to, similarly titled measures used by other companies. The non-GAAP financial measures disclosed by us should not be considered a substitute for, or superior to, financial measures calculated in accordance with GAAP, and the financial results calculated in accordance with GAAP and reconciliations to those financial statements set forth below should be carefully evaluated.

Exclusions from Non-GAAP Financial Measures

Management believes it is useful to exclude the following items from the non-GAAP measures presented in this report for its own and for investors' assessment of the business for the reasons identified below:

- LIFO charges and credits are excluded because the factors that drive last-in first-out ("LIFO") inventory charges or credits, such as pharmaceutical manufacturer price appreciation or deflation and year-end inventory levels (which can be meaningfully influenced by customer buying behavior immediately preceding our fiscal year-end), are largely out of our control and cannot be accurately predicted. The exclusion of LIFO charges and credits from non-GAAP metrics facilitates comparison of our current financial results to our historical financial results and to our peer group companies' financial results. We did not recognize any LIFO charges or credits during the periods presented.
- State opioid assessments related to prior fiscal years is the portion of state assessments for prescription opioid medications that were sold or distributed in periods prior to the period in which the expense is incurred. This portion is excluded from non-GAAP financial measures because it is retrospectively applied to sales in prior fiscal years and inclusion would obscure analysis of the current fiscal year results of our underlying, ongoing business. Additionally, while states' laws may require us to make payments on an ongoing basis, the portion of the assessment related to sales in prior periods are contemplated to be one-time, nonrecurring items. Income from state opioid assessments related to prior fiscal years represents reversals of accruals due to changes in estimates or when the underlying assessments were invalidated by a Court or reimbursed by manufacturers.
- Restructuring and employee severance costs are excluded because they are not part of the ongoing operations of our underlying business and include, but are not limited to, costs related to divestitures, closing and consolidating facilities, changing the way we manufacture or distribute our products, moving manufacturing of a product to another location, changes in production or business process outsourcing or insourcing, employee severance, and realigning operations.
- Amortization and other acquisition-related costs, which include transaction costs, integration costs, and changes in the fair value of contingent consideration obligations, are excluded because they are not part of the ongoing operations of our underlying business and to facilitate comparison of our current financial results to our historical financial results and to our peer group companies' financial results. Additionally, costs for amortization of acquisition-related intangible assets and amortization as a result of basis differences in equity method investments are non-cash amounts, which are variable in amount and frequency and are significantly impacted by the timing and size of acquisitions, so their exclusion facilitates comparison of historical, current, and forecasted financial results. We also exclude other acquisition-related costs, which are directly related to an acquisition but do not meet the criteria to be recognized on the acquired entity's initial balance sheet as part of the purchase price allocation. These costs are also significantly impacted by the timing, complexity, and size of acquisitions.
- Acquisition-related cash and share-based compensation costs are incurred in connection with contingent cash payments or the issuance of share-based payment awards, which include service requirements, as a part of certain physician practice acquisitions. These costs include fair value adjustments for liability-classified awards. These costs are excluded because they are unrelated to the underlying operating results of our business and to facilitate comparison of our current financial results to our historical financial results and to our peer group companies' financial results. In addition, the magnitude of these expenses is significantly impacted by the timing and size of the acquisitions of physician practices.
- Impairments and gain or loss on disposal of assets, net are excluded because they do not occur in or reflect the ordinary course of our ongoing business operations and are inherently unpredictable in timing and amount, and in the case of impairments, are non-cash amounts, so their exclusion facilitates comparison of historical, current, and forecasted financial results.
- Litigation recoveries or charges, net are excluded because they often relate to events that may have occurred in prior or multiple periods, do not occur in or reflect the ordinary course of our business and are inherently unpredictable in timing and amount.

The tax effect for each of the items listed above is determined using the tax rate and other tax attributes applicable to the item and the jurisdiction(s) in which the item is recorded. The gross, tax and net impact of each item are presented with our GAAP to non-GAAP reconciliations.

Non-GAAP adjusted free cash flow: We provide this non-GAAP financial measure as a supplemental metric to assist readers in assessing the effects of items and events on our cash flow on a year-over-year basis and in comparing our performance to that of our peer group companies. In calculating this non-GAAP metric, certain items are excluded from net cash provided by operating activities because they relate to significant and unusual or non-recurring events and are inherently unpredictable in timing and amount. We believe adjusted free cash flow is important to management and useful to investors as a supplemental measure as it indicates the cash flow available for working capital needs, debt repayments, dividend payments, share repurchases, strategic acquisitions, or other strategic uses of cash. A reconciliation of our GAAP financial results to Non-GAAP adjusted free cash flow is provided in Schedule 6 of the financial statement tables included with this release.

Forward Looking Non-GAAP Measures

In this document, the Company presents certain forward-looking non-GAAP metrics. The Company does not provide outlook on a GAAP basis because the items that the Company excludes from GAAP to calculate the comparable non-GAAP measure can be dependent on future events that are less capable of being controlled or reliably predicted by management and are not part of the Company's routine operating activities. Additionally, management does not forecast many of the excluded items for internal use and therefore cannot create or rely on outlook done on a GAAP basis.

The occurrence, timing and amount of any of the items excluded from GAAP to calculate non-GAAP could significantly impact the Company's fiscal 2026 GAAP results. Over the past five fiscal years, the excluded items have impacted the Company's EPS from $1.79 to $8.44, which includes a $6.97 charge related to the goodwill impairment charge for the GMPD segment in fiscal 2022.

RISK FACTORS SUMMARY

Our business, results of operations, financial condition, and growth prospects may be affected by a number of factors, whether currently known or unknown. Any one or more of such factors could directly or indirectly cause our actual results of operations and financial condition to vary materially from past or anticipated future results of operations and financial condition. Any of these factors, in whole or in part, let alone combined with any of the others, could materially and adversely affect our business, financial condition, results of operations, and stock price. We have provided a summary of some of these risks below, with a more detailed explanation of those and other risks applicable to the Company in Part I, Item 1A. "Risk Factors" in this Annual Report.

Summary of Risks Related to Our Business

The principal risks and uncertainties affecting our business include the following:

- We have a limited operating history and none of lorundrostat or any future product candidates have been approved for commercial sale. We have a history of significant net losses since our inception and expect to continue to incur significant losses for the foreseeable future. We may never generate any revenue or become profitable or, if we achieve profitability, we may not be able to sustain it.
- We will need substantial additional funds to pursue our business objectives, which may not be available on acceptable terms, or at all. Failure to obtain this necessary capital when needed on acceptable terms, or at all, may force us to delay, limit, reduce, or terminate our product development programs, commercialization efforts, or other operations.
- Our future performance at this time is entirely dependent on the success of our only product candidate, lorundrostat, which is currently in clinical development and has not completed a pivotal trial. If we are unable to advance lorundrostat in clinical development, obtain regulatory approval, and ultimately commercialize lorundrostat, or experience significant delays in doing so, our business will be materially harmed.
- Clinical and preclinical development involves a lengthy and expensive process with uncertain timelines and outcomes, and results of prior clinical trials and studies of lorundrostat are not necessarily predictive of future results. Lorundrostat may not achieve favorable results in our clinical trials or receive regulatory approval on a timely basis, if at all.
- Use of lorundrostat or any future product candidates could be associated with adverse side effects, adverse events, or other properties or safety risks, which could delay or preclude regulatory approval, cause us to suspend or discontinue clinical trials, abandon a product candidate, limit the commercial profile of an approved label, or result in other significant negative consequences that could severely harm our business, prospects, operating results, and financial condition.
- We heavily rely on our exclusive license agreement entered into in July 2020 (Mitsubishi License) with Mitsubishi Tanabe Pharma Corporation (Mitsubishi Tanabe) to provide us with intellectual property rights to develop and commercialize lorundrostat. If the Mitsubishi License is terminated, we would lose our rights to develop and commercialize lorundrostat, which in turn would have a material adverse effect on our business, financial condition, results of operations, and prospects, including, but not limited to, cessation of our operations to the extent we are unable to develop other product candidates at the time of such termination.
- We face significant competition, and if our competitors develop and commercialize technologies or product candidates more rapidly than we do, or their technologies or product candidates are more effective, safer, or less expensive than lorundrostat and any future product candidates we develop, our business and our ability to develop and successfully commercialize products will be adversely affected.

- We rely on and intend to continue to rely on third parties to conduct, supervise, and monitor our clinical trials and preclinical studies. If these third parties do not successfully carry out their contractual duties, comply with applicable regulatory requirements, or meet expected deadlines, our development programs and our ability to seek or obtain regulatory approval for or commercialize lorundrostat and any future product candidates may be delayed or subject to increased costs, each of which may have an adverse effect on our business and prospects.
- If we are unable to obtain, maintain, and enforce patent or other intellectual property protection for lorundrostat or any future product candidates or technology, or if the scope of the patent or other intellectual property protection obtained is not sufficiently broad, our competitors or other third parties could develop and commercialize products similar or identical to ours, and our ability to successfully commercialize lorundrostat or any future product candidates may be adversely affected.
- The trading price of the shares of our common stock could be highly volatile, and purchasers of our common stock could incur substantial losses.

FORWARD-LOOKING STATEMENTS AND MARKET DATA

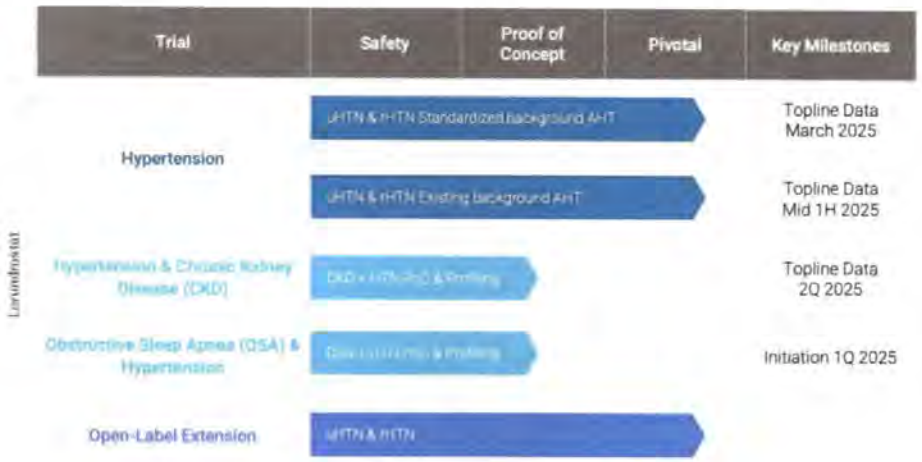
Part I

Item 1. Business

Business Overview



We are a clinical-stage biopharmaceutical company focused on developing medicines to target diseases driven by dysregulated aldosterone. Our clinical-stage product candidate, lorundrostat, is a proprietary, orally administered, highly selective aldosterone synthase inhibitor (ASI) that we are developing for the treatment of cardiorenal conditions affected by dysregulated aldosterone, including hypertension, chronic kidney disease (CKD), and obstructive sleep apnea (OSA). In the United States, approximately 120 million patients have sustained elevated blood pressure (BP), or hypertension, and more than half of this population fails to achieve their BP goals, defined as BP below 130/80 mmHg, with currently available medications. There are over 30 million treated patients who do not achieve their BP goal, of whom approximately 20 million have systolic BP levels greater than 140 mmHg. Patients with hypertension that persists despite taking two or more medications have 1.8 and 2.5 times greater mortality risk due to either cardiovascular disease or stroke, respectively. In a Phase 2 proof-of-concept clinical trial evaluating 200 subjects (Target-HTN) with uncontrolled hypertension (uHTN), defined as individuals who are unable to achieve BP of below 130/80 mmHg despite taking two to five lines of antihypertensive medication, or resistant hypertension (rHTN), defined as individuals who are unable to achieve BP of below 130/80 mmHg despite taking three or more antihypertensive medications typically including a diuretic, lorundrostat demonstrated a clinically meaningful and statistically significant reduction in BP with once-daily (QD) dosing and was well tolerated. Dysregulated aldosterone levels are a key factor in driving hypertension in approximately 30% of hypertensive patients. In addition to hypertension, we are investigating the benefits of lorundrostat in subjects with hypertension and CKD and in subjects with hypertension and OSA. We believe that our product candidate holds promise to be an innovative solution for the rapidly growing unmet need in multiple cardiorenal metabolic disorders.

Hypertension is one of the most common medical conditions globally, afflicting approximately 1.3 billion people. In the United States, hypertension was associated with $219 billion in health care expenditures. Despite the availability of multiple treatment options, including thiazide diuretics, angiotensin-converting enzyme (ACE)-inhibitors, angiotensin II receptor blockers (ARBs), calcium channel blockers, beta blockers, and mineralocorticoid receptor antagonists (MRAs), the prevalence of uHTN continues to grow, further exacerbated by the rapidly rising rate of obesity. Over 30 million hypertensive patients in the United States are unable to achieve their BP goal despite treatment. Within this population, there are approximately 10.3 million patients suffering from rHTN. Multiple large-scale studies have demonstrated that patients who fail to achieve their BP goal have a significantly elevated risk of developing heart disease, stroke, and kidney disease (Wright JT Jr, et al. A randomized trial of intensive versus standard blood-pressure control. N Engl J Med. 2015;373(22):2103-2116; and Zhou, et al., Uncontrolled Hypertension Increases Risk of All-Cause and Cardiovascular Disease Mortality in US Adults: the NHANES III Linked Mortality Study. Scientific Reports, 2018;8(1):1-7). Patients with rHTN have a 1.5 and 2.3 times higher risk than normotensive patients for composite cardiovascular events and end-stage renal disease, respectively. Notwithstanding this significant and growing unmet need, there has been a lack of U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA)-approved novel therapies targeting hypertension, with no new class of antihypertensive treatment approved within the last fifteen years.

Our Product Candidate, Lorundrostat

Our product candidate, lorundrostat, is a proprietary, orally administered, highly selective ASI that is designed to reduce aldosterone levels by inhibiting CYP11B2, the enzyme responsible for producing the hormone. We licensed lorundrostat from Mitsubishi Tanabe Pharmaceutical Company (Mitsubishi Tanabe), who discovered the compound and provided the early foundational work, including demonstrating the selectivity of lorundrostat, and progressing the asset through Phase 1 clinical development. We completed the Target-HTN trial, a Phase 2 proof-of-concept trial for lorundrostat in the treatment of uHTN and rHTN in 2022.

Given that hypertension and abnormal aldosterone biology can lead to cardiorenal disease, we are further investigating the benefits of lorundrostat in hypertensive subjects with comorbidities such as CKD or OSA.

Summary of Historical and Current Clinical Trials of Lorundrostat

Phase 1: The first-in-human Phase 1 clinical trial of lorundrostat was conducted by Mitsubishi Tanabe. See "Phase 1 Clinical Trial Results" beginning on page 15 for additional details regarding this trial.

Phase 2: We conducted the Target-HTN Phase 2 trial of 200 subjects with uHTN and rHTN to evaluate the efficacy of lorundrostat at various doses either once or twice a day. The results of Target-HTN led to the advancement of our pivotal program of lorundrostat outlined below. See "Target-HTN Phase 2 Clinical Trial" beginning on page 8 for additional details regarding this trial.

Pivotal Program: In 2023 we initiated our pivotal program of lorundrostat. See "Lorundrostat as a Potential Treatment for Hypertension" beginning on page 6 for additional details regarding these clinical trials.

- Advance-HTN is our Phase 2 clinical trial to evaluate the efficacy and safety of lorundrostat for the treatment of uHTN or rHTN, when used as an add-on therapy to a standardized background treatment of two or three antihypertensive medications. Randomization of 285 subjects was completed in the fourth quarter of 2024, and topline data from this trial is anticipated in March 2025.
- Launch-HTN is our Phase 3 clinical trial to evaluate the efficacy and safety of lorundrostat for the treatment of uHTN or rHTN, when used as an add-on therapy to their existing, prescribed background treatment of two to five antihypertensive medications. Randomization of 1,083 subjects was completed in the fourth quarter of 2024, and topline data from this trial is anticipated in mid first half of 2025.
- Explore-CKD is our crossover trial designed to evaluate the safety and efficacy of 25 mg QD lorundrostat in addition to an SGLT2 inhibitor for the treatment of hypertension in subjects with Stage 2 to 3b CKD and albuminuria despite receiving stable treatment with an ACE inhibitor or ARB. Randomization of 60 subjects was completed in the first quarter of 2025, and topline data from this trial is anticipated in the second quarter of 2025.

- Transform-HTN is an open-label extension trial allowing subjects to continue to receive lorundrostat and to obtain long-term efficacy and safety data. This trial is ongoing.

Other indications: We anticipate initiating our Phase 2 clinical trial (Explore-OSA) in the first quarter of 2025, which is planned to evaluate the safety and efficacy of lorundrostat 50 mg QD in approximately 40 subjects with moderate-to-severe OSA. See "Lorundrostat as a Potential Treatment for Hypertension" beginning on page 6 for additional details regarding this clinical trial.

Background of Hypertension

In healthy individuals, normal BP, also known as peripheral blood pressure, is below 130 over 80, meaning the pressure measurement is lower than 130 mmHg when the heart is contracting (systolic BP) and at or below 80 mmHg when the heart is relaxed (diastolic BP). Sustained, elevated BP, or hypertension, can result in increased chances of life-threatening complications such as heart disease, stroke, or kidney disease, among others.

The prevalence of hypertension has been increasing in recent decades. A comprehensive study published in The Lancet journal shows that in patients aged 30 to 79, total hypertension cases nearly doubled worldwide from 1990 to 2019. Furthermore, obesity, especially when associated with increased visceral adiposity, is a major cause of hypertension, accounting for 65% to 75% of the risk for developing human primary (essential) hypertension. Despite hypertension being one of the most common preventable risk factors for premature death, approximately 1.3 billion people worldwide have hypertension, with hypertension as a primary or contributing cause of 685,875 deaths in the United States in 2022 alone. The costs of hypertension and related health issues are a major burden on already strained healthcare systems, with an estimated cost of $219 billion in the United States in 2019. While there are multiple therapeutic options available, most of which are generic and accessible, more than half of all treated hypertensive patients fail to achieve their BP goal. Dysregulated aldosterone levels are a key factor in driving hypertension in approximately 30% of hypertensive patients.

The current standard-of-care for patients newly diagnosed with hypertension is based on a set of guidelines set forth by the American College of Cardiology and the American Heart Association. A hypertensive patient's target BP is defined as below 130/80 mmHg. Depending on baseline BP levels, these guidelines recommend the patient typically begin with lifestyle modifications and then, assuming BP does not achieve the desired target, initiate treatment with antihypertensive agents selected primarily from the following five drug classes, which may later be combined with each other if the patient's target BP is not successfully achieved with the initial therapy:

- Thiazide diuretics, which increase fluid excretion from the kidney by blocking reabsorption of sodium and chloride in the nephron;
- ACE inhibitors, which inhibit the renin-angiotensin aldosterone system (RAAS) axis by blocking the action of ACE in the lungs, which converts angiotensin I to angiotensin II;
- ARBs, which block the effects of angiotensin II at the level of the angiotensin receptor;
- Calcium channel blockers, which slow cardiac contractions and relax arteries by preventing calcium from entering the cells of the heart and arteries; and
- Beta blockers, which cause the heart to beat more slowly and with less force, which lowers BP.

Despite numerous available treatment options, the majority of hypertensive patients require multiple therapies to achieve their target BP. Evidence demonstrates that adding a second- or third-line antihypertensive agent typically provides an additional 6 to 7 mmHg reduction in systolic BP. However, the incremental reduction in systolic BP provided by successive lines of treatment does not always adequately enable patients to reach their BP goal. Therefore, many patients require three, four, or more antihypertensive agents in an attempt to achieve their target BP. In addition, while hypertension is an asymptomatic disease, many of the currently available treatments have side effects and tolerability issues, which may limit their use. For example, patients taking ACE inhibitors often develop a chronic cough and those taking beta blockers often experience lethargy.

In a meta-analysis of 147 randomized trials, a 10 mmHg reduction in systolic BP or a 5 mmHg reduction in diastolic BP has been shown to reduce the risk of stroke by 41% and coronary heart disease by 22%. The Systolic BP Intervention Trial (SPRINT) study further demonstrated that in adults with hypertension but without diabetes, lowering systolic BP below 120 mmHg reduced cardiovascular events by 25% and reduced the overall risk of death by 27% compared to those with a systolic BP of 140 mmHg or higher. The importance of nighttime BP as a predictor of cardiovascular risk is increasingly recognized. Evidence has demonstrated that higher nighttime systolic BP has a strong association with increased cardiovascular risk. The study's findings stress the importance of targeting a reduction in nighttime systolic BP when considering treatment approaches.

Over 30 million hypertensive patients in the United States are unable to achieve their BP goal despite treatment, and within this population, 10.3 million suffer from rHTN. Treatment options are limited for rHTN patients, and the current standard-of-care is to introduce an MRA agent, which blocks the effect of aldosterone, to their existing antihypertensive regimen.

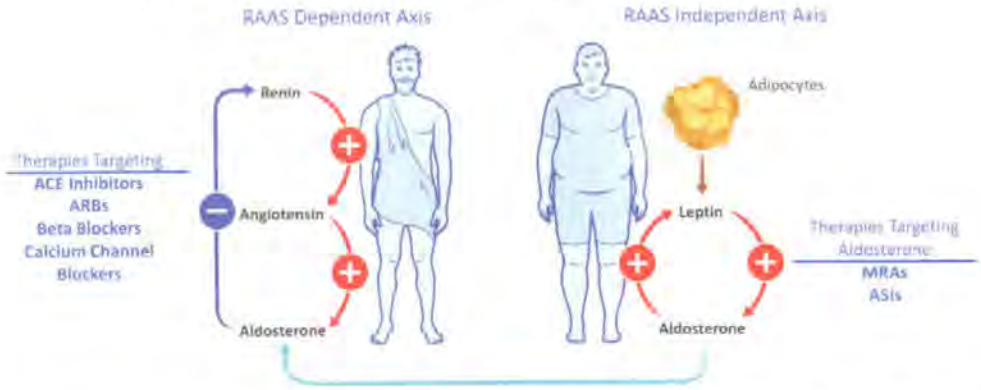
Background of Chronic Kidney Disease (CKD)

CKD, which is characterized by the gradual loss of kidney function, is estimated to affect more than 10% of the global population and is one of the leading causes of mortality worldwide. According to the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, an estimated 1-in-7 (15%) of U.S. adults have CKD. Diabetes and hypertension are responsible for approximately two-thirds of CKD cases. Early detection and treatment can often keep CKD from getting worse. When CKD progresses, it may eventually lead to kidney failure, which requires dialysis or a kidney transplant to maintain life.

Background of Obstructive Sleep Apnea (OSA)

OSA is characterized by repetitive overnight hypoxic episodes and subsequent sleep fragmentation due to a complete or partial collapse of the upper airway. Moderate OSA is defined as having between 15 and 30 breathing pauses (apnea or hypopnea events) per hour of sleep, while severe OSA indicates more than 30 breathing pauses per hour. OSA impacts over 54 million people in the United States, including 24 million moderate-to-severe cases. Around 80% of adults with OSA are undiagnosed. As of 2015, undiagnosed OSA is estimated to cost the United States approximately $149.6 billion annually from comorbid disease, workplace accidents, motor vehicle accidents, and loss of workplace productivity.

Between 30-50% of adults with hypertension have OSA, and this number increases to between 70-80% in adults with resistant hypertension. Additionally, untreated moderate-to-severe OSA increases the risk of resistant hypertension. Along with hypertension, OSA is a major risk factor for cardiovascular disease, type-2 diabetes mellitus, and stroke.

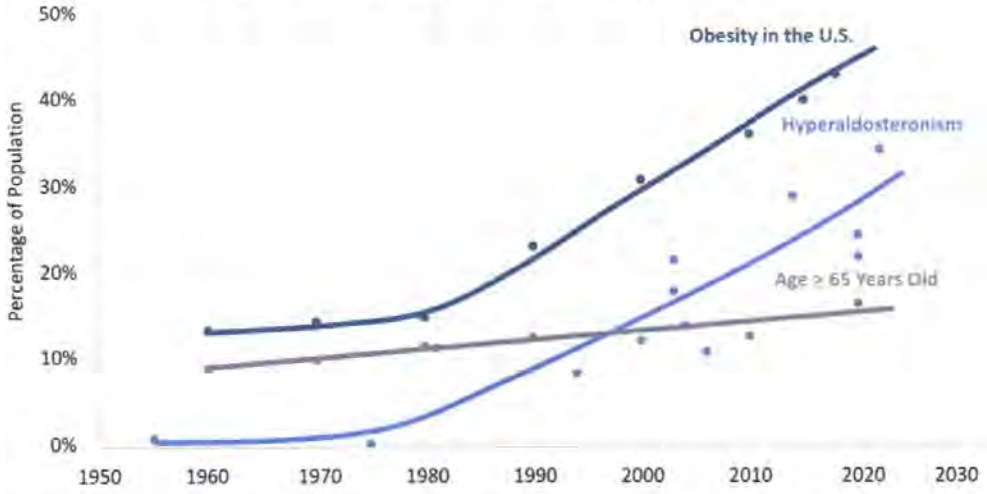


Background of Aldosterone and its Role in Hypertension

Aldosterone is a mineralocorticoid steroid hormone primarily made in the outer layer of the adrenal gland called the adrenal cortex, which plays an important role in controlling the balance of water and salts by keeping sodium in and releasing potassium from the body. This maintenance of homeostasis ensures the body can maintain normal BP.

In a healthy person, homeostatic balance is maintained via a feedback loop called the RAAS. Renin is a key enzyme that is released by the kidneys when they sense changes in BP to control the production of aldosterone, in order to help the kidneys regulate water and salt levels in the body. In a normal physiological state, aldosterone production increases when BP is too low and decreases when BP is too high. This is considered renin-dependent hypertension due to the linkage of renin levels to aldosterone production.

In addition to the self-regulated RAAS, there are other pathways that drive aldosterone production. Evolving information about hormone regulation of visceral adipocytes and the adrenal gland supports the hypothesis that adipokines, specifically elevated leptin and reduced adiponectin, can affect aldosterone and renin, respectively. The net result is an increase in aldosterone and prevention of the normal feedback inhibition of renin. This is considered renin-independent aldosterone production and is due to dysregulated systems biology, which is often prevalent in an obese population.



Overview of Renin-Dependent and Renin-Independent Aldosterone Production

Elevated aldosterone also causes insulin resistance, inflammation and fibrosis of the heart, fibrosis and remodeling of blood vessels, and tubulointerstitial fibrosis and glomerular injury in the kidney. Aldosterone excess is believed to lead to a higher risk of stroke, kidney damage, congestive heart failure, and heart attack, compared to high BP alone. Many of these symptoms are often comorbidities in an obese population.

Many of the therapies designed to address hypertension, such as ACE inhibitors, ARBs, beta blockers, calcium channel blockers, and diuretics, were developed and introduced several decades ago when the incidence of obesity was below 20% and abnormal aldosterone production affected less than 10% of the U.S. population. The increasing prevalence of obesity and hypertension, driven by the renin-independent axis, has resulted in higher incidences of uHTN and rHTN. Currently available therapies are generally effective in managing renin-dependent hypertension; however, they fail to adequately address the shifting biology of hypertension today. For example, ACE inhibitors and ARBs indirectly reduce aldosterone levels, but up to 40% of treated patients experience "aldosterone breakthrough," whereby their aldosterone levels return to normal or higher levels and result in elevated BP.

Growing Epidemic of Obesity Correlated to Rise in Hyperaldosteronism

MRAs, which were initially introduced in the 1950s, are designed to work by blocking the effect of aldosterone, whether renin-dependent or renin-independent, from the mineralocorticoid receptor (MR) but do not inhibit aldosterone production. There are two well-known MRAs available in the United States for the treatment of hypertension, spironolactone and eplerenone, which are both available as generic medicines. MRAs are known to be effective in lowering BP; however, they have demonstrated side effects that have limited their use. Specifically, spironolactone, the most commonly prescribed MRA, is known for inducing hyperkalemia as well as gynecomastia in men and fertility issues in women. Additionally, when aldosterone is blocked from binding to the MR, circulating aldosterone levels increase two- to three-fold and may cause other harmful non-MR-related effects in the body.

The approach of blocking the synthesis of aldosterone and reducing plasma aldosterone levels is thought to be a preferable approach versus the use of MRAs that block the action of aldosterone at the MR. The task of creating a safe and effective ASI can be technically challenging because the major enzymes in the synthesis of aldosterone and cortisol share a high degree of amino acid sequence similarity. While challenging to develop, there are currently four ASIs (including lorundrostat) in advanced clinical development in conditions including hypertension, OSA, primary aldosteronism, heart failure, and CKD.

Lorundrostat as a Potential Treatment for Hypertension

Our product candidate, lorundrostat, is a proprietary, orally administered, highly selective ASI designed to reduce aldosterone levels by inhibiting CYP11B2, the enzyme responsible for producing the hormone. We are initially developing lorundrostat for the treatment of hypertension and have completed Target-HTN, our initial Phase 2 proof-of-concept clinical trial. In this trial, lorundrostat was well tolerated and demonstrated compelling clinical results, and once-daily dosing flexibility. The observed 10 to 12 hour pharmacokinetic half-life of lorundrostat has the potential to normalize aldosterone levels to provide a clinically meaningful reduction in BP and to flexibly manage the challenges of elevated serum potassium. We believe that lorundrostat's profile may be compelling based on the following attributes:

- Compelling Clinical Results: Target-HTN demonstrated a statistically significant 9.6 mmHg and 7.8 mmHg reduction in systolic BP in the 50 mg and 100 mg QD cohorts, respectively, which we believe to be clinically meaningful. The reduction in systolic BP was validated and confirmed by 24-hour mean ambulatory blood pressure monitoring (ABPM), which further demonstrated that lorundrostat provides both central and nighttime BP reduction;

- High Selectivity: Phase 1 and Phase 2 clinical data demonstrated high aldosterone selectivity with no cortisol suppression and no incidence of adrenal insufficiency, as anticipated by the 374 to 1 inhibitory effect on the CYP11B2 enzyme compared to the CYP11B1 enzyme, which is responsible for synthesizing cortisol;
- Optimal Half-Life: A majority of our clinical trial subjects maintained a serum potassium in the normal range. There were modest incidences of hyperkalemia requiring dose adjustment or discontinuation. Six subjects experienced transient elevated serum potassium greater than 6.0 mmol/L, none of which were considered a serious adverse effect (SAE) and all rapidly resolved after discontinuation or dose adjustment. One of the events was assessed as erroneous due to sample misprocessing. Lorundrostat's observed 10 to 12 hour half-life may be viewed more favorably by physicians compared to compounds with longer half-lives, which may have greater risk of sustained potassium elevation; and
- Convenient Dosing and Well Tolerated: Target-HTN demonstrated clinically meaningful results on a once-daily dosing regimen. Furthermore, lorundrostat was well-tolerated.

Based on the results of the Phase 1 and Target-HTN clinical trials, we initiated our pivotal program in 2023 for lorundrostat in the following trials:

Advance-HTN is a randomized, double-blind, placebo-controlled Phase 2 clinical trial to evaluate the efficacy and safety of lorundrostat for the treatment of uHTN or rHTN, when used as an add-on therapy to a standardized background treatment of two or three antihypertensive medications. Subjects who met screening criteria discontinued their existing hypertension medications and started on a standard regimen of an ARB and a diuretic, if previously on two medications, or a standard regimen of ARB, diuretic and calcium channel blocker if previously on three to five medications. Subjects who remained hypertensive despite the standardized regimen were then randomized into three cohorts for twelve weeks receiving one of the following treatments: lorundrostat 50 mg QD, lorundrostat 50 mg QD and an option to titrate to 100 mg QD at week four based on defined criteria or placebo. The primary endpoint of Advance-HTN is change in 24-hour ambulatory systolic BP at week twelve from baseline for each active cohort versus placebo. Randomization of 285 subjects was completed in the fourth quarter of 2024, and topline data from this trial is anticipated in March 2025.

Launch-HTN is a global, randomized, double-blind, placebo-controlled Phase 3 clinical trial to evaluate the efficacy and safety of lorundrostat for the treatment of uHTN or rHTN, when used as an add-on therapy to their existing, prescribed background treatment of two to five antihypertensive medications. Subjects were randomized into three cohorts for twelve weeks receiving one of the following treatments: lorundrostat 50 mg QD, lorundrostat 50 mg QD and an option to titrate to 100 mg QD at week six based on defined criteria or placebo. The primary endpoint of the trial is the assessment of automated office measured systolic BP from baseline for active cohorts versus placebo at six weeks, with the results pooled for all subjects on 50 mg QD. Randomization of 1,083 subjects was completed in the fourth quarter of 2024, and topline data from this trial is anticipated in mid first half of 2025.

Explore-CKD is a randomized, double-blind, placebo-controlled, two-period, two-sequence (2x2) crossover trial designed to evaluate the safety and efficacy of 25 mg QD lorundrostat in addition to an SGLT2 inhibitor for the treatment of hypertension in subjects with Stage 2 to 3b CKD and albuminuria despite receiving stable treatment with an ACE inhibitor or ARB. The primary endpoint is placebo-adjusted change from baseline in systolic BP at week four and an exploratory endpoint is placebo-adjusted percent change from baseline in urine albumin-to-creatinine ratio at week four. Randomization of 60 subjects was completed in the first quarter of 2025, and topline data from this trial is anticipated in the second quarter of 2025.

Transform-HTN is an open-label extension trial allowing subjects to continue to receive lorundrostat and to obtain long-term efficacy and safety data. All subjects in the pivotal hypertension program, including the Advance-HTN and Launch-HTN trials, as well as the Explore-CKD trial, will be given the opportunity to participate in the extension trial.

Lorundrostat has been developed to address dysregulated aldosterone, and we believe this mechanism may be applicable to other indications where dysregulated aldosterone biology plays a role. Most recently, we have begun to explore lorundrostat for patients with OSA and hypertension.

In January 2025, we announced that the FDA cleared our investigational new drug application (IND) for Explore-OSA to evaluate the effect of lorundrostat in the treatment of subjects with moderate-to-severe OSA and hypertension. We anticipate initiating Explore-OSA in the first quarter of 2025. Explore-OSA is planned to be a placebo-controlled, crossover trial to evaluate the safety and efficacy of lorundrostat 50 mg QD in the evening in approximately 40 subjects with moderate-to-severe OSA. Subjects will be at least 18 years old, with a BMI $\geq$27 kg/m^2, and the trial will be conducted across approximately 40 sites. The key objective of this trial is to evaluate the hypothesis that lorundrostat both alleviates the severity of upper airway obstruction and reduces nocturnal hypertension. The primary outcome measure is absolute change in the frequency of apnea-hypopnea episodes compared to placebo. The key secondary objective is to quantify BP throughout the night using continuous BP monitoring during performance of a standard sleep study without the use of CPAP. Standard patient reported outcomes specific to OSA will also be assessed.

Target-HTN Phase 2 Clinical Trial

Target-HTN was a two-part Phase 2 randomized, double-blind, placebo-controlled, dose-ranging, multi-center trial designed to evaluate the safety, efficacy, and tolerability of orally administered lorundrostat for the treatment of uHTN and rHTN when used as an add-on therapy to stable background treatment of two or more antihypertensive medications in 200 males and females. The trial was conducted in the United States. The following table illustrates the key clinical results of Target-HTN:

BP Lowering Metrics (Observed Mean)	Associated BP Reduction
	100mg QD Part 1 N=25	50mg QD N=28
Placebo-adjusted Systolic BP*	-10.0 mmHg	-9.1 mmHg
Placebo-adjusted 24-hour Systolic ABPM	-8.1 mmHg	-10.5 mmHg
Placebo-adjusted 24-hour Systolic ABPM Nighttime	-8.0 mmHg	-4.1 mmHg
Placebo-adjusted 24-hour Central Systolic BP	-10.0 mmHg	-10.4 mmHg

*Mixed effects model with repeated measures (MMRM) results for 100mg QD Part1 and 50mg QD were -7.8 mmHg and -9.6 mmHg, respectively. The observed means include only those subjects with observations at visit eight with no imputation for missing values, while MMRM imputes missing values. The values for observed and MMRM means may differ slightly.

Results from post-hoc sensitivity analysis reflecting subjects who passed Quality Control criteria and in whom both baseline AOBP and ABPM > 130mmHg.

The results of the Target-HTN trial demonstrated a clinically meaningful and statistically significant placebo-adjusted reduction in systolic BP, as measured by automated office blood pressure (AOBP), of 9.6 mmHg ($p<0.01$) and 7.8 mmHg ($p<0.04$) in the 50 mg and 100 mg QD cohorts, respectively. A p-value is the probability that the reported result was achieved purely by chance, such that a p-value of less than or equal to 0.05 means that there is a less than or equal to 5% probability that the difference between the control group and the treatment group is purely due to chance. A p-value of 0.05 or less typically represents a statistically significant result. The FDA's evidentiary standard when evaluating the results of a clinical trial generally relies on a p-value of less than or equal to 0.05. In a meta-analysis of 147 randomized trials, a 10 mmHg reduction of systolic BP or a 5 mmHg reduction in diastolic BP has been shown to reduce the risk of stroke by 41% and coronary heart disease by 22%. The reduction in systolic BP in Target-HTN, as measured by AOBP, was validated and confirmed by comparable reductions in systolic BP with lorundrostat, as measured by 24-hour mean ABPM. The ABPM data further demonstrated the benefits of lorundrostat on both central and nighttime BP reduction, which have been strongly linked to cardiovascular health risk. In the trial, patients with a body mass index (BMI) greater than 30, or obese patients, who are at an elevated risk of cardiorenal diseases, exhibited a 12.3 or 16.7 mmHg placebo-adjusted reduction in systolic BP with a 100 mg QD or 50 mg QD dose, respectively. Treatment-emergent SAEs were reported in three subjects, one of which was deemed to be possibly related to lorundrostat in a subject with worsening of preexisting hyponatremia, which reversed after discontinuation. The two active, once-daily doses saw modest increases in potassium levels across the cohorts of 0.25 mmol/L with the 50 mg QD and 0.29 mmol/L with the 100 mg QD dose. Six subjects experienced transient elevated serum potassium greater than 6.0 mmol/L, none of which were considered an SAE, and all rapidly resolved after discontinuation or dose adjustment, which is consistent with the half-life of lorundrostat. One of the events was assessed as erroneous due to sample misprocessing. As anticipated, and in a manner similar to ACE inhibitors and ARBs, the BP lowering effect of lorundrostat led to a beneficial, reversible dose-dependent reduction in estimated glomerular filtration rate (eGFR), a measure of kidney function. Finally, the selectivity of lorundrostat for aldosterone inhibition was confirmed as cortisol levels were not observed to be inhibited across the range of doses.

The trial was conducted in two parts. In Part 1, subjects were initially pre-screened for a period of up to two weeks with a requirement for their systolic/diastolic BP to be over 130/80 mmHg with the use of two or more background medications indicated for hypertension such as ACE inhibitors, ARBs, calcium channel blockers, or diuretics. Subjects in Part 1 were also required to have low-renin hypertension defined as hypertension with a plasma renin activity level of 1.0 ng/mL/h or less. Subjects were excluded if they were taking an MRA or sodium channel blocker. Once subjects met the prescreening criteria, they were followed for two weeks during a blinded, placebo run-in period where their elevated BP was reconfirmed while compliant on background medication and placebo. If patients were compliant on their background medication and continued to have BP above 130/80 mmHg, subjects were randomized into five active cohorts and one placebo cohort. Subjects were dosed for eight weeks, then, upon withdrawal of study medication, followed for another four weeks.

GAITHERSBURG, Md., May 6, 2026 – Novavax, Inc. (Nasdaq: NVAX) today announced its financial results and operational highlights for the first quarter ended March 31, 2026.

"Novavax continued to make significant progress executing our corporate strategy which is comprised of partnering our technology, capital-efficient R&D innovation and a lean operating platform. In 2026, we signed a new, Matrix-M license with Pfizer for up to two vaccine candidates and secured four additional MTAs with a growing list of large pharmaceutical and innovative biotech companies," said John C. Jacobs, President and Chief Executive Officer, Novavax. "With these agreements in place, our partners have the right to evaluate Matrix in over 30 unique fields of experimentation targeting more than 50% of the projected over $100B market for infectious disease and oncology vaccines and immuno-therapeutics. In addition, Novavax continued to advance our own R&D efforts with the selection of our C. difficile vaccine candidate as our next potential asset to advance to the clinic as early as 2027."

First Quarter 2026 and Recent Highlights

Key Business Highlights

- In January 2026, Novavax entered into a license agreement with Pfizer for use of Novavax's Matrix-M adjuvant in vaccine development. Under the terms of the agreement, Pfizer was granted a non-exclusive license for Matrix-M use in two infectious disease areas.

- Novavax received an upfront payment of $30 million in the first quarter of 2026 and has the potential for up to $500 million in additional development and sales milestones. In addition, Novavax is eligible to receive high-mid-single digit percentage royalties on sales from products incorporating Matrix-M.
- Pfizer will be solely responsible for the development and commercialization of its products utilizing Matrix-M, and Novavax will be responsible for the supply of Matrix-M.
- This partnership has the potential to generate billions of dollars of revenue for Novavax over the life of the agreement.

- In 2026, Novavax continued to expand its Matrix-M partnering efforts with global pharmaceutical companies and innovative biopharma companies.
  - In April, Novavax signed a new material transfer agreement (MTA) with a top ten global pharmaceutical company who is also a global leader in oncology to explore Matrix-M in a broad array of oncology targets, as well as antibiotic resistant bacterial infections and other infectious diseases.
  - In April, Novavax signed a new MTA with an existing pharmaceutical partner for evaluation of Matrix-M in nine additional, identified disease areas.
  - In February, Novavax expanded an existing MTA with a major global pharmaceutical company to explore an additional field and signed a new MTA with an innovative oncology company.

- In total, Novavax now has MTA collaborations and/or license agreements with four of the top ten global pharmaceutical companies and a number of innovative biotech companies who, collectively, have the right to explore Matrix-M in over 30 unique fields of experimentation across both infectious diseases and oncology.
  - The goal of our MTA collaborations is to enable exploration of Matrix-M with the intent of entering into deeper partnership via formal license agreements, that in turn results in the advancement of partner's R&D clinical work toward the potential commercialization of innovative vaccines.
    - The broad utility of our technology has resulted in several companies exploring Matrix-M for application in the same high-potential markets, including infectious disease areas such as cytomegalovirus, Epstein-Barr Virus, pneumococcal, and RSV; and also includes overlap in oncology areas such as colorectal cancer, head and neck cancer and pancreatic cancer.
    - Existing partners under license and MTA agreements, have the right to address fields of experimentation that cover over 50% of the global market opportunity for infectious disease and oncology vaccines and immunotherapeutics, which is projected to grow to over $100 billion by the early 2030s.

- In April, Sanofi announced positive Phase 4 results from the COMPARE study, a head-to-head study showing that Nuvaxovid demonstrated statistically significant lower side effects compared to Moderna's mNEXSPIKE across all pre-specified endpoints, reinforcing Nuvaxovid's well-established and differentiated reactogenicity profile ahead of the fall season.

- Continued to progress Novavax R&D innovation in support of our growth strategy
  - Clostridioides difficile colitis (C. difficile) vaccine candidate prioritized as potential next asset to enter the clinic as early as 2027.
  - Preliminary preclinical data generated by Novavax on its varicella-zoster virus (shingles) and respiratory syncytial virus early-stage assets were positive and provide path forward for informing the Company's future antigen design and adjuvant work.
- Ongoing adjuvant research is intended to expand the utility of our technology by creating new adjuvants tailored to foster specific differentiated immune properties for certain diseases that may require unique immune responses.

- Novavax continued to progress its cost reduction program to create a more lean and agile organization.
  - Targeting full year Non-GAAP combined R&D and Selling, General and Administrative (SG&A) expenses of $325 million for full year 2026 and $225 million for full year 2027, each period at the midpoint of the guidance range.
  - Improving the 2028 target for full year Non-GAAP combined R&D and SG&A expenses to between $150 million and $200 million. This reflects an anticipated expense reduction of over $200 million and over 50% when compared to full year 2025.

First Quarter 2026 Financial Results

- Total revenue for the first quarter of 2026 was $140 million, a 79% decrease compared to $667 million in the same period in 2025. Higher Nuvaxovid™ product sales for the first quarter of 2025 were primarily due to $603 million of non-cash sales revenue recognized with the close-out of two Advance Purchase Agreements (APA). Licensing Royalty and Other revenue of $97 million in the first quarter of 2026 included $30 million related to the Pfizer Matrix-M agreement signed in January 2026.

- Cost of sales for the first quarter of 2026 was $31 million, compared to $14 million in the same period in 2025.

- Research and development (R&D) expenses for the first quarter of 2026 were $95 million, compared to $89 million in the same period in 2025. The higher R&D costs were primarily associated with COVID-19 postmarketing commitment studies and annual strain change activities. R&D expenses reimbursed by partners in the first quarter of 2026 were $28 million. Non-GAAP R&D expenses, net of partner reimbursement, were $68 million in the first quarter of 2026, a 13% decrease when compared to $78 million in the same period in 2025. The lower Non-GAAP R&D expenses were driven by the ongoing Novavax cost reduction program as it streamlines operations to make targeted R&D investments.

- Selling, General and Administrative (SG&A) expenses for the first quarter of 2026 were $29 million, a 40% decrease compared to $48 million for the same period in 2025. The decrease was primarily due to the transition of lead commercial activities to Sanofi and the elimination of commercial infrastructure plus the ongoing general administrative cost reduction program.

- Net Loss for the first quarter of 2026 was $9 million, compared to net income of $519 million in the same period in 2025. First quarter of 2025 net income benefited from $603 million of non-cash sales related to the close-out of two APA agreements.

- Cash, cash equivalents, marketable securities and restricted cash (Cash) were $795 million as of March 31, 2026, compared to $751 million as of December 31, 2025. In February 2026, Novavax announced a $330 million credit facility with MidCap Financial, including an initial capital draw of $50 million. The credit facility was put in place to further strengthen Novavax's balance sheet and provide access to non-dilutive capital as Novavax advances its growth strategy.

Part I

Item 1. Business

All references to "the Company," "we," "our" and "us" in this Annual Report refer to QuidelOrtho Corporation ("QuidelOrtho") and its subsidiaries. References to "fiscal year ended 2024," "fiscal year ended 2023" and "fiscal year ended 2022" in this Annual Report refer to the Company's fiscal years ended December 29, 2024, December 31, 2023 and January 1, 2023, respectively. Refer to the Summary of Abbreviated Terms at the end of this Annual Report for definitions of terms used throughout this Annual Report.

Overview

Our vision is to advance diagnostics to power a healthier future. With our expertise in immunoassay and molecular testing, clinical chemistry and transfusion medicine, we aim to support clarity for clinicians and patients to help create better health outcomes. Our global infrastructure and commercial reach support our customers across more than 130 countries and territories with quality diagnostics, a broad test portfolio and market-leading service. We operate globally with manufacturing facilities in the U.S. and U.K. and with sales centers, administrative offices and warehouses located throughout the world.

We currently sell our products directly to end users through a direct sales force and through a network of distributors, for professional use in physician offices, hospitals, clinical laboratories, reference laboratories, urgent care clinics, leading universities, retail clinics, pharmacies, wellness screening centers, other POC settings, blood banks and donor centers, as well as for individual, non-professional, OTC use.

On May 27, 2022, pursuant to the BCA, Quidel and Ortho consummated the Combinations and each of Quidel and Ortho became a wholly owned subsidiary of QuidelOrtho. For additional information about the Combinations, refer to Part II, Item 8, "Financial Statements and Supplementary Data—Note 2. Business Combination."

We manage our business geographically to better align with the market dynamics of the specific geographic regions in which we operate. Effective January 1, 2024, Japan and Asia Pacific operating segments were combined into one operating segment: JPAC. North America, EMEA and China are the Company's reportable segments; Latin America and JPAC are immaterial operating segments that are not considered reportable segments and are included in "Other." We generate our revenue in the following business units: Labs, Transfusion Medicine (Immunohematology and Donor Screening product categories), Point of Care and Molecular Diagnostics. We also generate non-core revenue, including through our contract manufacturing business and certain business collaborations. In February 2024, we initiated a plan to transition out of our U.S. donor screening portfolio through the wind-down of the VIP platform and microplate assays, which are only sold in the U.S., and have a lower growth and margin profile. Information concerning revenues attributable to our reportable segments and business units is set forth in Part II, Item 8, "Financial Statements and Supplementary Data —Note 4. Revenue" and "—Note 5. Segment and Geographic Information."

Digital Solutions and Innovation

We are building our enterprise digital product strategy, platform and portfolio, which we believe help improve our customers' clinical and operational outcomes. Our focus is on enabling our customers to deliver smart, connected care across a variety of clinical environments. We strive to connect our instruments to healthcare providers, labs and policymakers through proprietary and third-party solutions, creating valuable data assets. Our portfolio of workflow automation solutions, such as Ortho Connect, Ortho Plus and myVirena, help simplify the testing and instrument management process. We are also actively developing other products designed to help personalize and elevate individual test results, such as the QVue companion mobile application for our COVID-19 at-home tests, potentially resulting in specific clinical insights or actions.

Our Strategic Capabilities and Competitive Strengths

There is significant competition in the development and marketing of IVD products, and innovation, product development, regulatory clearance to market and commercial introduction of new IVD technologies can occur rapidly. We believe that some of the most significant competitive factors in the rapid diagnostic market include convenience, speed to result, specimen flexibility, product menu, clinical needs, price, reimbursement levels, product performance and customer service, as well as effective distribution, advertising, promotion and brand recognition. The competitive factors in the central laboratory market are also significant and include price, product performance, reimbursement, compatibility with routine specimen procurement methods, and manufacturing products in testing formats that meet the workflow demands of larger volume laboratories. There are several global companies with whom we compete, as well as regional and local companies focused on particular markets and/or technologies. Some of our principal competitors include, among others, Abbott Laboratories, Roche, Thermo Fisher Scientific, Danaher, Siemens Healthineers, Diasorin, Bio-Rad, Hologic, Qiagen, Becton-Dickinson, bioMérieux and Revitty. Some of these competitors have substantially greater financial, marketing and other resources than we have.

We believe we are well positioned to drive sustained and profitable growth through an ethos of customer-centric decision making and behavior, which informs everything we do from product development to commercial execution. This disciplined focus on serving customers has resulted in, and we believe will continue to create, a business model that can deliver profitable growth and stockholder returns.

The competitive strengths that serve as our foundation of success today and can drive future growth include three key aspects, all of which benefit from our talented people and loyal customers:

- Superior customer experience and brand loyalty. Over our more than 80 years supporting the IVD testing needs of our customers, we have developed deep and enduring relationships with our customers. Our service program allows us to retain and grow our customer base by providing an industry-leading customer experience driven by quality of service, innovation and access to a diverse product portfolio.
- Strong commercial footprint. We leverage our commercial team of more than 2,700 teammates in sales, service and marketing across more than 130 countries to facilitate successful delivery of innovative solutions to meet customer and patient needs across the healthcare continuum.
- POC Leadership. We are a recognized leader in POC diagnostics, providing rapid, accurate and reliable solutions that empower providers to make informed decisions at the moment of care. Our Sofia and Triage platforms are trusted across urgent care clinics, physician offices and other decentralized settings.

Business Strategy

We are driven to transform diagnostics into action for more people in more places. To achieve this, we serve a broad range of market segments across the healthcare continuum, from large centralized laboratories to physicians' offices and other decentralized settings. While these care settings have traditionally been less integrated, the healthcare landscape continues to become more integrated. This consolidation is bringing together labs, hospitals, physicians' offices and urgent care clinics into unified healthcare systems. This integration means that success in one care setting often creates opportunities in others within the same system.

Central to our strategy is a focus on economic profit and return on invested capital (ROIC) across all aspects of our business. We are committed to allocating resources and capital efficiently and seek to deliver sustainable returns above the cost of capital. By prioritizing opportunities that can maximize economic profit, we aim to create value for our stakeholders while maintaining a disciplined approach to growth.

In the near term, we are focusing on a set of strategic initiatives across our lines of business and geographies to improve the underlying business and deliver greater stockholder value.

Our near-term priorities include:

- capturing market share in high-value profit pools where we hold a strong competitive position;
- building a culture focused on driving sales growth, profitability, cash flow and returns for stockholders;
- aligning incentive structures with both customer and stockholder value creation; and
- developing and executing a comprehensive talent management strategy.

Longer term, we plan to continue to build and enhance our award-winning customer service, invest in platform capabilities and improve our assay menus. Recognizing the complexity and speed of innovation in these areas, we will explore partnerships where we find strategic and financial alignment. This approach allows us to mitigate risk, accelerate innovation and deliver solutions to market more efficiently.

Research and Development

We continue to focus our R&D efforts on the following areas:

- creation of new and improved products for use on our installed base, including new and improved assays and software;
- support of important life-cycle-management efforts to maintain our current on-market portfolio of products; and
- pursuit of collaboration with other companies for new and existing products and markets.

We balance our R&D efforts against our R&D team's capacity, development timelines and overall cost. Our R&D team is comprised of a balanced mix of experienced professionals with years of experience in the diagnostics industry and recently trained technologists, and together, they have know-how and technical capabilities in key areas, such as biomedical science, IT and engineering. Key strengths of our team include new assay format development, new instrument systems development and the complex integration of the two. In addition, in order to create new opportunities, manage costs and adapt to a rapidly changing industry, we are also exploring strategic partnerships as part of our R&D process.

R&D expenses were $218.7 million, $245.0 million and $187.9 million for fiscal years ended 2024, 2023 and 2022, respectively, which includes the impact of Ortho's operations from the date of the Combinations. We anticipate a continued appropriate investment of our financial resources to product and technology R&D for the foreseeable future, with increases and decreases as projects progress through the various development phases.

Sales, Marketing and Distribution

Our current business strategy is designed to serve the continuum of healthcare delivery needs globally, from POC clinicians located in doctor's office practices, to moderately complex POLs, and to highly complex hospitals, laboratories and blood and plasma centers. Within the inherent operational diversity of these various segments, we focus on differentiating ourselves and enhancing our market leadership by specializing in the diagnosis and monitoring of select disease states, conditions and wellness categories.

We manage our business geographically to better align with the market dynamics of the specific geographic regions in which we operate, with our reportable segments being North America, EMEA and China. Latin America and JPAC (Japan and Asia Pacific) are immaterial operating segments that are not considered reportable segments and are included in "Other." We generate our revenue in the following business units: Labs, Transfusion Medicine (Immunohematology and Donor Screening product categories), Point of Care and Molecular Diagnostics. We also generate non-core revenue, including through our contract manufacturing business and certain business collaborations.

Certain of our revenue is driven by a "razor/razor blade" business model. Through this model, we generally sell or place instruments under long-term contracts, which support the ongoing sale of our assays, reagents and consumables. Under this model, our customers are required to purchase the assays, reagents and consumables from us. These sales generate a high proportion of our recurring revenues.

Our sales team is comprised of highly skilled and experienced professionals. We sell products globally and market and distribute products worldwide in a variety of ways, including through a mix of direct, indirect and hybrid distribution strategies.

Response to Disciplinary Question #3:

Almatica Pharma, LLC, was under investigation by the State of Alaska Board of Pharmacy ("Alaska Board") with Case No. 2023-000527 and by Oregon Board of Pharmacy ("Oregon Board") with Case No. 2024-0071, due to Almatica' s alleged failure to disclose to both the Alaska Board and Oregon Board previous disciplinary actions imposed by the Alabama Board of Pharmacy. On November 16, 2023, the Alaska Board of Pharmacy ordered an Imposition of Civil Fine on Almatica which resolved the case. On May 8, 2024, The Oregon Board entered a Consent Order with Almatica resolving that case. Copies of those orders are attached hereto.

IMPOSITION OF CIVIL FINE

Case # 2023-000527

I, Andrea Sweet, as an agent for Almatica Pharma LLC, admit and agree the Alaska Board of Pharmacy (Board) has jurisdiction over the subject matter of Out-of-State Wholesale Drug Distributor License No. 211089, and over this Imposition of Civil Fine.

1. April 25, 2023, we submitted an initial Out-of-State Wholesale Drug Distributor pharmacy license application and provided a "no" response to all Professional Fitness Questions.
2. On June 13, 2023, Investigations determined the Almatica Pharma LLC failed to properly disclose two Alabama Board of Pharmacy actions issued in 2015 and 2022.
3. On June 27, 2023, we submitted a letter of explanation to the Division indicating we inadvertently failed to disclose two disciplinary actions from the Alabama Board of Pharmacy issued in 2015 and 2022.
4. This is a violation of 12 AAC 52.920(a)(13), AS 08.80.261(a)(1), 12 AAC 52.991(a), 12 AAC 52.991(b), and AS 08.80.261(a)(6).

We admit that as a result of these facts, grounds exist for possible denial of licensure or other disciplinary sanctions of my license pursuant to AS 08.01.075, 12 AAC 52.920(a)(13), AS 08.80.261(a)(1), 12 AAC 52.991(a), 12 AAC 52.991(b), and AS 08.80.261(a)(6). We are agreeing to this Imposition of a Civil Fine of five hundred dollars ($500) in cash, certified check, or money order payable to the "State of Alaska" within ninety (90) days after this Imposition of Civil Fine is accepted by the Board.

We have the right to consult with an attorney, and a right to an administrative hearing on the facts in this case. We understand and agree by voluntarily signing this Imposition of Civil Fine, we are waiving our rights to counsel and to a hearing on this matter.

Re: In-State North Carolina Registration Requirements

To Whom It May Concern:

The North Carolina Department of Agriculture, Food and Drug Protections Division is responsible for the registration and licensing of all firms engaged in the manufacturing or wholesale distribution of human prescription drugs within the state of North Carolina. Our present interpretation of our General Statutes does not require a license for the distribution of medical devices, unless that device contains a prescription drug and does not have the 510K FDA clearance. bioMérieux, Inc. is a wholesale distributor for products defined by the FDA as medical devices and maintains establishment registration FEI# 3002769706 with the FDA. It is my understanding that bioMérieux, Inc. handles devices that would not be considered human prescription drugs, and by the classification as a medical device, bioMérieux, Inc. is not required to maintain a license as a Wholesale Prescription Drug Manufacturer as required by NCGS Article 12 (Food, Drugs, and Cosmetics) §106-140.1(a) or as a Wholesale Prescription Drug Distributor as required by NCGS Article 12A (Wholesale Prescription Drug Distributors) §106-145.3 (a).

Should you have any further questions or require assistance with information please don't hesitate to contact us.

Sincerely,

Jeremy Evans, PharmD

consumer/patient. [§ 338.330(4)]. A "drug-related medical device" refers to devices that contain a legend drug as part of the device. [20 CSR 2220-5.030(9)]. Legend items include one of the following statements on their label:

- "Rx only"
- "Caution: Federal (U.S.A.) law prohibits dispensing without a prescription."
- "Caution: Federal (U.S.A.) law restricts this drug to use by or on the order of a licensed veterinarian."
- "Caution: Federal (U.S.A.) law restricts this device to sale by or on the order of a physician".

Examples of drug-related devices may include, but are not limited to, pre-filled heparin/saline syringes, convenience kits containing a legend drug, and sterile water/saline for irrigation or inhalation.

A Missouri drug distributor license is not required for facilities distributing legend devices that do not contain a legend drug as part of the device. Additionally, a license is not required if devices are only being distributed to the ultimate consumer/patient. [§ 338.330(4)]. Note: The ultimate consumer does not include practitioner offices (physician, dentist, veterinarian, etc.), hospitals, nursing home facilities, ambulance/fire districts, home medical equipment providers, other distributors, or intra-company transfers.

Over-The-Counter Devices: Distribution of over-the counter devices such as blood glucose testing supplies and insulin syringes/needles does not require a distributor license. However, a Missouri pharmacy license is required if the facility chooses to dispense over-the-counter products to patients as a prescription (applicable pharmacy law would apply).

Device Distributor Exemptions: A drug distributor licensure exemption exists for out-of-state intra-company transfers of drug-related devices. Specifically, § 338.335.2 provides the following exemption:

2. A wholesale drug distributor distributing drug-related devices in Missouri is not required to obtain a license from the board for out-of-state distribution sites owned by the wholesale drug distributor if:

(1) The wholesale drug distributor has one or more distribution sites located in Missouri, and all such in-state distribution sites receiving shipments of drug-related devices are licensed by the board as a distributor;

(2) The wholesale drug distributor's out-of-state distribution sites shipping to the in-state distribution site are in compliance with their respective state's licensing laws;

(3) The wholesale drug distributor's out-of-state distribution sites that deliver drug-related devices regulated by the board into Missouri for patient use deliver such devices only to the licensed wholesale drug distributor's in-state distribution site.

1.10 MEDICAL GAS DISTRIBUTORS. Pursuant to 20 CSR 2220-5.070, a Missouri drug distributor license is required for any person or entity engaged in the distribution of medical gas pursuant to a medical gas order to medical gas suppliers or any other entity authorized to use, administer or distribute medical gasses. For purposes of drug distributor licensing, "medical gases" are defined as compressed and liquid gases that a distributor or manufacturer has labeled for medical use in compliance with federal law. [20 CSR 2220-5.070(2)].

A Missouri drug distributor license is not required if medical gases are being dispensed solely to individual consumers (i.e.- the patient). The ultimate consumer does not include practitioner offices (physician, dentist, veterinarian, etc.), hospitals, nursing home facilities, ambulance/fire districts, other distributors, or intra-company transfers.

Medical gas distributors are required to comply with all Missouri drug distributor requirements, including, all security, drug storage, recordkeeping and facility requirements. However, medical gas distributors engaged in storing, transferring or transfilling medical gases other than nitrous oxide are exempt from, and do not have to comply with, the following distributor requirements:

- Thermostatically maintaining distributor facilities and taking/recording daily temperature logs;
- Maintaining temperature and humidity recording equipment;
- Ensuring drug products are raised above floor level and placed on a pallet;
- Ensuring the facility's outside premises are well-lit;
- Separating medical gases labeled for veterinary use from medical gases distributed for human use;
- Maintaining an alarm system to detect entry after hours, and
- Maintaining refrigeration/freezer units. [20 CSR 2220-5.070(3)].

Medical gas distributors that store, transfer or transfill nitrous oxide are exempt from, and do not have to comply with, the following requirements:

- Thermostatically maintaining distributor facilities and taking/recording daily temperature logs;
- Maintaining temperature and humidity recording equipment;
- Ensuring drug products are raised above floor level and placed on a pallet;
- Separating medical gases labeled for veterinary use from medical gases distributed for human use, and;
- Maintaining refrigeration/freezer units. [20 CSR 2220-5.070(3)].

In addition to Missouri's requirements, entities engaged in manufacturing/transfilling medical gases must be registered with the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) as a medical gas manufacturer and comply with all federal drug listing and current good manufacturing practice requirements. [20 CSR 2220-5.070(4)]. Note: Medical gas cylinders and containers must bear a complete, intact, and legible drug label that includes the lot number.

1.11 Pharmacy Off-Site Storage Facilities. 20 CSR 2220-2.010(1)(J) of the Board's pharmacy rules allows a pharmacy to store medication at an offsite facility that is used to distribute drugs for the pharmacy's operations. A Missouri drug distributor license is not required if the off-site storage facility is only used to store or distribute drugs for/to the applicable pharmacy. A Missouri drug distributor license is required if the offsite storage facility will be used to store/distribute medication for multiple pharmacies, regardless of ownership. [20 CSR 2220-2.010(1)(J)]

Re: Licensure Requirements- Manufacturers/Virtual Manufacturers Draft saved at 1:22 PM

Subject: RE: Licensure Requirements- Manufacturers/Virtual Manufacturers

[External]

Good Afternoon,

I was requested to respond to your question. Please refer to Business and Professions Code section 4160(h) which states a drug manufacturer premises licensed by the Food and Drug Administration or licensed pursuant to Section 11615 of the Health and Safety Code that only distributes dangerous drugs and dangerous devices of it own manufacture is exempt from this section and section 4161.

Therefore, if you are a virtual manufacturer/manufacturer licensure as a wholesaler or nonresident wholesaler with the California State Board of Pharmacy is not required if you only distribute dangerous drugs and dangerous devices that [redacted] as the NDA or manufactures.

However, if XXXX also distributes dangerous or dangerous devices which they are not listed with the FDA or the California Dept of Public Health, State Food and Drug Branch (CDPH, SFDB), as the manufacturer or does not hold the NDA, then a wholesaler license (if located in CA) or nonresident wholesaler license (outside of CA and within the United States or a territory of the U.S.) is required

I hope this answers your question. Otherwise, my contact information is below if you have any additional questions.

Sincerely,

Janice Dang, Pharm.D.

RE: Designated Representative additional experience

To whom it may concern:

This letter is intended to supplement my current resume by outlining additional responsibilities and experience not previously captured. It is meant to provide further clarity on the breadth of my involvement in operational, financial, and compliance-related activities within Eisai Inc.

In my role as Vice President and Chief Financial Officer at Eisai Inc., I am directly involved in activities related to the distribution of pharmaceutical products. This includes oversight of key operational processes such as shipping, inventory management, and order fulfillment, ensuring they are executed in a controlled, compliant, and efficient manner. In this capacity, I regularly interface with cross-functional teams to maintain alignment with company standards and regulatory expectations.

My team serves as the primary point of reference for all aspects of inventory and cost accounting, providing financial oversight, analysis, and governance across the end-to-end product lifecycle. This includes monitoring inventory valuation, ensuring accurate cost recognition, and supporting financial reporting. Additionally, the team oversees customer service operations related to order processing, issue resolution, and the handling of product returns, ensuring that these activities are managed in accordance with internal policies and quality standards.

Through this structure, I maintain visibility into both the operational and financial dimensions of product distribution, enabling effective risk management, internal control, and decision support.

Maria,

See below and attached.

1. 25k Surety Bond: We have the Surety Bond, but it requires the NV license #. And you require the Surety Bond to process our license application and provide me with a license #... I need some direction on how to proceed with this, please advise.
2. Home State License: We do not require a home state pharmacy board license in MN to conduct business. Attached is a document from our Secretary of State showing that Spineology is in good standing
3. I confirm that no individual owner owns more than 10% of Spineology

Thank you and I look forward to your response.

My best,
